WORMS IN SOIL.

I am sending a worm which does a lot of damage to the roots of my lettuce and cucumbers. Can formaldehyde be used to destroy these worms without injury to the plants? If so, kindly state how to use it. F. J. G.—Wis.

I could not find any worms in the package.

To destroy soil pests, formaldehyde (a forty per cent solution of formaldehyde gas in water) may be used. This is a good soil disinfectant and also kills pests in the soil. It should preferably be applied before planting a crop, at the rate of one part of formaldehyde to fifteen gallons of water. This strength will not harm the plants, but keep it off the foliage as much as possible.

Carbon bisulphide may also be used on soil pests. Bore holes in the beds, 12x15 inches apart, with a pointed stick. The holes should be three inches deep. In each hole pour a teaspoonful of the carbon bisulphide and at once close up the hole. The fumes will kill any pests in the soil. Do not use any naked lights when using this remedy, as it is of an inflammable nature. C. W.

LEAF MINERS ON FOLIAGE.

We are sending under separate cover a sample of leaves eaten by worms hatched from larvæ laid by a small miller. We cannot get rid of these with nicotine spraying or by fumigating. Can you tell us what these pests are and how to destroy them?
V. A. B.—Mich.

If you will use one of the standard nicotine extracts, adding a little soap to whichever you try to make it adhesive, you should kill all of these leaf miners. Spray so as to dampen both sides of the leaves. C. W.

EXCLUSIVE CONSERVATORY AND PRIVATE GREENHOUSE WORK

—about the width now

Why any particular width of house? For years, you know, it has been a rule with most greenhouse manufacturers to make the width of the house to suit the even lengths of sash bars, and this rule was almost universally adopted by growers. Almost, but not quite, for there is a staunch bunch of forward-pushing, 8-cylinder growers who refuse to be bound to the chariot wheel of outworn usage and unreasoned custom. These growers have lifted their eyes from the treadmill of dead methods and, following the lead of the AGMCO, demand a real reason for the width of the house they build.

And on what are these reasons founded? You may want a certain width because it fits your land or suits your kind of plants. You may want a 29-foot house because your other houses are that width and you don't want to spoil your range. You may want two temperatures and you build two houses of a width that fits your purse. These are fair reasons and should be considered.

Now, be on your guard when discussing, or hearing discussed, greenhouse designing. You have often heard it said: "That's the house that just comes out with a 16-foot bar." If you ask for a 30-foot house, you quite frequently hear the greenhouse salesman (not an AGMCO salesman) say: "Well, that takes more than a 16-foot bar—it isn't economical."

You alert growers who are on your tiptoes for everything that will promote your best interests know that this is hit-or-miss designing. What matters 2 feet of sash bar if your house is inconvenient? On a house 200 feet long, $1\frac{1}{2}$ feet of waste on each bar will cost you about $12.00. Now, how much inconvenience would you be willing to put up with for fifteen years, say, at 80 cents per year or $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents per week? Sounds rather silly, doesn't it? Yet, many greenhouse manufacturers recommend this boomerang economy and there are only too many growers who practice it. Now these figures show the actual waste there is on a 30-foot house as compared to a 29-foot house. If you need a 30-foot house and your reason for it is a good one, you should have it.

The AGMCO—a company that long ago lifted its nose from the grindstone of rust-covered methods—that looked ahead with piercing eyes and an open mind into the future—has figured out a lot of little things like this and that's why its houses are designed differently from all others. Its widths are different; its details are different; and these differences are based on solid facts.

Consider a moment. You have a certain amount of money to spend. You have, or should have, definite reasons for building. You are not building for today merely, but for years to come and you cannot afford to cripple your actions in the future by short-sightedness in the "now." Right? Then consult the AGMCO before you decide on the design and, above all, don't pick your width by flipping a coin, or because you saw it in a catalogue.

Remember—

There should always be a reason for the width. An AGMCO salesman can tell you just how every house we build covers a scientific, efficient plant factory that produces more per dollar invested than any other greenhouse.

You want to talk with this salesman, of course.

But when?

Standard 69-foot 6-inch House

(This measurement is to extreme outside of posts.)
Inside measurement is 68 feet 9 inches.

THIS is the width that A. S. Burns, of Spring Valley, N. Y., swears by. In 1916, he built two such houses, each 400 feet long. It gives a 37-foot 1-inch center space, and 16-foot 2½-inch side between columns and posts.

A house of this width usually has twelve benches, each 4 feet wide. The height to ridge, 24 feet 6 inches. The sides, 7 feet.

We have a large stock of materials that we bought at pre-war prices and our selling prices are based on the cost of these materials.

When you are ready to talk business, say when and where and we will be there.

RUTH BAUR

A seedling of 1914. We have grown this beautiful variety in increased quantity each year, and it has always sold in preference to all other pink sorts. Its beautiful light pure pink color lends itself to so many uses that it has become a great favorite with the storemen. It is in the Gloriosa-Winsor color class, but is more beautiful than either of these. COME AND SEE IT. Orders already placed indicate a large sale for next season's delivery.

A customer writes:

"We enclose order for bulbs for next season for Paper Whites, Von Sion, Emperor, Golden Spur, Tulips and Hyacinths. Your bulbs received last year were fine. Why import direct? You supplied me when Hollanders failed. Order calls for 150,000 bulbs."

AMERICAN BULB COMPANY,
172 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—Just a word about the Freesia bulbs you sold me last year. I have grown Freesia bulbs for the past twenty years, but I have never before cut so great a percentage in December. I cut fully 50% of my crop for the Christmas Holidays. They were fine and sold well at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange in Detroit.

Your Dutch Bulbs are also fine.

Yours truly,
ROBERT KLAGGE, Mt. Clemens, Mich.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

THE STRANGE TALE OF $SO_2 + H_2O = H_2SO_3$

Here's how smoke and fog work to the injury of plants in greenhouses, setting up a chemical reaction which forms an acid that burns the leaves. Read this article and it probably will make clear to you certain things which have been a mystery and the cause of money loss.

By WILLIAM J. O'CARROLL
Chief Gardener,
University of Chicago Botanical Gardens.

YOU all know what it does to your stock to burn sulphur in the greenhouses, especially if the foliage or even the atmosphere is damp at the time—it makes the leaves look as though they had been exposed to a blast of air that was scorching hot. It is because the blue flame of the sulphur is liberating a suffocating gas, sulphur dioxide.

A good many growers have for years noted a similar, if milder, injury to their stock at times when they had not been using sulphur or any other fungicide and for which they were unable to account. In the last year or so the reports of such damage have become more numerous, with the result that an investigation has determined that the increase noted is the direct result of the war with Germany, the strange tale of $SO_2 + H_2O = H_2SO_3$. Read on if you would know.

Fundamental Facts.

Comparing the known facts in the numerous cases of plant injury under study, it was found that all presented certain aspects in common. First, they showed the kind of injury with which most gardeners are familiar as arising from the presence of sulphur in the air, either outdoors or under glass; second, they all were reported from localities adjacent to industrial centers, never from the open country; third, the number of cases of injury increased greatly within the last year, after war work began to run the factories night and day; fourth, the damage almost always was noted on days following densely foggy mornings, such as those of February 22 and March 6 and 8 at Chicago, when the air was heavy and "low."

These facts led unmistakably to the conclusion that there was a connection between the smoke and the injury of the plants and a little further investigation showed that, while the damage had been noted for years in such communities as Chicago and Pittsburgh, where smoke is dense, this particular injury to stock in greenhouses had been observed for the first time this year in localities which heretofore had used anthracite principally, but which, because of war conditions, had been forced to resort to bituminous coal for this season.

Mustard Gas.

So it was apparent that the loss perplexing growers could be traced directly to the soft coal smoke. The plants were gassed. But it was "mustard" gas, for it burned.

Growers have noted that sulphur gas, always injurious to plants, is at its worst when plants or atmosphere are moist; then the burning is most severe. Also it was noted that on the foggy mornings, when the clouds hung low, the burning of foliage was greatest where the hose was used.

It worked out this way: Bituminous coal contains a considerable percentage of sulphur. The burning of thousands upon thousands of tons of sulphurous coal liberated great quantities of sulphur dioxide. The fog and clouds held this gas close to earth, suspended in the air, instead of its floating away, as it would do in a bright, clear day. When sulphur dioxide is combined with water it forms sulphurous acid, which will burn the leaves of plants. This is the chemical equation: $SO_2+H_2O=H_2SO_3$.

In certain cases material damage has been caused in this manner, to the complete mystification of the grower, who could see no cause for the perfectly apparent burning of his plants going on under his very eyes. Large numbers of chrysanthemums were ruined by this cause in the autumn of 1917 and the growers in most cases said they had "damped off."

Cineraria Gassed by Sulphur Dioxide on a Smoky Morning.

Preventive Measures.

Monocotyledonous plants are most susceptible to this gas and acid injury and begonias, cinerarias, primulas, stevias, ferns, orchids and tomatoes are among those likely to show first the effects. Plants with a large number of stomates are among those most likely to be injured. Conversely, those species having few stomates will sustain the conditions described with the minimum damage.

The man in charge of a greenhouse should be alert to prevailing conditions. He should not admit gas unnecessarily by opening ventilators or otherwise, bearing in mind that the gas will do more damage than the lack of air.

Here are three points I have worked out and which also have been tested on a large scale, and successfully, by August Koch, in charge of the famous conservatories in Garfield park, Chicago:

First, reduce the temperature of the houses 10 degrees or more; second, keep all ventilators closed, as well as other openings; third, absolutely allow no watering, as the drier the air and foliage can be kept when the air is filled with smoke the less the damage will be. These precautions should be adhered to until the atmosphere, not only in the greenhouse but outside, becomes free from gases.

The same precaution should be observed in fumigating plant houses or spraying with insecticides; dark weather should be chosen and the houses kept dry.

PLANTING HARDY ROSES.

Do It Early.

We have had a remarkably open winter and there is no frost or ice remaining the second week in March, while plowing and seed sowing operations are being carried out a full month ahead of last year. Perhaps crops may not mature any earlier, but it is a distinct help to have the ground open so early, as it greatly relieves the spring pressure.

Planting of hardy roses is better if done as soon as possible, while the ground is cool and before the soil dries out too much. Orders for this kind of stock, if not yet given, should be placed without delay. For the warmer states own-root roses may answer tolerably well, but for the cooler sections, where flowers of superior quality are wanted, you cannot afford to plant anything but grafted or budded roses, as the latter possess greater vigor, are longer lived, and will produce far more flowers and finer quality flowers.

The Popular Types.

The most popular types of roses are the hybrid teas, hybrid perpetuals, polyanthas and ramblers. The ideal soil for roses is the top soil from an old pasture. Well rotted cow manure added to and well mixed with this will produce splendid roses. They will, however, grow and flower well in any good soil provided the drainage is good.

In planting roses, be sure that the roots are moist before they are covered; also remove any broken portions with a sharp knife. Do not plant them too shallow. The bud or graft should be buried two and one-half to three inches. This permits the roots to come from both rose and graft, and insures greater vigor. Far too often we see roses with their grafts well above the surface soil. Such plants cannot long thrive, as they are too "wobbly." The roots must be moist and the soil cannot be too firmly tramped above them, but leave the surface soil loose.

Good Hybrid Teas.

We are often asked what are a few good varieties. Among hybrid teas a good dozen are: Laurent Carle, carmine; Lady Alice Stanley, rose; Mme. Caroline Testout, satiny rose; Ophelia, salmon-flesh; George Dickson, dark crimson; Mrs. George Shawyer, clear rose; Edward Mawley, rich crimson-maroon; Lady Ashtown, soft rose; Konigin Carola, satiny rose; Mme. Edouard Herriot, reddish-copper, better known as the Daily Mail rose, having won a prize of £1,000 offered for the best new rose at the International Flower Show, at London, in 1912; Florence Pemberton, white, suffused pink; Gorgeous, deep orange-yellow. There are a large number of other beautiful varieties, but the foregoing have proved eminently satisfactory where winters are severe and where plants of this type need to be well protected in winter.

The hybrid teas will succeed well in lighter soil than the more robust growing hybrid perpetuals. They can be depended upon to furnish flowers for practically six months outdoors.

Hybrid Perpetuals.

Coming to the hybrid perpetuals, we find these are not sold to the same extent as hybrid teas. They are less persistent bloomers, but have much greater vigor and are decidedly hardier. A few good sorts are: Baroness Rothschild, pale rose; Ulrich Brunner, cherry red; Mrs. R. G. Sharman-Crawford, rosy pink; Mrs. John Laing, soft pink, a grand rose and the freest bloomer of all the hybrid perpetuals; Paul Neyron, dark rose; Frau Karl Druschki, the finest pure white, sometimes called the white American Beauty; Magna Charta; Prince Camille de Rohan, velvety crimson; Mme. Gabriel Luizet, silvery pink; George Arends, delicate rose, sometimes called the pink Druschki. The most persistent blooming trio in the H. P. class consists of Mrs. John Laing, Mrs. Sharman-Crawford and Frau Karl Druschki. This type of rose requires hard pruning, the hybrid teas light cutting back.

The polyantha roses, sometimes called baby ramblers, are excellent for bedding purposes and are dependable bloomers. A few good sorts are: Cecile Brunner, salmon-pink, a delicious little rose; Clothilde Soupert, outer petals white, center rosy; Ellen Poulsen, deep pink; George Elger, coppery yellow; Erna Teschendorff, rich scarlet; Muller, bright rose; Mme. Norbert Levavasseur, crimson, the original baby rambler; Mrs. Cutbush, cerise-pink. All of these will be found most satisfactory bedders and they are equally good for forcing in pots. They need only moderate pruning.

Ramblers Gain in Favor.

The ramblers are constantly growing in favor and the list of desirable varieties is large. Some of the best are: Tausendschoen, soft pink; Lady Gay, light cerise-pink; Hiawatha, brilliant carmine; Silver Moon, pure white, large; Dorothy Perkins, soft pink, still one of the best; Dr. W. Van Fleet, flesh-pink; American Pillar, clear pink; Mrs. M. H. Walsh, pure white; Aviateur Bleriot, saffron-yellow; Farquhar, clear pink. I have not included Crimson Rambler, practically the pioneer among hardy climbers, as it has so many undesirable qualities.

In the warmer states there are many other beautiful roses which prove satisfactory, among which William Allen Richardson, Marechal Niel, Climbing American Beauty, Climbing Caroline Testout, Lamarque and Gloire de Dijon are to be recommended. The last named is a grand sort and proves hardy as far north as Boston and Bar Harbor, Me.

Cut newly planted ramblers down close to the ground. This will permit them to send up strong canes, which will not be produced unless severe cutting back is practiced. Ramblers after flowering should be pruned, and the more weak and old flowering wood is removed, the finer will be the trusses produced the following season.

Other Good Hardy Roses.

A few other hardy roses of merit, apart from the four groups already mentioned, are: Among rugosas, Conrad Ferdinand Meyer, silvery rose, and Blanc Double de Coubert, double pure white; of the new Pernetianas, Rayon d'Or, golden yellow, and Beaute de Lyon, coral-red; among the tea and noisette class, Maman Cochet, light pink, and White Maman Cochet, two fine bedders, and Harry Kirk, sulphur-yellow; Irish Fireflame, orange splashed crimson, and Irish Elegance, orange scarlet, two excellent singles; Blanche Moreau, pure white, and Princess Adelaide, silvery rose, two beautiful moss roses; Mme. Plantier, of the Bourbon class, a grand, vigorous and hardy pure white; Hermosa, one of the China roses, grand for mass effects, pale pink in color; the hybrid sweet briers, Wichuraiana and its hybrids, Persian Yellow, Austrian Copper multiflora and many beautiful species, such as spinosissima, setigera, Hugonis, etc., all have their admirers. There is a wonderful assortment of roses and as there should be a garden for every home, so should there be a rose for every garden, for the rose is easily the queen of flowers.

NEW FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

At a meeting held at Ridgway March 8, 1919, by some of the florists of McKean, Warren, Clearfield, Jefferson and Elk counties, the Wholesale and Retail Florists' Association of Western Pennsylvania was organized, with the following members:

C. E. Gunton, of the Red Rock Rosery, Bradford, president; George Crissman, of the Crissman Greenhouse Co., Punxsutawney, secretary and treasurer; William Graham, of Bradford; Oscar Magnuson, of the Kane Greenhouses, Kane; H. W. Girton, of Ridgway; William G.

Detroit Florists at a Dinner Given for Them by the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

Jones, of Dubois; Goss & Goss, of Falls Creek, Pa.; C. W. Espy & Son, of Brookville, and V. E. Carr, of the East End Greenhouses, Punxsutawney.

WE MUST BUY MORE BONDS.

But Will Call Them Notes.

The next Liberty loan drive will begin the day after Easter, a postponement for which the florists' trade will be appreciative. This drive will find the trade much better circumstanced to buy than was the case last fall and the industry no doubt will hold up its end with other lines of business.

Secretary Glass' announcement is as follows:

"The Victory loan campaign will open Monday, April 21, and will close on Saturday, May 10.

"The Congress has passed the Victory Liberty Loan Act, which was approved March 3, 1919, under which the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to issue notes of the United States to the extent of not over $7,000,000,000 upon such terms and conditions and at such rate or rates of interest as he may prescribe. It is provided in this act that these notes shall be payable at such time or times, not less than one year or more than five years from the date of issue, as may be prescribed by the secretary.

Short-Term Notes Favored.

"After studying financial conditions in all parts of the country, I have determined that the interests of the United States will best be served at this time by the issuance of short-term notes rather than of longer-term bonds which would have to bear the limited rate of interest of four and one-quarter per cent.

"The Victory Liberty loan will therefore take the form of notes of the United States maturing in not over five years from the date of issue. These notes will be, as were the Liberty loan bonds, the direct promise to pay of the United States, will be issued both in registered and coupon form, and the coupon notes will be in final form and will have attached the interest coupons covering the entire life of the notes. I am hopeful that the notes in final engraved form will be ready for delivery by the opening of the campaign, April 21.

"I am led to adopt the plan of issuing short term notes rather than long term bonds, largely because of the fact that I believe that a short-term issue will maintain a price at about par after the campaign is concluded far more readily than would a longer-term issue.

"I have not yet reached a conclusion as to the rate of interest and exemptions from taxation which these notes will bear, because this decision must be based on existing conditions immediately prior to the opening of the campaign.

Campaign Planned.

"I take this opportunity to repeat what I have already stated, that it is the intention of the Treasury Department to carry on the same kind of intensive campaign for distribution as heretofore."

LILIES FOR OUTDOOR CULTURE.

We have a number of acres of good ground to devote to the growing of flowers for the wholesale trade and expect to plant several good varieties of asters, gladioli, snapdragons, tuberoses and sweet peas. We would like to start something in the lily line, but are at a loss to know which is the best kind to grow from the standpoint of easy growing, shipping and the price to be had. Any suggestions will be gladly received. In your opinion, would some other flower be more profitable? N. L. G.—O.

The most satisfactory hardy lilies for you to grow would be L. candidum, the hardy, pure white garden lily, and L. speciosum melpomene and L. speciosum album, but it is well to state that lily culture is an uncertain proposition and I would experiment with these on a small scale.

Among other flowers you might try are Shasta daisies, hardy delphiniums, Gypsophila paniculata, especially the double form; peonies, Stokesia cyanea, Pyrethrum roseum, kniphofias, Physostegia virginiana, Spanish iris, lily of the valley, aquilegias and Achillea Ptarmica The Pearl. In the way of other annuals I would suggest giving a trial to hunnemannia, or Mexican poppy; Gypsophila elegans, such everlastings as helichrysum, gomphrena and acroclinium; Cosmos Lady Lenox, Centaurea Cyanus and C. moschata; Giant Perfection candytuft and scabiosa. Also give a trial to dahlias. C. W.

NEW INCORPORATIONS.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A license to incorporate has been issued to the Buffalo Nicotine Co., to manufacture chemicals, disinfectants, nicotine and tobacco extracts; capital, $50,000. Incorporators: T. G. Offers, P. Ernst, R. J. Hyatt, Buffalo.

Verona, N. Y.—The Secretary of State at Albany has authorized the incorporation of the Goff Garden Co., of Verona, to engage in the realty and general farming and garden business; capital, $350,000. Incorporators: C. A., C. E. and J. B. Goff, Sherrill.

DAYLIGHT SAVING SOON.

To make effective the daylight saving law Director General Hines, of the U. S. Railroad Administration, has instructed railroads to turn their clocks ahead one hour at 2 a. m. Sunday, March 30. Trains will run on the new schedule thereafter, but on the date of change will be held only at terminals. While on the road they will not stop to make up the difference in time. Clocks will be ordered back an hour at 2 a. m. on the last Sunday in October.

Galesburg, Ill.—I. L. Pillsbury, who is opening a new store in the Arcade building, has ordered a complete outfit of built-to-order fixtures of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. Walter Pillsbury, just home from war, is to be in charge.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

CYCLAMENS.

The little cyclamens potted a few weeks ago are now starting to grow in real earnest and will soon need a shift to larger pots. The temperature for these should be kept about 55 degrees at night and a light shade is necessary to break the direct rays of the sun. Avoid having this at all heavy, as it makes the foliage come drawn and soft. Spray over once or twice a day when the weather is clear and even at this young stage I think it good policy to use a nicotine spray once in ten days. This will help to keep aphis and thrips in check and will also, I believe, render the plants far less liable to attacks of mite. Be careful to use a light compost at these early pottings; one containing at least one-half flaky leaf-mold with some loam and sand added is ideal.

HOME-GROWN ASPIDISTRAS.

Of all the many foliage plants cultivated in greenhouses, there are none which equal aspidistras as house plants. The amount of neglect this plant will stand with seeming impunity would kill the majority of plants. No matter whether they are stood in corridors, hallways or living rooms, and whether the rooms are cool, hot or drafty, the plants will not resent it and it is no wonder that such plants are in demand and that there never is any great surplus of them.

The bulk of aspidistras have come, in the past, from Belgium. If Quarantine No. 37 becomes law, we shall miss this source of supply a great deal and shall need to divide and grow on our own plants at home. This is a good time to do any needed dividing, using fibrous loam with one-fourth old, well decayed manure with some sharp sand added. Keep the plants in a shaded house, where they can be syringed daily, and they will soon become established.

The probabilities are that the price of aspidistra leaves will soon be much higher and anyone possessing a good stock will find them good property.

COSMOS FOR FALL.

Cosmos is a most useful fall flower. In the warmer states, where early killing frosts do not occur, it will bloom freely outdoors. In the colder states it will do this in some years, but cannot be depended upon, and it is necessary either to lift the plants and flower them in a cool house, or, better still, grow them in large pots or tubs, so that the plants can be placed beyond the reach of frost.

Good success may be had by sowing seed in May, potting along, and later placing the plants in pots or tubs, giving the plants one or two pinchings to keep them bushy. By the way, few people realize what a handsome specimen plant a well-grown cosmos will make, especially that fine variety, Lady Lenox. There is an early race of cosmos that will bloom about all summer. The larger and later blooming type is of more value commercially, coming in, as it does, before the mums are in heavy crop.

CALADIUMS FOR SUMMER.

Fancy caladiums are excellent for use during the hot months, when flowering plants are scarce. The tubers, which have been resting for several months, should now be shaken out and started up. Place them in flats or pans of sand, and water but little until they start into growth, when they can be potted in a light but fairly rich compost, and grown in a warm, moist house, where only a moderate shade is given. Heavy shade will prevent the leaves showing their beautiful colorings.

CARING FOR ACHIMENES.

The corms of achimenes can be started now in flats of light, sandy soil in a warm house. When they have made two inches of growth they can be potted at the rate of a dozen to a 6-inch pot, or twenty to an 8-inch pan. Light stakes will be needed to support the stems later.

Another way to grow achimenes is in wire or wooden baskets, dibbling the plants all over the baskets and suspending them in a warm house in moderate shade. As the plants start to flower remove them to a cooler house, where they will produce flowers with more substance. These baskets are excellent for use on piazzas or porches where they are protected from the direct rays of the sun and, if carefully watered, they will flower for a good many weeks.

INDOOR GLADIOLUS PLANTING.

The last indoor plantings of gladioli should be made now. These should flower before the weather becomes excessively hot. In order to get a really early outdoor crop of these most useful flowers, it is a good plan to start a batch of bulbs in 3-inch or 3½-inch pots now in a greenhouse, later placing them in a coldframe to harden off before planting out. These plants will bloom several weeks ahead of open air planted bulbs.

Just as soon as the ground has dried out and warmed a little, plant a goodly batch of the more popular gladioli outdoors. Do not make the mistake of covering the bulbs too shallow; five or six inches is about right, as when planted at this depth dry weather will not affect the plants seriously and they will stand far more erect than when covered lightly.

REMOVING OUTDOOR MULCH.

Do not be in too big a rush about removing the outdoor mulch from plants, especially that on pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots, foxgloves, sweet williams, Canterbury bells and all hardy herbaceous perennials.

February proved warm and the first half of March was extremely mild. This made people venturesome and anxious to "take a chance," in common parlance. Late March and early April are usually hard on plant life, especially hard on newly uncovered plants. The frosty nights, clear, sunny days and biting winds take the life out of plants and it is good policy to leave winter coverings on until more settled weather seems assured.

The winter has been so open that tulips, daffodils and other bulbs have made considerable growth and it will be necessary to use great care in uncovering them, or many tops will be broken.

PRUNING FLOWERING SHRUBS.

Few deciduous flowering shrubs should be pruned at this season. Exceptions are the everblooming hydrangea, H. arborescens, and the Japanese sort, H. paniculata grandiflora, which need quite severe heading back now. Practically all other flowering shrubs should be pruned in summer, when dead, weak and useless wood can be cut out. This will allow time for the plants to make new growth. Yet, year after year, so-called landscape gardeners persist in trimming such shrubs as spiræas, loniceras, viburnums and other popular sorts in spring. When we remember that these plant butchers, who are strong on topiary works, are cutting away practically all flowering wood, it is up to us to put a quietus on such work. With the exception of broken branches and dead wood, do not cut away anything from deciduous shrubs now.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall March 12, with President Joseph Adler presiding. Five petitions for active membership were received. The judges appointed for the exhibits were Thos. Scott, Thos. Meech and G. W. Wyatt. The following awards were made: For twelve stalks of rhubarb, Thos. Twigg, first; for six heads of celery, Ernest Westlake, first; for pan of narcissi, honorable mention to Thos. Twigg; for a beautiful display of pansies, cultural certificate to Thos. Twigg. Mr. Twigg, upon request, gave a brief account of his method of growing.

An essay was read by Ernest Westlake, entitled, "Wanted, a Gardener," written by Robt. Weeks, of Cleveland. A letter of thanks was ordered sent the author. Arthur Harris, one of our members who went overseas with the Canadians, was present and spoke briefly. We were all pleased to have him with us again and to give him the glad hand. P. W. Popp, vice-president of the National Association of Gardeners, was present and spoke briefly on that organization. Allen Krichman, manager of the Newark Oyster Shell Lime Fertilizer Co., was present and spoke a few words. A short discussion followed on the making of a clay tennis court, which proved quite interesting and instructive.

It was decided to hold a spring show at the monthly meeting May 14. The executive committee was empowered to draw up a small schedule to be presented at the next meeting, which will be held April 9, when the competition will be on nine spikes of antirrhinum, three heads of lettuce and a vase of outdoor flowering shrub. It was decided to hold a smoker at the conclusion of this meeting. H. G.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market is much better supplied, a condition which has brought with it a readjustment of values. Still, the prices are considerably above those usually experienced at this season. Lent has cut down the demand a little, but not enough to make the decline felt to any extent. There was a noticeable demand for flowers for St. Patrick's day functions. The odious green carnation is in evidence everywhere, as is everything else that can be induced to take on the color. The shamrock in its various forms is also conspicuous in the windows of retail florists.

Carnations are plentiful, but move fairly well. It does not look, this season, as though there might be any of the gluts we have been accustomed to face in the years gone by. Arrivals generally clean up well at remunerative prices, the best grades commanding as much as 5 cents, with 6 cents for fancy flowers. As a rule, however, much excellent stock goes for less, and the average range might be considered from 2 to 4 cents. American Beauty roses are a little more plentiful and the top price for the best of the special grades is $75 per hundred. The supply of other roses also is heavier, so much so that there is considerable shopping around to determine bottom prices. This is a condition which has not been a feature of the market for some time.

There is an abundance of cattleyas. After the best of the arrivals are disposed of, the surplus is somewhat hard to move and clearances have to be made at less than the minimum price, which is 15 cents. The best bring from 40 to 60 cents.

The supply of narcissi is heavier, the greenhouse supply being augmented by outdoor cuts from the south. The unusually mild spring has brought outdoor flowers along fast; indeed, in certain spots on Long Island daffodils are already blooming. The supply of tulips also has increased, so that there is an abundance of bulbous flowers. Newcomers are English primroses and agathæa, which help to swell the great variety of miscellaneous flowers available.

Much concern is evidenced over the prospect of the supply of lilies for Easter. There is little disposition to book orders at a price lower than 35 cents per flower, and even this figure is considered as involving a risk.

Club's Annual Dinner.

The New York Florists' Club's annual dinner was held at the Hotel Biltmore on Saturday evening, March 15. The attendance was something over 250, including guests. The immense banquet room in the hotel was used for the occasion, and the handsome reception rooms contiguous were taken advantage of for the assembly of the diners. The banquet room was gayly decorated with flags and the tables were lavishly decorated with flowers.

At one end of the room, and immediately in front of the orchestra, was a large vase of the new rose, F. H. Dunlop, a most beautiful deep pink variety, staged for the occasion by the originator, J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, Ont., who, with his manager, Mr. Geraghty, was present. Mr. Dunlop was warmly congratulated on the appearance this new rose made, and the gathering was pleased at the compliment paid the club in staging it for the occasion. On the speaker's table were six handsome floral baskets, besides other flowers for trimming. On the individual tables were well arranged centerpieces and other floral material galore. The florists certainly could not be accused of refraining from the use of their own commodities. In the opinion of outsiders "who know," and who were privileged to look into the room, the decorations were superior to anything seen at any other New York function of the kind in recent years.

It was a dinner dance, and the menu was arranged accordingly. At the proper moment President Kessler welcomed the gathering in a brief but none the less hearty address. Park Commissioner Harmon, Commissioner of Taxes J. P. Sinnott, R. G. Hollaman, president of the International Exposition Co., and Prof. White, of Cornell University, as guests, made a few remarks. Mr. Wilson, of Cleveland, also a guest, took advantage of the occasion to welcome everybody to the S. A. F. convention, to be held in Cleveland in 1920.

The music was excellent, and the dancing was much enjoyed. With the many beautiful costumes of the ladies, the floor at all times presented a brilliant scene. President Kessler presented two silver vases, of Tiffany design, as prizes in an elimination dance, which was the feature of the evening. As consolation prizes he presented two large boxes of de luxe chocolates. The vases were won by Mrs. Jos. G. Leikens, who had Charles Schenck for a partner. The consolation prizes were won by Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Glass.

A side feature was the presentation of a beautiful silver tea service to ex-President Charles Schenck, in token of his services as head of the club's administration during 1918. Mr. Hollaman, in a short address, made the presentation, and Mr. Schenck made graceful acknowledgment. It was a jolly crowd that made a departure with the first of the small hours. J. H. P.

BUCKEYE BULL'S-EYES

BUSINESS IDEALS.

It is with pleasure that we announce the opening of a retail flower store, with up-to-date appointments, at 10313 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, O., by William H. Temblett, the well known landscape architect and forester. The day set for the formal opening is March 22 and beautifully printed cards heralding the event have been sent to a select clientele of flower lovers.

Mr. Temblett justly attributes his enviable success as a landscape man to the constant practice of definite business ideals, together with an inherent fondness for plants and flowers. His work is his inspiration and his numerous patrons are among his warmest friends. A long-cherished desire to embark in the commercial flower business on the Sixth City's leading thoroughfare was accentuated by his association with the leading spirits of the local Florists' Club, as well as by the publicity feature of the S. A. F., of which he is a member, and doubtless hastened its realization.

The accession of a man of the acknowledged business caliber of William H. Temblett to the ranks of commercial florists is a thing of which the local trade may well be proud. Flowers are indeed a great commodity and to win with them requires nothing more than the application of sound business principles. Within the fold, it is to be regretted that this truth is of exceedingly slow revelation, which makes it both essential and desirable that acumen gained in other fields be brought to bear upon the situation.

It is the intention of Mr. Temblett to continue his nursery and landscape business with an increased corps of capable assistants. The entire office work will be done at the retail store, which will provide economy of operation, as well as close personal supervision of affairs. A florist of recognized ability will be in charge of the new store. Mac.

FRANK FRIEDLEY.

Green be the turf above thee,
Friend of my better days;
None knew thee but to love thee—
None named thee but to praise.

In vain do we contemplate the untimely death of this remarkable young man without feeling a keen sense of personal loss. His boundless enthusiasm endeared him to all and his willingness to put his entire energy into anything to be accomplished, won for him a high place among his associates. He was a devoted husband, a faithful friend and a business man of pronounced ability. The future held for him but promise and his premature demise extinguished a notable career.

An empty niche has been left in the ranks of the organized trade that will be difficult to fill. The members are many, but, after all, the workers are few. The urgent need is for men of the sterling mintage of our departed friend, whose efforts were always put forth unselfishly and for the common good. Floriculture has lost a zealous devotee and may well lament his early passing. He was a credit to his calling and the best of his brief life was given to its advancement.

His fellow workers shall long remember his spirit of perennial youth, his forceful but unobtrusive personal presence and his aptness and readiness in the solution of trying problems. May he rest in peace and may his beloved flowers luxuriantly bloom upon his earthly home. And when the time comes for us to follow, may we meet—as we knew him here—the whole-souled and generous Frank Friedley. Mac.

Charlotte, Mich.—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gansbiller, formerly of Indiana Harbor, Ind., have rented the Ferndale Greenhouse in Charlotte and will be in the florists' business in the near future. The Ferndale houses were closed last year by Mr. Garman, then proprietor, because of the scarcity of coal.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market this week is clogged with plenty of fine stock and, while the demand holds good, the supply is above normal. Roses are in fine supply—in fact, the correspondent has never seen a better grade of roses than can be had at this time. The same may also be said of carnations. We have all heard of two new varieties that are being much spoken of throughout the country, but we have two new seedlings right here in Baltimore that will be hard to beat. Reference is made to the pink and white, unnamed seedlings of C. Akehurst & Son, which are as fine as anything I have seen, with large flowers and stems that cannot be surpassed. These two carnations will be heard from in the future. Sweet peas are plentiful and of fine quality and we do not hear any more of buds dropping. There is almost a glut of calla lilies and while Easter lilies are not so plentiful, there are enough to meet all requirements. All miscellaneous stock is in good supply. Bulbous stock is in good supply; Romans are especially plentiful. While business is not up to the standard, there is no uneasiness among either the growers or the retailers. Lent is here and business has been so good during the winter that this lull is looked upon as temporary. Easter is only a short way off and the trade is getting ready for the largest flower holiday in the history of the business.

Club Meeting.

The members of the Florists' Club got together March 10 and elected new officers. Robert Halliday, who had been nominated for president, did not feel that he could serve at this time; so, rather than not to give a progressive administration, he asked that his name be withdrawn. It was then a question of finding some one to take his place and, after canvassing the field, the unanimous opinion of the club was that the man who had held the club together through the trying experiences of the last year was the proper one to steer it, now that we are in calm waters. R. A. Vincent was unanimously elected to succeed himself as president. The other officers elected were: Vice-president, John Muth; corresponding secretary, Robert T. Paterson; financial secretary, C. H. Wagner; treasurer, Albert Fiedler; librarian, C. M. Wagner.

Important changes were made in the by-laws and constitution.

The club members then adjourned to the Hotel Rennert, where a most enjoyable time was had. It was a good bit like school letting out, for these usually staid and precise business men threw off all restraint and from the first minute entered into the spirit of the occasion. Isaac H. Moss, who was chairman of the banquet committee, acted as toastmaster. The correspondent thought he had known "Ike" about as well as any man in Baltimore during the last forty years, but, at the thirty-second banquet of the club, traits were discovered in him that none of us knew were there. A man with little to say, as a usual thing, yet Mr. Moss had a story to tell about each speaker as he was introduced.

One of the happiest events of this banquet was when Robert L. Graham, the member of our club who is always to be depended upon when oratory is required, presented Fred G. Burger, the retiring treasurer after nineteen years of service, with a handsome silver fruit bowl. As "Bob" in his presentation speech smothered Mr. Burger under "bouquets" of English, anyone could see that the retiring treasurer was becoming more nervous each minute, for, while he is one of the best treasurers any association ever had, he is a poor speechmaker and knew that a response would be necessary.

Too much credit cannot be given to the decorating committee, composed of Albert Fiedler and Robert Graham, Jr. On the guest table was a harbinger of spring, a centerpiece of jonquils and pussy willow. The remainder of the table and the mantels were a mass of carnations, as fine as anyone ever looked at, and conspicuous among them were several vases of Akehurst's new pink and white seedlings.

An impressive moment was when the toastmaster spoke of two members who have never missed a banquet, but who will never in this life be with us again—George Talbot and Mack Richmond—and called upon Mr. Graham for a short eulogy. Mr. Graham, in his remarks, paid the memory of these two brothers a great tribute.

Among the others called upon for talks were Dr. Hill, of Washington; Dr. Symons, of the Maryland State Agricultural College; R. A. Vincent, whose theme was "New Life in the Club," and Richard Vincent, Jr., both of White Marsh, Md.; W. F. Ekas and John J. Perry; Otto Bauer, of Washington; Arthur Niessen and R. E. Faust, of Philadelphia. There was one face missing, that of Ed Kress, who was detained by the death of his daughter, and the sympathy of the entire club went out to Ed in this great loss.

Among those present were the following:

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Joliet, Ill.—Another attempt is to be made to dispose of the greenhouses and lease of the bankrupt J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. Special Referee F. A. Hill has sent out the following notice: "You are hereby notified that in accordance with notice filed by John T. Clyne, trustee, the personal property of this estate, consisting of greenhouses and all equipment, office furniture and fixtures, dwelling houses, switch track, leasehold interest in and to the premises occupied by the plant of the company, and all the personal assets of this company will be sold April 9 at public auction at 2 p. m. inside the north main entrance of the Court House, in the city of Joliet, Ill., to the highest bidder. Terms, five per cent cash and balance upon approval of sale and delivery of proper conveyance of title."

Geneva, N. Y.—A. A. Gannett has made an assignment, but hopes to be able to arrange to continue and to be able eventually to pay creditors in full.

North Cambridge, Mass.—Ernest Norberg expects to make a change in the McKenzie greenhouses, following spring business, when a new arrangement will be in order.

Northampton, Mass.—Butler & Ullman anticipate a banner Easter business and have a fine stock, both in plants and cut flowers. They find the early closing method quite satisfactory; no Sunday work except on emergency orders.

South Hadley Falls, Mass.—R. C. Carey has the snuggest retail place one could wish to see; kept up to the minute with paint. Mr. Carey feels assured the heavy crops are largely due to bright houses. Business is reported as excellent.

Springfield, Mass.—William Schlatter & Son are erecting a new building for the manufacture of their florists' greening pin and carnation staples. "Sure," observed William Schlatter, "we carry an ad in The Review and are receiving orders from Maine to California; in fact, this branch threatens to rival the floral end of the business, although it is the best season in our long experience."

Springfield, Mass.—J. W. Adams & Co. predict a big spring planting business; in this they were corroborated by J. E. Draper, of the outdoor department of Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., of Boston, who are scouring the country for various lines of stock.

Smiths' Ferry, Mass.—Alfred Buckleton expresses the opinion that a house of medium size is far preferable where a variety of stock is required. Mr. Buckleton has charge of the big house on the G. H. Sinclair place, one of the largest, if not the largest, in New England.

Hadley, Mass.—Two lovely roses, now in the third year, are the pride of the veteran rosarian, Alex. Montgomery, head of the Montgomery Rose Co. One is a velvety crimson, the other a satiny pink and both will undoubtedly be preeminent next season. All who have grown Russell and Hadley are familiar with the type from which these new discoveries spring. Mr. Montgomery amuses himself, to use his own expression, in doing nothing else but work on seedlings, leaving the more strenuous workings to his two able sons, Alex. and George.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The weather during the last few weeks has been favorable. Because of this and the lengthening days, stock has made a good showing and has been about even with the demand. Business with all florists has been satisfactory during the latter part of the winter and there is evidence that conditions will continue to be as good for the spring season.

A number of parties were planned for March 17 and the stores did a good business in shamrock plants, green carnations and other green novelties. Funeral work continues to be quite heavy and cleans up a lot of stock that otherwise might not sell readily. Prices have dropped slightly and are nearing the figures usually asked at this season.

Carnations are in good supply and clear easily. They are of excellent quality, with good, solid stems. Easter lilies are seen and are of fine quality, but the supply is not large. Calla lilies are in fair supply and move well. A small supply of snapdragon is seen occasionally and it moves readily. Sweet peas are in good demand, especially in the lighter shades, but the supply is limited. Narcissi have been clearing well and bring good prices. The supply of jonquils is not large, but fine stock is seen. Red, yellow and white tulips are arriving in small supplies. Roman hyacinths are of fine quality and sell well.

In roses, the supply is quite large and prices are easier in all grades. There is a good demand, however, but chiefly for the medium grades. The quality continues to be excellent and in the stock arriving are seen Ophelias, Russells, Shawyers, Wards, Sunbursts, September Morns, Prima Donnas, Marylands, Killarneys and Hoosier Beauties.

The demand for American Beauties the last week has been good. Good myosotis is seen, but the sale is not brisk. Violets are in fair demand and the quality is good. Orchids move slowly. Good lavender and white lilac is seen and sells well. Calendulas, freesias and marguerites are seen, but not in any large supply. There is a good demand for all kinds of blooming plants, the larger plants being used a great deal for funeral work.

Club Meeting.

The Rochester Florists' Association met at Musicians' Headquarters March 10. The meeting was well attended. Rare specimens of dendrobiums from the conservatories of Mrs. William S. Kimball were exhibited by Colin B. Ogston. One variety which especially interested the members was the rare, pure white D. thyrsiflorum.

The special speaker of the evening was William De Graff, a well known attorney of the city, who spoke on "The League of Nations," contrasting the conditions of today with those of Washington's time.

A petition, protesting against the Federal Horticultural Board ruling, which prohibits, after June 1, the importation of bulbs and trees in which the florists, nurserymen and seedsmen are interested, was signed by forty-four local florists and sent to Senator Thomas B. Dunn.

Harry E. Bates recently tendered his resignation as president of the association and is succeeded by the former vice-president, George T. Boucher.

Various Notes.

It was with keen regret that Rochester florists heard the news of the intended departure of Harry E. Bates, of the Lord & Burnham Co., which will soon take place. He has been a resident of this city for the last seven years and has made himself extremely valuable to the florists here. At an early date he will be working from the main office at Irvington, N. Y., with residence headquarters in Albany, N. Y. He will retain the same territory that the Rochester office had and will take in in addition new territory east of the Connecticut river.

N. A. Hallauer, of Ontario, N. Y., is able to be around again. About three months ago he was knocked down by an automobile at Webster, N. Y., and received serious injuries, including a broken arm and fractured ribs. Progress, though slow, seems to be satisfactory.

Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, N. Y., had the decorations at the B. Forman Co. store this week, in which a large number of birch bark boxes, filled nicely with bulbous stock, were used. His sweet peas are coming along in good shape and there is a good prospect for a heavy crop at Easter.

The heads of the various flower stores here have been quite a little perplexed and nervous this week, owing to the fact that all income tax records had to be in by March 15. Needless to say, many were left until the last minute.

An automobile accident, in which a boy was instantly killed, occurred March 12. Leo L. Shaff, driver for H. E. Wilson, was exonerated from all blame after an investigation was held by the coroner. The boy darted suddenly out from behind a standing truck, evidently intending to cross the street, when the truck driven by Mr. Shaff ran him down. The driver had no time in which to stop the machine.

Albert Young, of the greenhouse store of H. E. Wilson, has been confined to his home for the last week with an attack of influenza.

It is reported that Smith & Gannett, of Geneva, N. Y., recently went into the hands of a receiver.

N. C. Feely, of Albion, N. Y., is operating the greenhouses disposed of by J. W. Langenback, who is serving with the U. S. army in France.

Dewey Lester is back from France and is feeling exceptionally well. As yet he has not returned to Rochester, having been detained in a camp near New York. He expects to be discharged in the course of two or three weeks.

Lieut. I. C. King, of Whitley county, Kentucky, has sent five holly trees to R. Bernhard and these trees have been given to the department of parks. Lieut. King and Mr. Bernhard were in the same battalion in the air service.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

John Reck & Son, of Bridgeport, Conn., find their temporary location quite satisfactory, but are looking forward to occupying the new store at the old location as soon as it is completed. It is to be one of the finest in the state.

• • • •

Manager Dewar, of Farquhar's, observes that the corn borer is even a greater bore than the quarantine, which has stirred up so much feeling and stimulated what will possibly be the largest importation ever made in one spring season.

• • • •

The new store of F. I. Drake & Co., at Pittsfield, Mass., is the pride of the owners and attractive on the Main street. "We feel we are right in the swim," observed Mr. Drake, "and now able to handle our increasing business far more satisfactorily than heretofore." One of the principal features for Easter sales is a house of French hydrangeas in fine shape.

• • • •

James Butterworth, of Framingham, Mass., is proud of the notice given the bouquet of orchids presented by Gen. Edwards to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson during the recent visit of the President to Boston, for the reason that it consisted of dendrobium and oncidium, a departure from the more common cattleyas. The bouquet was made by George Butterworth. The orchid lover is assured of a hearty welcome from our worthy orchidist, who justly designates himself a grower, and realizes that the embargo will afford such as himself an unexpected opportunity to increase the stocks of valuable seedlings and hybrids.

"Best business on record," is the report of James McManus, of Spear & McManus, of Hartford, Conn. Mr. Spear has given up to an attack of the "flu," but it is hoped he will soon be around as usual. Spear & McManus have taken the lead in the movement to close at 6 p. m., Saturdays at 9 p. m., and are assured it is a right move.

• • • •

Some of the finest Rose Queen sweet peas seen in the Boston markets are grown at the William Nicholson establishment, at Framingham, Mass., also the Godfrey calla and gypsophila. Of the latter, a big supply is promised for Easter. Plants are being grown in houses that were closed down following chrysanthemums, so that they were only empty about six weeks. Myosotis and carnations are also fully up to the usual high standard. While Mr. Nicholson has handed over the business to his stalwart son, our veteran friend keeps in close touch with the trade and enjoys a chat with the members of the craft who happen along.

• • • •

The H. F. A. Lange greenhouses at Worcester, Mass., will be put into order early, in time for the fall plantings, which have been sadly missed during the enforced period of idleness. "Never again, let us hope," observed Albert Lange; "it was the toughest experience in our history." Floral Artist Lewis, who has been head of that department with the Lange house for forty-two years, fails to recall any such event. Mr. Lange was chairman of the spring show, held in Horticultural hall March 13 and 14.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

PUT your best foot forward; keep your show window looking attractive.

THE official arrival of spring is scheduled for 11:19 a. m. March 21.

THE language of flowers has a new meaning to the trade; it resembles the clink of dollars more than it has before.

LIKE all really great persons and things, "Say It with Flowers" is simple and plain. Therein lies the slogan's value.

No one can deny that flowers are polite, for they show no rudeness to the eye. Florists should strive to emulate their goods. It will pay.

TIME and tide wait for no man, nor does business. If you want business, you will have to go after it. Advertising is the best vehicle for the chase.

MANY records have been broken in the last few months and the prediction is that in spite of the shortage of lilies and bulbous stock, another one will be smashed at Easter.

IT is said of certain flowers that their fragrance is "intoxicating." Is it not possible that the man who "can let it alone if he wants to" will turn to the flower shops for stimulation after the "bone-dry" amendment goes into effect?

MANY a "faint heart that ne'er won fair lady" would speak with better success in the "Say It with Flowers" language, and enterprising florists will do well to impress this idea upon the minds of all suitors, timid and courageous, now that spring is so near at hand.

WHEN the Russell rose was new the eastern growers shrugged their shoulders over the middle west's enthusiasm for it, but, having studied middle-western methods with it, the east now thinks Russell is the best yet, while on the Pacific coast there is a big unsatisfied demand for bench-grown plants of it.

THE Horticultural Trades' Association of Great Britain recently has reorganized and is seeking a permanent, full-time secretary. An advertisement inviting applications recently was published in the horticultural trade papers in England, with the result that between 500 and 600 applications for the job were received.

WATCH; you will find that it will be a petunia window-box summer.

BOSTON ferns will be fine property when it comes time to fill porch baskets.

THOSE who wish to get an idea of what the Department of Agriculture may be expected to do for the trade in the way of importing new plants after the quarantine goes into effect should send to David Fairchild, Agricultural Explorer in Charge, Bureau of Plant Introduction, Washington, D. C., for its bulletins, "Plant Immigrants."

MEETING PRICES.

Everybody knows one man's stock is worth more than another's, even though measured by the same unit, so why expect prices to be uniform?

To say that a plant is from a certain size of pot gives no idea of its value and much less can one judge the quality of cut flowers by any description in general use. The man with the best goods is entitled to receive the best prices and should ask a price, rather than to offer his output at a price to compete with lower quality.

PLAN EXHIBITIONS.

A number of exhibitions have been planned for 1919 by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the dates for these were recently announced by the secretary, David Rust, as follows:

Exhibition of peonies, outdoor cut flowers and hybrid tea roses, at Firemen's hall, Bryn Mawr, Pa., June 3 and 4.

Exhibition of sweet peas, hardy perennials and hybrid perpetual roses, at the Jenkintown Club and Reading Room, Jenkintown, Pa., June 24 and 25.

Exhibition of dahlias, outdoor cut flowers and vegetables, at Masonic hall, Ardmore, Pa., September 16 and 17.

Annual exhibition and chrysanthemum show, at the First Regiment Armory, Broad and Callowhill streets, Philadelphia, November 5 to 8, inclusive.

At all the above exhibitions prizes will be offered for vegetables from the school and war gardens.

The office and library of the society are now at 606 Finance building, South Penn square, Philadelphia. Meetings are held on the third Tuesday of each month, except July and August, at 3:30 p. m. at Griffith hall, 1420 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Officers of the society for 1919 are as follows: President, James Boyd; vice-presidents, Robt. Craig, Henry F. Michell, William Kleinheinz, J. Otto Thilow; treasurer, Sidney W. Keith; secretary, David Rust.

"THE SUNSHINE OF LIFE."

The Kiwanis Club, of Washington, D. C., recently offered a prize of $15 for a friendly word contest among its members. The proposition was for each member to describe his business in fifteen words, no more, no less. The reward was $1 per word, or $15 to the winner. Forty-seven members entered the contest. Z. D. Blackistone, florist at Fourteenth and H streets, N. W., was given second place with his slogan:

"Flowers are the sunshine of life. My business: Supplying the means of spreading sunshine everywhere."

The first prize was awarded to the proprietor of a moving picture theater.

WHY THE REVIEW GROWS.

Probably there is no trade paper which spends less of its income for soliciting than does The Review—and still The Review grows. The slogan has been, and is, "Results bring advertising; The Review brings results." It is like this:

I am sold out on the mesembryanthemums, sold out clean and clear.—Louis P. Foulk, Bellevue, Pa., March 14, 1919.

I have sold out my place and am watching The Review for a new location. I carried an ad in one issue and received replies from Minnesota, Montana, Texas, Florida, Kansas and Michigan. Does it pay to advertise in The Review? I should say it does!—R. H. Stokes, Springfield, Mo., March 15, 1919.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

LET EVERYBODY PUSH.

The time has come for everybody in the trade to put his shoulder to the wheel—there is plenty of stock of one kind or another to keep everybody selling at the necessary prices.

There has been complaint on the part of retail florists that the season's good business has not afforded them adequate return because of the higher cost of stock. Growers reply that the retailers had become so accustomed to pocketing the bulk of the profits made by the trade that they were loath to share them with the producers, but be that as it may, stock is plentiful again and wholesale prices are lower, affording the retailers whatever profit opportunities were denied them earlier in the season. It will pay to push.

The immediate future of the florists' business lies in the hands of the retailers. They can work together in their several communities to maintain prices so that they can make good profits for themselves after paying the growers in proportion to the present cost of living, or the retailers can revert to their former custom of scrambling for trade, each striving to undersell the others.

The chief difficulty in getting fair returns out of all branches of the flower business from this time on will arise from the fact that the average florist knows no other way to get trade except to reduce prices; the idea of really supplying better stock and actually giving better service as a means of increasing trade has made little headway.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

"Moderate but still definite progress toward better things," is "Bradstreet's" summary of the trade developments of the week, while on the same subject "Dun's Review" says: "Not without accompanying irregularities, yet with unmistakable clearness, the betterment in business is being gradually extended. Both in growth of actual transactions and in strengthening of that sentiment which is essential to further revival, the week has been one of good progress in certain leading branches, and where no gain at all appears, price uncertainties chiefly explain the continued halting. With undiminished force, the price question dominates most commercial markets, and buyers, while momentarily disregarding the element of cost, if their wants be especially urgent, are, in the main, still waiting for various commodities to move more decisively downward."

OBITUARY

Peter W. Mackley.

Peter W. Mackley, manager for the Majestic Floral Co., Texarkana, Ark., was shot twice and instantly killed at his place of business in the Foreman block at 4 p. m., March 8. One bullet entered the breast and the other the back. His wife also was shot twice, once in the breast and once in the hip, but her wounds are not considered dangerous. Their 5-year-old daughter was in the store and saw her parents shot down, but was herself untouched.

J. D. Hines was arrested a few minutes later and lodged in jail charged with the shooting. He is driver of a Wells-Fargo Express wagon and told the officers the trouble had come up over the refusal of Mackley to pay a bill of 60 cents on a package of flowers damaged in transit.

Adolph Schwerin.

Adolph Schwerin, of Schwerin Bros., who conduct a nursery in Visitacion, Cal., south of San Francisco, died March 8 as a result of injuries sustained a few days before in a street car collision. He was a native of San Francisco, aged 56 years, and had a host of friends who mourn his sudden passing. He is survived by his widow, four sisters and three brothers. Of late, the deceased had made the rounds of the trade in San Francisco and his visits were always welcome, as he had a sunny disposition which reflected good cheer wherever he went. Many florists and nurserymen attended the funeral, which was held March 10. W. M.

Mrs. A. L. Glaser.

Mrs. A. L. Glaser, widow of one of the most widely known florists of the middle west, died at her home at Dubuque, Ia., March 13, after a protracted illness. Mr. Glaser pre-deceased her by a number of months. The funeral was held March 15.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Business continues extremely heavy, both wholesale and retail. Stock is plentiful and generally of good quality, though sweet peas are beginning to show the effects of the warm weather. Spring weather has arrived and the trees and shrubbery are budding. Bulbous stock is coming on fast and, owing to the lateness of Easter, there will probably be a shortage of these.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. has a heavy run of funeral work and is cutting a fine crop of flowers, especially bulbous stock.

Karl Zeidler is doing an active business in plants and funeral work.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are cutting extra fine carnations and sweet peas.

Mrs. J. C. Elspermann continues to have plenty to do in funeral work and the shipping of plants.

The Lockyear Floral Co. is getting a good share of the business. The greenhouses are full of spring stock.

C. L. Niednagel is building a garage for his new Haynes car. His stock is in fine condition, with a nice crop of roses coming on.

Royston & Fenton report a brisk business in coleus and Easter Greeting.

The proprietors of the Anderson Floral Co., at Lebanon, Tenn., and C. A. Morgan, of Henderson, Ky., were visitors last week. E. L. F.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

In spite of some extremely bad weather, which curtailed the transient trade of the local retailers, the market has been going ahead steadily. It is probable that this season of the year, the early part of Lent, never saw so good a volume of business and prices still are above the seasonal average, though not so high as they have been during the early part of the year, and there seems to be no reason for complaint by anyone. Quite the contrary, there seems to be every reason why those in all branches of the trade should be satisfied, more than satisfied.

The shipping business undeniably is the backbone of the present market. If it were not for an excellent run of shipping, the market unquestionably would go to pieces. The out-of-town demand continues relatively stronger than the city demand. Also, the out-of-town buyers put quality above price, whereas price is the first consideration with a good many who come personally to the market.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of the present supply is the return of American Beauty to its old-time position of leadership. It has been a good many months since this market had so large a supply of Beauties of such good quality. While there are not nearly so many Beauties grown as was the case a few years ago, the growers seem at length to have caught the stride again. There are large quantities of fine stock, large flowers, long stems and perfect foliage. They are selling well and the prices hold up surprisingly when one considers the great increase in the supply. It looks like proving the correctness of the theory that good Beauties would prove even more salable than in the past.

Next in popularity after Beauty comes Russell. The supply has increased and the quality of the flowers in most cases leaves nothing to be desired. There are considerable quantities of Milady in some of the wholesale houses and they do not seem to be particularly in request. Ophelia is coming fine again and is selling well. Columbia is less abundant than it was, probably because the growers have taken so much wood for propagating. All the other roses are in good supply, so that all orders are being shipped in full and any reasonable requirements as to price can be met.

The supply of carnations is increasing day by day. The demand, however, has kept pace, so that the market is kept well cleaned up. There are no 8-cent carnations any more, unless it may be a few Mrs. Ward, but the prices continue excellent considering that the spring crop is on. There is competition for the few Laddie that come in and they still bring 12 to 15 cents, with all the growers hunting for a few hundred cuttings. St. Patrick's day created no excitement this year in the matter of white carnations; there was a good demand, but no flurry in prices.

Orchids are abundant and one hears of cheap prices, but investigation usually reveals that the flowers were Schroederæ, not Trianæ. It seems as though the market had been starved for orchids so long that it is ready to take up all first-class stock at fair prices; one sees cattleyas in every first-class window and they are going into much of the good funeral work. There are increased supplies of giganteum lilies, some good, some poor. Callas also are abundant. The market is full of southern narcissi in many varieties. They sell well and pull down the prices of indoor flowers. Early tulips have become fairly plentiful, but there are not many Darwins. Sweet peas have become the principal corsage flower and are in such large supply that prices have taken quite a drop. There are plenty of violets, selling rather low. Iris tingitana is passing, as are freesias and Paper Whites. There is valley enough for all, as the demand is not brisk.

Meredith Plant is Sold.

Two practical greenhouse men have secured the establishment known as the Meredith Flower & Vegetable Co., at Libertyville, Ill., obtaining title from the court under foreclosure of a mortgage held by Lord & Burnham Co. There are ten houses, covering 44,000 feet of space. It is not Lord & Burnham construction, that company's interest having come about through the owners giving a mortgage as additional security for the payment for the range built for them at Union Grove, Wis It is understood that the Meredith Flower & Vegetable Co., the present owners of which are not florists, not only lose the property but also are personally liable for money borrowed at the bank before the foreclosure proceedings were begun.

The new owners are Gust Lienhardt, about 45 years of age, who has had much experience, with Poehlmann Bros. Co. and other local growers, and Henry Mesenbrink, a younger man, who until recently has been with the Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood. Each is a good grower and a careful manager, as evidenced by their ability to swing a deal of this size, and their success seems assured. The houses now are planted to roses, carnations and sweet peas, with a general line of pot plants for home trade.

Growers' Association Grows.

Increasing business has resulted in the Chicago Flower Growers' Association taking 1,600 square feet of additional space in the basement of the LeMoyne building, below the present quarters and the entrance to the building, adjoining the basement shipping room of Bassett & Washburn. It is understood that the new space, large, light and airy, will be used for a shipping department, the present quarters being unequal to the needs of Chief Sherer and his assistants.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association has been called for March 25 to vote on a proposition to increase the capital stock of the corporation from $10,000 to $30,000. When the increase has been ratified, it is the purpose of the management to permit each stockholder to subscribe to two shares of the new stock for each one share now held. The stock is distributed among many small holders. The purpose of the proposed increase in capital is to supply funds more nearly adequate to the needs of the business

CAN YOU USE LIKE YOU USED

"BEAUTIES like we used to get them"—did you think Beauty growing a lost art and that you never could get 'em again like in the days of old? Well, just try Amling's Beauties and see. Here are Beauties like the ones that made Chicago famous as the Beauty center of the world and, moreover, we have them in quantity. Strong stems up to five feet; big, solid heads; that wonderful dark color; dark green, leathery foliage—the growers assure us they can keep 'em coming like that all summer, only of course the heads won't be so big as now after hot weather comes. Better get started with these Beauties right soon; they'll be money-makers for you.

Growers Call a Meeting.

A self-constituted organization committee has called a meeting of growers for the evening of March 27 in the room used by the Florists' Club, at the Randolph hotel, corner of Randolph and Wells streets. The committee consists of Walter A. Amling, chairman; Robert Windler, Peter Pearson, Otto H. Amling and Joseph Kohout. A general call is issued to the growers of cut flowers and plants to market their products in Chicago and a plan of organization will be offered for adoption. The call says:

"In order to get a representative discussion of the questions involved you are urged to be present and give the committee the benefit of your experience and observation. This is your association and the committee has kept that fact in mind in the preparation of its recommendation. J. F. Ammann, president of the Society of American Florists, is expected to be present and aid us in every manner practicable for the interests of the organization. Mr. Ammann worked with the organization committee at its first meeting and the committee acknowledges its indebtedness to him for many of the recommendations made. Your interest in the flower growers of the community is of no mean importance and the committee respectfully requests your presence at this meeting."

THE 4 POINTS

FIRST —The S. A. F. endorsement of the WHOLESALE FLORISTS' CREDIT ASSOCIATION.
SECOND—The organization of the CHICAGO WHOLESALE CUT FLOWER ASSOCIATION.
THIRD —The organization of the CHICAGO RETAIL FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.
FOURTH—THE FINAL TRIUMPH of an organization, about to be formed, of CUT FLOWER GROWERS shipping to the Chicago MARKET—
This completes the chain for the RIGHT KIND of COÖPERATION.

The above program is formulated in the demands made in the FAMOUS GROWERS' PETITION of 1916, whose resolutions were THEN as NOW, EXCLUSIVELY accepted, endorsed, enforced by us, contributing our share towards the progress made.

S.—Get a copy of the "WHOLESALE HOUSE of the FUTURE," of which the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE says in part: "Let us hope that the work of the night will not cease with the reading of this paper, but that organizations will be effected which will shortly bring into being the 'WHOLESALE HOUSE of the FUTURE,' not alone in Chicago, but in other civic centers."

greenhouses is being cut this year. It is said that every foot of the greenhouses now is at work.

Albert F. Amling and Mrs. Amling have gone to Orange, Cal. E. C. Amling and his family already were there. A sister of the Amling brothers has lived at Orange for a number of years.

There are growers who do not think as well of Mrs. Russell as they did when the rose was new, but when their roll is called H. A. Bauske is not among those who answer "Here!" Russell never did better for him than it is doing right now.

The John C. Moninger Co. says it is nothing unusual to find a florist in a hurry, but it is not often that one telephones for a 9,000-pound boiler and has it shipped by express, as one grower did March 17. The boiler was worth about $1,000, and express charges, for 150 miles, were more than $125.

The downtown retailers are vitally interested in the weather; it makes all the difference in the world with the transient trade. Andrew Chronis, who is doing a big business with the Alpha Floral Co., says it has rained so many successive Saturdays that he has lost count of the exact number, but that he knows each one has cost him much money.

During the war the West Woodworking Co., 310 North Ada street, was engaged in making propellers for airplanes, work which called for much skill. When the war ended a quantity of beautiful thin wood was on hand and this is being made up into a line of extremely handsome fern dishes, pot covers, vases, etc., for high-class flower stores. They are put together by the same process the propellers were, with waterproof glue, and should sell well, not only on their merit, but because of the peculiar circumstances of their manufacture.

The formal opening of Harry C. Rowe's new store took place March 15. Mr. Rowe has been in the retail business in the loop for eighteen years and this is the largest and best store he has had. It is at 67 East Madison street, two doors west of the most used entrance to the Chicago Athletic Club and with an entrance also from the lobby of the Mallers building. Mr. Rowe did business on the third floor of this building during the war.

bed on the afternoon of March 14 and has since been at the store only once or twice for a few minutes. His friends were much alarmed lest the bad cold should develop into pneumonia.

It was fifty years ago March 17 that C. F. Claussen & Sons started in business at Fifty-second street and Western avenue. They are pickle packers, but C. S. Claussen is the silent partner in Bonvaliet & Co., who were the largest shippers of gladiolus blooms to this market last season.

The A. L. Randall Co. is preparing to put on the market a new glazing cement under the trade-marked name Griplastic.

A. Miller went to Cincinnati March 15 for a week's business trip.

G. M. Reburn is calling on his customers in Iowa.

Clarence Ellsworth, of the J. F. Kidwell Co., left his car for fifteen minutes last Tuesday noon on Wabash avenue and when he returned the car full of flowers was gone.

In spite of misfortune of the double-barreled variety, Jensen Bros., 3335 Lincoln avenue, are not downhearted. One member of the firm is in a hospital and the concern is just recovering from a fire at the store two weeks ago, which did damage estimated at $400. The loss, however, was covered by insurance. George W. Jensen says that business has changed wonderfully, and for the better, in the last six months. He adds that the firm's Valentine day business increased seventy-five per cent. Jensen Bros. call the mid-February holiday "Young Easter."

Second Lieutenant Edwin A. Bebb, formerly with Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, writes from France that he wants to receive The Review with a view to getting back into the trade as soon as he gets home, which may be in two months, or six. The official designation of his unit is 100th Aero Squadron, 2d Day Bombardment Group. First Lieutenant Charles T. Johnson has been back at Mt. Greenwood for some time and has nearly completed laying out a needed new section of the cemetery.

R. Scheffler, of Wheaton, solved the labor problem during the war through recourse to the St. Charles School for Boys, not far from his place. At times he has had as many as fifteen of the youngsters working in his greenhouses. Under careful supervision he found them capable workers and quick to respond to good treatment. Now that the war is over and the labor situation changing, Mr. Scheffler does not intend to go back on the boys who want to work.

John C. Enders is secretary of Dearborn Chorus, an organization within Dearborn Lodge, of Masons, which recently gave its ninth annual show, "The Follies of 1919," at Aryan Grotto Temple and scored a hugh success.

Visitors.

Alois Frey, of Crown Point, Ind., who is known in this market as the man who found the pot of gold at the foot of the Rainbow, meaning freesias, was in Chicago March 17 on his way to the Pacific coast for a month's vacation. It is the second or third trip Mr. Frey has made to southern California and there are suspicions that he will not be satisfied until he can make his home there.

The Market.

The fear that haunts every buyer is that somebody else buys cheaper. Were it not for that fear, the buyers would be happy, for the market is all in their favor. Such a market a month ago would have made them rich in no time; as it is, they are doing nicely.

There is more demand for medium-grade stock than for fancy flowers. Orchids and long-stemmed roses are not sought. Carnations, sweet peas, daffodils and ordinary grades of roses are more popular. The end of the week was much more active than the beginning, when trading was listless.

Beauties are rapidly coming into crop again. The price has fallen and, besides a good supply of fancies, there are a few mediums and some shorts. Cattleyas are plentiful. The indications are that they will remain so for a couple of weeks and that the supply will decrease in April. Carnations fell away during the early part of the week. The market for them improved toward the close. Whites advanced in price under the influence of the demand for St. Patrick's day. Sweet peas are still in fair crop. They meet with a steady demand, especially for well-grown stock. Single violets sell moderately at low prices. There is no demand for doubles.

Daffodils are fine and sell well. There are a number of varieties offered. Emperor is the most popular. There is a heavy crop of callas, rather in excess of the demand. There are a good many poor Easter lilies. When of good quality they are preferred to callas. Snapdragons are overabundant. Larkspur has made its appearance. Greens are selling well.

Taken all in all, the market is good for the season. Prices are much lower than they have been during the winter.

The A B C of the F. T. D.

It was nearly 10 o'clock on the evening of a meeting that had lasted two hours. Ladies and members were getting tired and fidgeting in their chairs when Charles H. Grakelow took his place on the platform. Usually one good speaker is considered enough for a meeting. This evening there were four. Three had claimed the attention of the audience for two hours. To the fourth was assigned the difficult task of holding the attention of his hearers and of sending them home in a happy frame of mind. It looked like a difficult job. I looked to see whether the speaker was fazed—not a bit of it! Confidence, complete confidence, was expressed in every word, every gesture. I have always enjoyed the speaking of Charles H. Grakelow. The enjoyment dates back to the time when a young man responded to the request of the then chairman of the club's essay committee with an extremely clever address that came as a delightful surprise.

But here was a difficult situation. Would he be equal to it? The subject was solid, the audience tired. Soon apprehension disappeared; the crisis had passed; all was well.

But to the address. Mr. Grakelow laid stress on two things: The importance of making people feel that they could "Say It with Flowers" to a friend anywhere. People did not know this, did not think of this; they must be made to feel that a birthday or a sad occasion in another city is just as easily reached with fresh flowers at short notice as in their own city. Teach people this and results will follow. The other thing of importance is accuracy—correct spelling of name and especially of address saves loss of time and of flowers, and disappointment. Mr. Grakelow instanced two streets in this city. One is Green street, 1600 north; the other, Greene street, named after the general of revolutionary times, is in Germantown. How easy to confuse them and how much motor chasing might be saved by carefully spelling the name of the street! He gave a number of instances of mistakes made and how he tried to avoid them by spelling words over the telephone, and he told some funny stories. One that pleased his hearers especially was an account of how at least one house even attempted to deliver in the lower regions. Mr. Grakelow read an interesting letter from Secretary Pochelon, of the F. T. D., in which the writer said that sixty-eight new members had been added in February, making the total membership nearly seven hundred.

When he had finished describing the desirability of the F. T. D. business, Mr. Grakelow told his hearers that there was a book, a chapter and a verse in the Bible that he well knew. He named them, and, in case they did not happen to remember it or have their Bibles with them, he would quote it. It was, "Ananias fell dead." Lest they might expect this fate to befall him after what he had said, he asked them to come forward and read the telegraphic orders sent him and see whether they would not like to receive just such orders.

Various Notes.

The postponement of the start of the Victory loan campaign from April 7 to April 21 is welcome to florists. From Easter Monday to the opening of the planting out season, May 10, is the best time we could ask during the spring.

The vase of Hadley roses exhibited by A. Harvey & Son, of Brandywine Summit, at the last meeting of the Florists' Club shows what fine roses can be grown in Chester county soil.

Edward Reid deeply appreciates the many kind letters and telegrams sent by his friends on his silver anniversary in business.

H. Bayersdorfer, sitting in the library of the Mercantile Club Sunday morning, was heard to give a delighted chuckle. A friend looking over his shoulder might have seen on the front page of the pictorial part of the Public Ledger a copyrighted photograph of Woodrow Wilson Sayre, grandson and namesake of the President, but it was not the lusty infant or his bottle which pleased Mr. Bayersdorfer; it was the fact that the picture showed up splendidly one of the Bayersdorfer cradles filled and trimmed with flowers by one of the up-to-date Philadelphia retailers. It probably was as good an ad as nativity flowers ever got.

dred or lower and 18-inch to 24-inch stems of hybrid teas can be bought for $6. Beauties, Hadleys, Russells and fancy varieties all show sharp declines. Carnations show but little change from a week ago. Whites enjoyed a temporary rise for dyeing purposes for March 17. Violets are on the wane; the general run of flowers sell at 40 to 75 cents per hundred, but some fancies, well bunched, bring $1. There are large supplies of fine sweet peas and prices on these hold up well.

Tulips are rather more plentiful, but daffodils sell out easily. Supplies of these are small this season. Freesia is nearing the end, also Paper Whites. Anemones go slowly and pansies are harder to clean up. Callas are coming in abundantly, but sell well owing to the shortage of lilies. The bulk of the cattleyas sell at $50 per hundred. Some nice amaryllis is coming in. On Asparagus Sprengeri the scarcity is somewhat relieved, but adiantum fronds realize high prices. A fine assortment of flowering plants is now coming in and they are in good demand.

Various Notes.

At the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 25, "Fertilizers for Gardeners and Florists, and Their Uses" will be discussed by an expert. This subject is timely and should attract a large attendance. There will be much other business of importance at this meeting.

Retailers did a nice business, especially in shamrocks and green carnations, for St. Patrick's day. The demand, however, is not what it was a few years ago. I am glad to note that one or two retailers steadily refuse to offer dyed flowers. Would that all had courage to take a similar stand. It lowers the dignity of any store to offer these floral abortions.

Among callers last week was J. S. Hay, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, and Walter Peterson, St. Johns, N. B.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. always has most tasteful windows and features orchids a great deal. This concern had handsome displays March 15 of phalæ-nopsis, cymbidiums, cattleyas, lælias, odontoglossums and dendrobiums.

Thomas Capers, of Wellesley Hills, who closed his houses last fall, has them all in operation again. He first took off a crop of radishes and is following these with stocks and other Memorial day flowers. He will plant carnations next season.

Godfrey callas were never seen in such quantities in the cut flower market as this season and they sell well. Among those who are growing them in quantity are: James Wheeler, Natick; W. R. Nicholson, Framingham; John A. Fraser, of Wellesley; Paine Bros., of Randolph.

Penn, as usual, had a splendid St. Patrick's day window, which seemed to attract numerous passers-by, and they report an excellent volume of business for that day.

C. S. Andem, of Putnam, Conn., is shipping all his flowers now to Stephen Green. He is strong on Matchless, Pink Delight, Gloriosa and Benora. The last named now comes rather weak-stemmed. Other varieties grown are Gloriosa, Nancy, Aviator and Nebraska. The two last named he thinks highly of and will plant more of them in 1919.

Welch Bros. Co. has an attractive display of pink rambler roses and other flowering plants in the store and reports business in them as being good.

March has entirely belied its reputation so far. There is no frost left in the ground and the large market gardeners in and around Boston have much land plowed and a good number of vegetable seeds in the ground.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The local wholesale market was in a splendid condition last week, although the demand was not so brisk as it has been, owing to the first week of the Lenten season.

The weather has been like summer and it is feared that bulbous stock and violets will be over by Easter, which is late this year. Easter lily pot plants are the main source of worry to the retailer this year, as the local growers have none. At present the great percentage of the retailers report funeral work alone is keeping them busy. The warm sunshine has brought out a large quantity of bulbous stock and the demand is not equal to the supply. Sweet peas are extra fine and heavy in supply and the price has dropped considerably. Calendulas and mignonette are abundant, as are callas and freesias. Carnations are in larger supply than at any time this season and excellent stock can be bought at 5 or 6 cents. March 15 and 16 there was a great demand for white carnations to be colored green for St. Patrick's day. Enchantress is always in demand, but reds are generally left over of late.

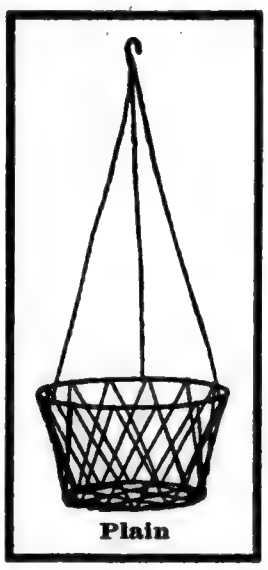
Roses also are more abundant in all varieties. Although the demand has been good, a number are left over. Extra quality in Russell, Ophelia, Stanley and Columbia clean up daily and Killarney and White Killarney are among the left-overs. Violets are showing the effect of spring sunshine, but consignments were heavy during the week.



Cut ferns, galax, smilax and asparagus are plentiful and the demand is large.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting March 13, at the establishment of the Bourdet Floral Co., and it was one of the most interesting, also the largest meeting, of the year. The attraction was the club's annual carnation and spring flower exhibition, which was held in conjunction with the meeting.

When President Hummert opened the meeting there were fifty members in attendance and all the officers were present. The preliminaries were quickly disposed of, after which the chair called for a report from all committees. The publicity committee made its yearly report through Chairman Bourdet. In this report the members were told how the committee had worked during the year, giving the year's receipts and expenses and the balance left for publicity for the new year. A letter was also read from C. C. Pollworth, of Milwaukee, explaining the working of their publicity committee. After a lengthy discussion the Milwaukee plan for raising funds for publicity was adopted by a full vote. The old committee was then discharged with thanks and the chairman appointed a new committee, consisting of the president, L. J. Bourdet and J. J. Beneke.

MICHIGAN CUT FLOWER EXCHANGE, 264-266 Randolph Street, Detroit, Mich.

The committee on the applications of Otto Sander, J. Wm. Patton and Henry Rohrbach reported favorably and their election followed. The secretary was instructed to send a letter extending the sympathy of the members to the bereaved family of the late William J. Stewart.

The members presented a large bouquet of carnations to Julius Bourdet, who celebrated his fiftieth birthday March 9.

The chairman appointed Messrs. Bourdet, Lurie and Fillmore a committee to judge the flowers on exhibition.

The attendance prize was won by Fred C. Weber, Jr., and Joseph Hauser won the second prize for the last name drawn from the box. The trustees announced that the next meeting will take place April 10 at the Windler wholesale house. Fred C. Weber, Jr., gave an interesting talk on F. T. D. matters and urged all retailers to join. He said that an effort would be made to bring the 1920 convention of the F. T. D. to St. Louis.

O. E. Steinkamp, of Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind., was present and gave the members an interesting talk. After the meeting refreshments were served and a vote of thanks was extended Mr. Bourdet for the afternoon's entertainment.

The cut flower exhibition was staged around the meeting room and the following florists staged blooms:

The Joseph H. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., exhibited a vase of Rose Premier and a vase of fifty Laddie carnations, which attracted much attention. Baur & Steinkamp, of Indianapolis, Ind., staged a vase of seventy-five Ruth Baur carnations, which received much favorable comment from the local carnation growers and which were awarded a certificate of merit. The Woodlawn Gardens, of Edwardsville, Ill., staged a vase of Enchantress Supreme and White Enchantress carnations of fine quality. The W. A. Rowe Floral Co., of Kirkwood, showed a vase each of jonquils, snapdragons and Enchantress carnations. A. S. Cerny, of Kirkwood, staged a vase of well-grown Ophelia roses. W. J. Edwards, of Kirkwood, showed a vase of well-grown Washington carnations and Joseph Hauser staged two large bunches of high-class violets. Oscar May, of Tappington, Mo., had a vase of fine sweet peas.

The Missouri Botanical Garden staged a vase of false holly.

Retail Florists' Association's Meeting.

The Retail Florists' Association held a most interesting meeting Monday evening, March 10, in the Knights of Columbus hall. While the attendance was not large, a great deal of business was transacted. The new officers were installed and the new president, Fred

C. Weber, Jr., presided. Secretary Oscar Ruff was attending to his duties and remarked, "Watch us grow from now on."

After the regular opening business was transacted, the chairman appointed a new committee for publicity, consisting of F. C. Weber, Jr., J. J. Windler and C. C. Young. It was decided that the members allow only twenty per cent commission on all orders received by them from outside parties. A discussion followed as to the case of one retailer buying stock from another retailer and whether he should charge twenty per cent more for them than what he paid for them in the wholesale market. It was finally decided by vote that this would be a fair profit and the motion was carried.

The secretary was ordered to send a letter to all retailers advising them of the new plan of raising funds for publicity and inviting them to attend the next meeting, which will take place next Monday, March 24, in the Knights of Columbus hall at 8 p. m.

Various Notes.

The new publicity committee is complete and held its first meeting March 18, at headquarters. Those who compose this committee are: A. H. Hummert, Jules Bourdet and J. J. Beneke, of the Florists' Club; W. A. Rowe, W. J. Pilcher and A. S. Cerny, of the County Growers' Association; Fred C. Weber, Jr., J. J. Windler and C. C. Young, of the Retail Florists' Association; W. C. Smith, H. G. Berning and Frank Windler, of the Wholesale Florists' Association. This committee will handle all the florists' publicity for this year on the Milwaukee plan of raising funds.

Alex Lurie, horticulturist of the Missouri Botanical Garden, returned from a business trip at Chicago and Detroit last week, spending three days in each city.

Eli Mioux, formerly with the Bourdet Floral Co., now of Carlyle, Ill., spent March 13 in the city, and his many friends were glad to know that he is having good success on his own place.

Grimm & Gorly recently bought the lots at 3028, 3223 and 3418 Washington avenue, on which they will in the near future build garages and supply houses. Frank Gorly represented the firm in the purchase.

Joseph Hauser, of Webster Groves, is cutting a grand lot of violets, with large flowers and extra long stems. He says there will be no violets this year for Easter, but plenty of Spencer sweet peas, as he has a great crop coming on.

W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, is sporting a new red sedan and A. H. Ahner, also of Kirkwood, has a new pleasure car, a Chevrolet. It is said W. J. Edwards will soon be out with a new Marmon.

Otto Sander's new, handsome cash register worked overtime last week. Miss Esther Schndeier, head designer here, was on the sick list a few days last week. J. J. B.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

The Spring Schedule.

The spring schedule for our campaign of advertising in magazines has been settled and contracts placed as follows:

Outlook, 200 lines, March 29.
Red Book, 200 lines, April.
Collier's, half page, April 12.
Hearst's, 200 lines, April.
Literary Digest, one page, April 19.
Cosmopolitan, 200 lines, May.
Sunset, 200 lines, May.
Everybody's, 200 lines, May.
Quality Group—Atlantic Monthly, Century, Harper's, Review of Reviews, Scribner's, World's Work, Munsey's, full page in colors, May.
Collier's, half page, May 3.
Literary Digest, two columns, May 17.
Metropolitan, full page in colors, June.
American Magazine, 200 lines, June.

The copy arranged for these advertisements is most attractive and some of it along lines not previously exploited.

How to Hook Up.

Certain of the advertisements will be adapted to local newspaper advertising and the promotion bureau now has in preparation a series of new electrotypes for use simultaneously with the issue of the magazine advertisements, all intended to link up with the national publicity. Readers of the magazines in every locality will easily recognize the connection, which is to the advantage of all florists using the electrotypes.

Three of these advertisements also will be featured in a new series of slides for use in the movies. The series will also include suitable slides for Easter and Memorial day. They will be of the same high quality as to color and design as the set previously issued and which is still in good demand, so much so that our bureau has just placed an order for an additional supply.

Both slides and electrotypes will be fully described in a broadside which is to be sent out in a few days, but to be sure that a copy will be received, florists are asked to make special request of the secretary for a copy.

Flat copies of the colored advertising pages, without printing on the back and suitable for framing and display, will also be mailed on request.

Progress of the Fund.

the campaign fund is set at $100,000, over one-third of which is already subscribed. We are, however, approaching the end of the first quarter of the year and should therefore be much farther advanced. The policy of making contributions need no longer be questioned. Results have proved that the campaign has been a wise move and the object of the committees now is to extend it, so as to increase the benefit within reach. The producers of citrus fruits inaugurated their publicity campaign with a levy of 1 cent per box on all shipments, for publicity. They now gladly pay 10 cents per box, so great has been the resulting benefit to their industry. This will be, without a shadow of doubt, our own experience—it might be said that it is already.

What the committees really want is early support. More can be done with a fund in the substance than in the shadow. If the whole fund were available now, a better disposition could be made of it and advantage taken of possibilities which cannot be expected to recur.

Florists everywhere, growers, wholesalers and retailers, who have not already subscribed, and there are many of them, are urged to help the committees to complete the fund at the earliest possible date, so that best results may be secured.

If you, Mr. Reader, have not yet subscribed, now is the time when your subscription will insure its fullest value.

The secretary read his financial report, which was accompanied by a certificate of audit. On motion, the report was referred to a committee of three for official audit, President Ammann appointing the following on the committee: Benjamin Hammond, C. C. Pollworth and Joseph A. Manda.

General Fund Depleted.

Treasurer J. J. Hess then presented his report. In making his presentation, he pointed out that expenses had exceeded the general fund to the extent of $4,875, and asked that something be done to increase the revenue of the society, in so far as this fund was concerned. The expense of the secretary's office had largely increased, on account of the great amount of work now connected with it. The deficiency was fully discussed, the discussion bringing out the fact that the National Flower Show, which was abandoned in the spring of 1919, was responsible for an expense of $2,100, and other expense had also been entailed, which was not likely to occur again.

The treasurer produced certificates from the banks verifying the bank balances. The report was, on motion, referred to the audit committee.

The work of the publicity committees was then taken up. Reports were received and considered and the situation fully discussed, as reported recently in the trade papers.

The Second Session.

Promptly after luncheon, January 31, President Ammann called the board to order for the second session. The publicity campaign was further discussed. The outcome was the carriage of a motion by Mr. Hess that the board recommend the adoption of an equitable plan, on lines such as practiced in Milwaukee and described by Mr. Pollworth, the same to be devised by the publicity finance committee, with a view to its operation another year.

Credits and Collections.

R. C. Kerr, chairman of the committee on credits and collections bureau, made a verbal report, covering the work of the committee since the St. Louis convention. The report was lengthy and showed that considerable progress had been made toward the inauguration of a service which, it was hoped, might ultimately meet the requirements of the trade. A resolution was passed, endorsing the work of the committee and recommending that it be continued, with full power to act.

Secretary Young presented and read a report, as superintendent of the St. Louis Trade Exhibition, which was duly Accommodations for Convention.

Vice-President E. A. Fetters reported the selection of a hall for the housing of the convention next August. The Arcadia dance auditorium, on Woodward avenue, Detroit, within fifteen minutes' walk of the Hotel Statler, he believed would furnish ample accommodations. He stated terms and other particulars in regard to its rental for the purpose. The board arranged to make a visit of inspection next day.

Mr. Fetters reported as to the situation in regard to the 1919 convention garden, explaining the difficulties met with concerning its establishment and the lack of interest evident on the part of prospective exhibitors. Mr. Breitmeyer also discussed the situation, and recommended that the idea of a convention garden be abandoned, at least for 1919. It being reported that the florists' interests of Cleveland, where the 1920 convention is to be held, were also in favor of entire abandonment, the board, after full discussion, on motion of Mr. Asmus, decided to recommend that at the next convention the constitution be so amended as to eliminate the convention garden committee.

The matter of the preparation of the convention program was discussed and the board decided to leave it in the hands of the secretary and the local committee. If it is thought desirable to provide speakers, the secretary and committee were empowered to meet expenses not to exceed $200.

The auditing committee presented its report, which was, on motion, accepted.

Sign Quarantine Brief.

Chairman W. F. Gude, of the committee on tariff and legislation, then made a report, which dealt largely with the work of the committee in reference to the action of the Federal Horticultural Board in establishing a quarantine against importation of plants, etc. He presented the brief prepared by the committee for signature by the directors and the same was completed and put in readiness for official presentation.

Mr. Gude further recommended that J. D. Eisele, of Dreer's, Riverton, N. J., and F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., be added to the committee on tariff and legislation and, on motion of Mr. Manda, the president was empowered to make the appointments.

Secretary Young asked for a ruling by the board as to the proper interpretation of the new by-law covering plant registrations, citing a case where descriptions of some delphiniums had been sent in for registration, but the same did not appear to cover any varietal differences, such as to make the plants separate and distinct from other varieties. The board discussed the matter at some length and expressed the opinion that the intent of the by-law was quite plain and anyone who had a plant which was rejected for registration and believed that the by-law did not cover the case, could come before a committee of judges, to be appointed by the society to examine and report in the matter.

matters, which included National Flower Show prospects, the society's new journal and the conveniences of the society's office in New York, the board adjourned to the Detroit Athletic Club, where the members were guests of Mr. Breitmeyer at an enjoyable dinner, tendered by him. There were also present, as guests of Mr. Breitmeyer, the directors and executive officers of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

The Third Session.

After the dinner, the board went into session and again opened the proceedings, with the publicity campaign as a topic for further discussion, Albert Pochelon, secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association and other officials of that organization taking part. Major O'Keefe, by request, spoke at some length of the plans that had been mapped out for the 1919 campaign, describing the advertisements it was proposed to insert in a list of national magazines, the illustrations to appear in connection with them, and the new features to be introduced.

The major also referred to the paragraph which has been proposed for insertion in the magazine advertisements: "When you see the sign, 'Say It with Flowers,' displayed by your florist, it shows that he is a member of the Society of American Florists. Give him your patronage, because he is aiding in the praiseworthy national work of making flowers more loved and used." He did not care to use this paragraph without the fullest authority and therefore requested that the board consider the advisability of using this wording and rule accordingly. A long discussion ensued and finally, upon motion, the text was approved and its use authorized.

A resolution was passed, providing that a recommendation of the audit committees that the funds of the National Flower Show be kept separate, be concurred in by the board.

Another resolution was passed, providing that the committee in charge of the convention program be instructed to endeavor to obtain a speaker from the Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Plant Industry, to define the work of the Bureau along horticultural lines.

Sports at the Convention.

Vice-president Fetters spoke of a movement to revive the custom of holding sports at the conventions and detailed different features which had been discussed locally. The board approving of the movement, the entire matter was left in the hands of the local committee.

The Fourth Session.

The members of the board in a body inspected the Arcadia auditorium, February 1, at 9 a. m., returning afterward to the Hotel Statler, where a business session opened at 10:30 a. m. E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., and George W. Hess, of Washington, D. C., took seats at this session.

President Ammann appointed Charles J. Graham, Henry Penn and Philip F. Kessler as a committee on final resolutions.

different trade bodies in regard to the plant embargo soon to go into operation and considerable correspondence in the matter. Some discussion ensued, during which Vice-president Fetters announced that he had received a message from the Federation of Women's Clubs to the effect that that body would like to coöperate with the society, as the members were much interested in the opposition to the embargo and would like an opportunity to interview senators and congressmen in Washington. On motion of Mr. Asmus, the president was directed to appoint a committee of two local men, with Mr. Gude, to confer with these ladies and help them in their approaching of the legislators.

Mr. Fetters, Mr. Breitmeyer and Mr. Gude were appointed on this committee. At the request of Mr. Gude, the board, on motion of E. G. Hill, went on record as favoring national appropriations to the U. S. Department of Agriculture in the interests of horticulture and floriculture.

The board discussed at some length arrangements in regard to the housing of the 1919 convention and trade exhibition and terms for leasing the Arcadia auditorium. On motion of Mr. Totty, the local committee was given power to execute a lease on the terms offered. The rate for space in the trade exhibition was fixed at 40 cents per square foot, as before.

ated organizations for suggestions as to the society's work, especially any which might interest the organizations represented. This led to a lengthy and most earnest discussion as to advantages to the society which might come through an extension of the affiliation idea. The trend of the discussion was in the direction of encouragement of effort to promote state organizations of florists, all of which, by complying with provisions laid down, should have representation on the society's board, the expenses of all delegates to be defrayed by the organizations represented. As a result of the discussion, it was, on motion, decided that a committee be appointed to prepare recommendations in the matter to the society at its next convention, full consideration being given to the number of florists in each state and the number of representations probable; also to the necessity for each organization to bear the expenses of its representative.

Mr. Penn brought up the matter of a recommendation to the society that it appropriate again this year the sum of $5,000 to the publicity campaign fund and moved that the board make such a recommendation. The motion was duly seconded, but a discussion was raised as to the financial condition of the society in respect to such an appropriation. The motion was eventually changed to read that it was the board's recommendation that the sum of $5,000 be made to the publicity fund, to be used, if needed, during the year's campaign.

Adjournment was then made for lunch.

The Fifth Session.

The session of the afternoon of February 1 being opened by the president, the first business taken up was that of appropriations. The appropriations of the previous year being read by the president and meeting the views of the board, on motion of Mr. Gude, the appropriations for 1919 were made the same. In the same connection, the matter of preparing the society's new journal for publication came up for discussion, as well as the care of the secretary's office while he was traveling in the interests of the society. On motion of Mr. Asmus, the sum of $50 per month was appropriated for the services of an assistant.

Secretary Young asked for the views of the board on the desirability of printing a membership list, in view of the fact that it had been customary to do so, and incorporate it in the volume of proceedings now abandoned. To print this separately would entail quite an expense. After discussion, the board expressed the opinion that the printed list of members could be dispensed with.

The board, feeling that the treasurer's salary was inadequate for the work he was now called upon to perform, on motion of Mr. Breitmeyer, voted to increase it from $200 to $300 per year.

The president announced the following as the committee on affiliations: Joseph H. Hill, C. E. Critchell and C. C. Pollworth.

W. F. Gude moved, in view of the great expense the society was now under in the prosecution of its work, that the board recommend an amendment to the constitution raising the dues to $5 per year and life memberships to $50, the first year's dues of annual members to cover initiation, as at present. The motion was duly seconded and carried.

The subject of the abandonment of the convention garden again coming up, the board expressed the view that the recommendation covering that action also should carry with it a recommendation that selection of a convention city be made only one year in advance, as formerly.

The treasurer reported a mortgage loan of $6,500, in favor of the society, maturing shortly, and requested instructions in the matter. On motion, the loan was ordered to be investigated and if found to be gilt-edged, left unrecalled, but if recalled, reinvestment was left to the treasurer and president.

Final Resolutions.

After the discussion of a few other matters of general and passing interest, not requiring action, the committee on final resolutions presented the following resolution, which was adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That this board, by unanimous vote, tenders its thanks for and appreciation of the generous hospitality extended by the Detroit Florists' Club and Mr. Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, during our sessions; also to the manage-

JUST A PASSING THOUGHT.

Have you ever thought for a moment why you entered a certain "movie" show in your own town, in preference to another? Just what caused you to show preference for one theater instead of another, if there were more than one in your own town? Think for a moment and perhaps you will say it was the way the film was advertised that drew you to it.

Now, if neither one of the theaters did any advertising, you would be a bit undecided as to which one you would go to. But, if a certain house placed itself just a little better by its announcements and its advertisements, ten chances to one that would be the place you would "take in," and that unconsciously, too.

Strange as it may seem, advertising a certain thing or place, regardless of what it may be, causes that particular thing or place to come instantly to your mind, providing, of course, it has merit; if it has not, it will do exactly the opposite thing—that of making you not use that particular thing or object. So, if we apply the same thought to towns where there are several florists, does it not seem the logical thing for the florist who steadily and persistently advertises his merchandise, to expect the same results?

We are now reaching the point where the florists' shops throughout the land are fast making strides, and those who are now using publicity, in conjunction with their other progressive thoughts, are going to come into their own.

We have been a bit slow in the past in catching up to this phase of the work of letting the public know that we have flowers to sell, besides the fact that they are used for certain occasions only. We know they can be used for everything, but what do we do to let the public know?

Now, with our national publicity campaign well started and our own promotion bureau in New York to help guide you, there is no excuse for your being overlooked. Tie up to it and it will be the biggest boom the floral industry has ever had. Watch the success those who are now using it are having and you will be convinced. Write to our secretary, John Young, for particulars and you will be well repaid.

Henry Penn,
Chairman S. A. F. Publicity Committee.

LINCOLN, NEB.

Thousands of square feet of glass in the greenhouses of C. H. Frey, local wholesale and retail florist, were broken by severe hailstorms March 14. There were five distinct storms, all within forty-five minutes and coming from different directions. The worst of the storms came from the southwest and lasted fully five minutes.

Little damage was done to the stock, as the weather was warm, but Mr. Frey is fearful lest zero weather visit this locality before he finishes the job of repairing his houses, for extremely low temperatures are usual here until the end of March.

During forty years in Nebraska, Mr. Frey never before saw a hailstorm which came so early in the year, he declares. Other florists in the locality did not suffer so much, in the opinion of Mr. Frey. His houses, he says, seemed to be the special target of the frozen rain.

Charlotte, N. C.—Robert Lockerbie has gone into business for himself and is erecting two plant houses, each 17x 100 feet, using Lord & Burnham material. It is his intention to make a specialty of Christmas and Easter pot plants.

The Twofold Economy of the IDEAL

The great economy in using the Ideal Tractor Lawn Mower rests on the fact that it will keep such a large acreage of lawn in perfect condition with a very minimum of labor.
Because the Ideal is a mower and roller in one. The roller is built as an integral part of the machine and the grass is rolled every time it is cut.
Moreover, it is easily converted into a power roller by substituting for the mower the small caster which we furnish. In early spring when heavy rolling is required it is only necessary to add a little extra weight.
Thus one machine and one man does quicker and better work than several men with several hand mowers and rollers.

Cuts Four to Five Acres a Day

The mower has a 30-inch cut and one man with one of these machines can cut four to five acres of lawn a day, on an operating expense of about fifty cents for fuel and oil. The Ideal is of extremely simple design, and all complicated clutches and gears have been eliminated. All the operator has to do is to guide the machine and operate the starting and stopping lever.

Uses Tractor Principle

The cutting blades operate by the traction of their side wheels upon the ground, just the same as the blades on a hand mower operate. This eliminates the difficulties that are almost sure to occur where an attempt is made to drive the blades direct by power from the engine.

Cuts Close to the Walks, Trees, Flower Beds and Shrubbery

With the Ideal a man can work just as close to various obstacles as with a hand mower. The mower is hung at the front in such a manner that it turns easily and is guided around corners, flower-beds, trees, etc., without difficulty.

Five Day Trial — Satisfaction Guaranteed

Write for details of our five day trial offer. Ideal Power Lawn Mowers are sold on a positive guarantee of satisfaction and we will willingly refund money on any machine that does not prove satisfactory when properly operated.
You can secure this Ideal through your hardware dealer or direct from our factory. Write today for special literature.

Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co.,
It is a little early to pass a final opinion on the Ideal Power Mower I purchased this fall, but can say that so far it has demonstrated its time and labor saving features in a forceful manner. From what I have seen of it, I consider it a good investment for anyone having any considerable amount of lawn to keep up.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; thirty-seventh annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 24, 25, 26, 1919.

THERE probably never will be an ideal growing season, but thus far the Californians have excellent prospects for the 1919 seed harvest.

IT looks as though the peak of the mail order season may have come earlier this year than ever before. Usually "Big Monday" is in the last week of March.

THERE will be interesting doings at Hotel Sherman, Chicago, in June. Without intention of so doing, the American Seed Trade Association and the American Association of Nurserymen have chosen the same week and place for their annual conventions.

THE acreage under seed crops in California is variously estimated as from ten to thirty per cent less than last year. One of the conservative contract growers figures the total acreage at seventy-five per cent of last year's and says there is a lot of it that still represents the planter's speculation.

GEORGE TEGELAAR, of Drevon-Tegelaar & Co., who makes his home in Chicago, will leave next week for Holland, where he will spend a few days on business, proceeding thence to Ollioules, France, where he will remain until the firm's bulb crop is lifted. He expects to return to the United States about August 1.

RED CLOVER MAY BE EXPORTED.

The War Trade Board issued a revised export conservation list March 17. Red clover no longer appears on the list and is the last seed item to be stricken from the list of seeds over the movement of which the government exercised some measure of control during the war. All seeds of whatever kind and character now may be exported without license. The war thus definitely ends so far as the seed trade is concerned.

DUTCH BULB PRICES.

The Dutch bulb situation is a surprise to most of the buyers in the United States; they had expected that the end of the war would see a prompt change in trend which would indicate a return toward more or less normal conditions, but instead there is an accentuation of the conditions which prevailed last year. Things are worse than ever.

There was a disposition to regard last season's prices as unwarrantably high, but prices for the 1919 crop are much higher. It appears that the exporters have got together and agreed on uniform prices, packing charges and terms, the whole presenting a proposition which puts bulb forcing in America on quite a new basis and which, therefore, puts the bulb dealers here in the position of speculating on what the trade will do in the face of the greatly increased prices.

Of course the Holland exporters predicate their argument on the greatly decreased acreage of bulbs, the high cost of doing business and on the expectation that the markets closed by the war will be reopened before shipping time.

There now are abundant transportation facilities for exporting bulbs from

THERKILDSON'S NEW JOB.

Last week N. W. Ayer & Son, advertising agents, Philadelphia, made the following announcement:

It gives us pleasure to announce that W. F. Therkildson has come to advertising headquarters as head of the agricultural, horticultural and farm implement division.

Mr. Therkildson enjoys a wide acquaintance in the seed and nursery trade, having been for years the advertising and sales manager and catalogue compiler for the W. Atlee Burpee Co., the well known seed house. Prior to that, Mr. Therkildson was associated in a similar capacity with the Storrs & Harrison Co., the world's largest nurserymen.

The specialized knowledge and broad, practical experience in his own line of work which Mr. Therkildson brings to this organization, will be reflected in a broader service for Ayer clients.

Mr. Therkildson is secretary of the Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia, president of the Ohio Society of Philadelphia and a member of the publicity committee of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce. He it was who, as chairman of the S. A. F. committee on publicity, prepared the plan which inspired that organization to undertake its present publicity campaign and which, in turn, led to a similar market development project by the nurserymen.

NORTHRUP-KING MANAGEMENT.

At a meeting of the stockholders of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, held March 17, Edwin B. Northrup, secretary, tendered his resignation, which was accepted. Two more were added to the directorate, C. A. Burnham and George C. Thomson. The directors elected the following officers: President, C. C. Massie; vice-president and treasurer, L. M. King; secretary, C. A. Burnham.

Mr. Burnham is sales manager and has been connected with Northrup, King & Co. for sixteen years, filling within that period several positions, including office manager, credit manager and advertising manager. Mr. Thomson is manager of the garden seed department and has been identified with the concern for the last eleven years. He has had long experience in the seed business, both in this country and in Scotland, covering a period of thirty-five years.

BERMUDA GRASS IN THE SOUTH.

Please give me some information about Bermuda grass, stating when to sow it and mentioning any other particulars that might be useful. I am seventy-seven miles south of Memphis.

J. H. A.—Tenn.

Bermuda grass, a perennial known botanically as Cynodon dactylon, is often considered a troublesome weed where it is not wanted, but is a favorite pasture and lawn grass in certain hot, arid regions where many other grasses will not grow.

Peter Henderson & Co., of New York city, speak of it as follows in one of their catalogues: "This perennial grass, of low-creeping habit, is eminently adapted for the southern states, as it withstands drought and the scorching rays of the sun better than any other variety. This grass is noted for the peculiar habit of its growth; the wiry roots of the grass, in running over the surface of the ground, form a strong, fibrous matting. It is preëminently a pasture grass, rooting at the joints and forming a closely interwoven turf that withstands the grazing and trampling of stock; the numerous leaves produced from the base of the plant furnish excellent summer pasturage in sections where other grasses burn out. For lawns in the hot southern states it is highly prized, as while all other grasses are burned up during the hot season, Bermuda grass will remain green, and, if regularly mown, it will make quite a velvety carpet. The only drawback is that in winter it looks a little brown, but in the southern states an all-the-year-round green lawn can be maintained by sowing English rye grass every fall at the rate of fifty pounds per acre and harrowing or raking it into the Bermuda grass sod. Bermuda grass seed should be sown in the spring, as it will not germinate until warm weather comes. Sow at the rate of six pounds per acre.'' Further particulars may be obtained from other leading seedsmen.

A label on the cover announces a change of prices and a revised, condensed price list is enclosed.

W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, Ill.—Two seed catalogues, general and wholesale, both well illustrated and otherwise of high quality, in spite of the present expensiveness of catalogue-making. The general catalogue consists of 112 pages, in an artistic, embossed, brown and white cover. The wholesale list is condensed to thirty-two pages, printed on a good grade of cream-tinted paper. Besides seeds, bulbs, roots and plants, the books offer a large line of general nursery stock, tools and sundries.

Much regret has been expressed among local florists over the death of Myron J. Walters, director of school gardens in the Pittsburgh public schools, following a year's illness. Mr. Walters, who was 36 years old, died March 13 at his home on South Neville street. He was born at Clifton Springs, N. Y., and was a graduate of the University of Rochester. Prior to coming to Pittsburgh about four years ago, Mr. Walters was at the head of the science and agriculture department of the State Normal school, at Cortland, N. Y. Prior to serving as director of Pittsburgh's school gardens, he was a lecturer for about a year in the University of Pittsburgh. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Florence K. PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Seattle, Wash.—The University of Washington is planting a forestry reserve which is expected to be one of the largest in the world. Students taking nursery courses will work in the reserve and use it for working out practical problems.

ROY WILCOX GOES WEST.

One of the most important deals in the history of the trade in southern California was consummated this week, when Roy F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia., purchased the greenhouses and nursery of Jacob Dieterich, of Montebello, near Los Angeles, Cal.

Mr. Wilcox is the eldest son of the late J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs. He recently disposed of his interest in J. F. Wilcox & Sons to his mother and brothers and has been wintering in southern California. He decided to locate permanently in the Los Angeles section and his purchase assures that he will have enough to do to keep him interested. In addition to the large greenhouse establishment formerly the property of Dieterich & Turner, but more recently run individually by Mr. Dieterich, Mr. Wilcox has bought the large lath houses and stock of palms, also the nursery stock growing in the open air. The land comprises some thirty-three and one-half acres and is one of the most valuable greenhouse properties in southern California.

H. R. Richards.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

During the earlier part of the week all stock was arriving in better shape, with the exception of violets, but a heavy rain which fell March 13 will doubtless result in some damage and was too late to help the violets much. Roses are fine. Carnations are improving and other sorts of smaller stock are good. Bulbous stock has been on the short side in comparison with other years, but Emperor, the standby in late daffodils, is helping out. Freesias continue to come in, but they do not ship so well as they did. Sweet peas are fine and the price keeps up well for the time of year. Retailers all report fair business, and a fresh outbreak of influenza in some of the adjacent territories makes the shipping business more lively. Plumosus and other greens continue scarce and high in price. There is practically no smilax to be had at any price.

Various Notes.

The sympathy of the trade and many other friends goes out to Mr. Chisholm, representative of the Beverley Hills Nursery, in the death of his brother-in-law, Jake Woods, well known in sporting circles here. Mr. Woods was instantly killed when the truck he was driving was struck by an airline car. His son, who was riding with him, was unhurt, but his sister-in-law was badly injured.

At the meeting of the Los Angeles Florists' Club, held March 11, the election of officers resulted as follows: President, F. R. Hills, to follow F. Borden; treasurer, A. Goldenson, to follow F. R. Hills; secretary, F. Borden, to follow H. R. Richards. There were present A. Knopf, F. Borden, C. Groen, F. R. Hills, A. Goldenson, J. Rolleri and W. Armacost, as members, and C. L. Washburn, of Chicago, and J. Austin Shaw, as visitors. A committee was appointed to look into the matter of the place of meeting and the arrangements for the dinner. Mr. Washburn made an interesting talk on the question of cost of doing business. He said that while the cost of production had gone ahead by big leaps, the higher values and better business conditions had more than equalized matters, a statement that others present seemed to agree to. Mr. Shaw led a discussion on coöperation in work of all kinds connected with the business and his remarks were well received. W. Armacost brought up the subject of brands for flowers and an instructive discussion followed with regard to standardizing flowers. Except from the point of view of attendance, it was a good meeting.

The Redondo Floral Co. says that business has again picked up since the quiet time of a week or two ago. Mr. Knopf says this is no doubt due in part to the better class of stock coming in. C. Lewis is putting in part of his time on his chicken ranch, as a side issue.

C. Navlet, of San Jose and San Francisco, is a visitor this week, being in the market for all classes of stock. He purchased at least one car of nursery stock, which he is shipping to his nursery at San Jose.

Harry Hansen, formerly of the staff of the Redondo Floral Co., is now with the Broadway Florists.

The purchase of the beautiful Catalina island by a well known merchant has been talked about a great deal and one especially good thing has come of it. The owner has decided that nature has been there a long time working and the landscape man must come second. Conservation of the native trees, shrubs and flowers is the order, combined with whatever new planting may be found necessary. J. M. Grant, who has had a good deal of forestry experience under the government of this country and of countries in Europe and Africa, has been chosen to take charge of the island along this line and there is little doubt that the choice is a wise one. Trails, check dams and other conservation methods are to be adopted, the trails leading to portions of the island that were formerly inaccessible to the ordinary tourist climber. All who know him will wish Mr. Grant the best of success at his important post.

Albert F. Amling, of Maywood, Ill., and Mrs. Amling have arrived at Orange, Cal., where Mr. Amling has a sister. E. C. Amling and family, of Chicago, already were at Orange, where they took CAPITOLA, CAL.

Associated with James A. Brown, manager of the Brown Bulb & Berry Ranch, is W. C. Roberts, brother-in-law of the proprietor, who has been for three years professor of soil chemistry in the University of California. Mr. Roberts will act as assistant manager and will have charge of growing seeds and bulbs.

Mr. Brown says that he has just terminated the most successful gladiolus bulb season the ranch has ever had. Stock is so well sold up that the manager is expecting to have everything cleaned up within a short time and is planning to start on something else when that comes to pass, possibly Freesia Purity. That item will be only about sixty per cent of the crop of last year, with all growers, because of the fact that there was an extra large crop last year. Those who had their bulbs in low lands suffered a big loss, as this vicinity has had more rains than usual this year.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

The market in bulbous stock declined the last week. However, outside stock will be plentiful in the next week or ten days, judging by the present outlook. Stock from California, such as roses, tulips and greens, still is the bulk of the stock offered. The demand for funeral flowers has been light for some time, but now that the big shipyard strike is off, it probably will be on the increase again. Counter sales are expected to strengthen. Some freesias are coming in from the south. They are good quality flowers, but a little short of stem. Orchids are scarce, as are sweet peas and all small flowers, excepting violets. The offerings in this popular flower are local, as well as from California.

Various Notes.

H. A. Crouch, manager of the Woodland Flower Shop, is on the road back to health.

P. F. Rosaia left March 8 for Portland. From there he will travel as far south as Los Angeles. He is on a combined business and recreation trip.

Jean Hamley, of L. W. McCoy's, left this week for Chicago on business. He will remain for a few days, and expects to visit other eastern cities.

A. La Gros, of the Broadway Floral Co., Everett, Wash., was a visitor here last week. W. S. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

In the aggregate, arrivals are little, if any, heavier than they were a week ago and the general demand has not dropped off enough since Lent started to affect the situation noticeably. As a matter of fact, a number of elaborate social events have been observed here in the last few days, requiring the liberal use of flowers. Shipping orders are holding up well also, showing that business in other places besides San Francisco is fairly good, at least. The outlook for Easter is considered unusually bright. With the war over, many of the "boys" home from the front, and general prosperity prevailing, the florists here figure people will spend more liberally for flowers this spring than ever before. There is a considerable difference of opinion regarding the prospects for Easter stock, but it is generally supposed the supply as a whole will be ample to take care of almost every requirement in good shape. True, there will be few Easter lilies, the stand-by of former years, but little difficulty is anticipated in getting purchasers to make other selections, when it becomes known they cannot get the lilies.

Bulbous flowers are not in sufficiently heavy supply to dominate the market, which means that roses, carnations and other staples suffer little from competition created by seasonable offerings. The danger of a flood of daffodils is past, the first crop being gone, and the later varieties, now starting to arrive, are said to be only a light crop. Tulips are in moderate supply and the same may be said of anemones and ranunculi. Outdoor freesias now replace the indoor offerings to a large extent. There is practically no change in the rose situation, there being about enough blooms to supply the demand, but no surplus to speak of. Carnations clean up closely at 75 cents a bunch, which price has prevailed for some little time. In miscellaneous outdoor stock, marigolds, gypsophilas, myosotis, etc., work in to good advantage. More orchids could be used. Plumosus is a little more plentiful.

California Dahlia Society.

The annual dahlia show of the Dahlia Society of California will be held at the Palace hotel, San Francisco, September 4, 5 and 6, as in former years. Many valuable donations have already been offered for prizes, the list being headed by President T. A. Burns, who has offered a silver trophy cup for both

Various Notes.

The obituary of Adolph Schwerin, of Visitacion, Cal., is printed on the obituary page of The Review of this week.

Victor Podesta, of Podesta & Baldocchi, reports business seasonably good, and is looking forward to a splendid Easter demand for cut flowers and plants.

Mrs. Bartlett, of the staff of Fred C. Jaeger & Son, left a few days ago to visit her mother in Los Angeles, Cal., where Mrs. Bartlett formerly made her home. Mr. Jaeger has no complaints to make about business, as sales have held up well since Lent started. Considerable interest was noted here in St. Patrick's day novelties.

Domoto Bros. are bringing in a fine crop of tulips, for which they report a ready sale.

S. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., Inc., is gratified over the condition of the market here, the supply of flowers being about equal to the demand. Judging by early inquiries, he looks for a heavy Easter shipping business.

Peter Ferrari is enthusiastic over Rose Columbia and is planning to plant more heavily. He has a fine cut at present, the buds being large and the foliage all that could be desired. At his place, orchids are a little off crop this month, but he expects to have plenty about April 1. He notes a particularly strong demand for phalænopsis since there is no valley to be had here.

In lieu of Easter lilies, J. A. Axell, manager of the E. W. McLellan Co.,

says his firm is preparing to handle quantities of callas for Easter. The feature of their rose business is the exceptionally fine cut of American Beauties from their East Bay Nursery. The supply cleans up almost before the flowers reach the Bush street headquarters.

In anticipation of a banner Easter business, Fred Bertrand, manager of the retail business of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., is preparing a large assortment of distinctive plant novelties. He sent a load of baskets down to the nursery this week and will go down himself a little later to supervise their make-up. He has increased the size of his staff considerably of late, but says he still needs another good floor salesman for the Powell street store. As far as Mr. Bertrand can ascertain, Lent does not seem to be interfering much with business.

B. M. Joseph was forced to hire extra help this week to take care of a large decoration at the palatial home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace D. Pillsbury, the occasion being the marriage of their daughter, Miss Olivia, to Alfred de Ropp, Jr., which was one of the most elaborate social events of the kind here since the war. Greens, orchids and some of the other materials used were shipped from Chicago. The work was done under the personal supervision of George Wagner. About fifty dozen American Beauty roses were utilized, together with about seventy-five dozen long-stemmed Russells and quantities of other flowers. Several other good-sized decorations, before and after the Pillsbury affair, tended to accentuate the rush at Joseph's. Part of the crew worked all night for two nights and Mr. Wagner made two trips to Sacramento, Cal., within the week in connection with decorations in the state capital. Having recovered from her recent illness, Mrs. Bianchini, wife of John Bianchini, buyer at Joseph's, has been helping out at the store for a few days.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have executed two substantial Chinese wedding decorations recently, the work being done under the direction of Peter L. Rosaia. At the latest wedding, which took place at the Chinese Presbyterian church, quantities of spring blossoms, roses and other flowers were used. The bride's bouquet was of cyclamen and phalænopsis, while the bridesmaids carried bouquets of pink sweet peas. Dainty baskets were provided for the flower girls.

Charles Shellgrain, of Shellgrain & Ritter, reports business 100 per cent better than he had expected for this time of the year.

Alleged heirs, scattered from Ireland to Oakland, Cal., of the late John Kelly, at one time gardener for the late Governor Leland Stanford, recently resumed their contest of the last testament of the decedent, which bequeaths an estate valued at $175,000 to charitable institutions.

P. F. Rosaia, of Rosaia Bros., Seattle, Wash., has been spending several days in San Francisco. He reports stock scarce in the northern city, but business holding up well, except for that handicap. S. Rosaia, of the same family, announces he will produce a lot of new gladioli at Colma, Cal., this year.

The Thorsted Floral Co., of Oakland, Cal., is preparing to move to a new location at 1138 Broadway, about April 1. The new place will provide more room and better facilities than the present quarters and much care will be taken to have the new store as convenient as possible, as well as attractive.

Commercial dahlia growers of this vicinity report an unusually active opening of the spring season, with a constantly augmented demand for California dahlias.

Peter Perkins, of Visalia, Cal., suffered a fire loss recently. M. M.

DAVENPORT, R. ISLAND, MOLINE.

The Market.

A satisfactory volume of business was done the last week, with a considerable shortening up in the supply of cut flowers. Roses were in sufficient quantity and of good quality. Carnations were in fair supply, but there were not enough to fill all orders. A few callas and Easter lilies were to be had. Peas were sufficient, with daffodils, tulips and narcissi short of requirements. Potted plants are not in big supply, nor is the stock up to what might be expected. What few there are, are only fair grade stock, with really good, fancy specimens entirely lacking. With Easter not far away, the outlook for sufficient plant stock is not encouraging.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held at the residence of William Knees, Moline, Ill., March 13. President Henry Pauli presided. The usual order of business being disposed of, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, William Goos, Bettendorf, Ia.; recording secretary, William Knees, Jr., Moline, Ill.; financial secretary, Ludwig Stapp, Rock Island, Ill.; treasurer, William Knees, Sr., Moline, Ill.; vice-presidents, one for each city, R. E. De Rycke, Moline, Ill.; Henry Meyer, Rock Island, Ill.; Harry Bills, Davenport, Ia.; P. G. Pearson, Bettendorf, Ia.; trustees, Ed. Patten, Davenport, Ia.; Henry Gaethje, Rock Island, Ill.; Chris Sorensen, Moline, Ill.

William Goos invited the club for the April meeting. Mr. Anderson will present the topic for discussion, "Lorraine Types of Begonias and Cyclamens."

Supper was served and a vote of thanks was given Mr. and Mrs. Knees for their hospitality.

Various Notes.

William Knees showed a fine vase of miniature hyacinths. He also has a fine crop of snapdragons, free from rust.

J. Staack & Sons have had a fine cut of exceptionally fine daffodils and tulips, which were readily disposed of.

The greenhouses of Harry M. Bills, which were closed last fall because of shortage of help, due to war conditions, will soon be in operation again.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. E. Boehm, of Davenport, the double wedding of their two daughters was held March 13. Miss Helen Boehm became the bride of Leslie Ririck, of Iowa City, and Miss Frances Boehm became the bride of J. A. Denekas, of Washington, D. C. Mr. Denekas was a sergeant in the army and for this reason the decorations were elaborately carried out in the national colors, both cut flowers and potted plants being used, as well as flags, banked with palms and ferns.

W. G.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The market is being kept clean, the demand being for funeral flowers mostly. Roses have been cleaning up well, the demand being mainly for shorts. Carnations are none too plentiful. White carnations advanced in price a little, because of the big demand for coloring. Bulbous stock is in good demand, especially tulips, zephyranthes and freesias. Daffodils are a little more plentiful and clean up well at $5 and $6. Both calla and Easter lilies are in demand, the supply being limited. The demand for violets has been better the last week. Snapdragon is cleaned up on sight. Pansies are picked up readily, as are other novelties, including primroses, schizanthus, mignonette and myosotis. Peas are arriving in quantity and clean up well at $1.50 to $3.00 per hundred. Greens are still short of the demand.

Various Notes.

The funeral of Frank Friedley was attended by many local and out-of-town florists. The floral offerings were the most numerous seen at any funeral in the city for some time.

A. J. Saywell has opened a flower store at East Ninetieth street and Superior avenue, where he will carry a first-class line. Mr. Saywell was formerally located at East One Hundred Tenth street and Superior avenue, but closed this store on account of conditions incident to the war.

Portland, Ind.—Robert E. Artman is planning to go into business for himself, building greenhouses in some southwestern town where the competition is light.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Floral decorations at various recent social affairs in Milwaukee in honor of Manuel de Freyrey Santander and his bride have been elaborate and beautiful, the local florists benefiting considerably.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; secretary, Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Mo.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; forty-fourth annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1919.

THE dates set for the A. A. N. convention at Hotel Sherman, Chicago, coincide with the dates selected by the seedsmen for their annual meeting at the same place.

THERE are observers who believe a deluge of European nursery stock is about to descend on the United States, growers over there being anxious to unload before our quarantine goes into effect.

THE Department of Agriculture apparently appreciates that unless this country at once begins to produce many seedlings and stocks heretofore imported, the approaching quarantine will be severely felt by large numbers of farmers and fruit growers. Consequently a campaign of departmental publicity notices has been started, designed, without reference to the quarantine, to offset some of its effects.

THE BEST HARDY SHRUBS.

Authority Gives List.

"What are the best shrubs introduced in recent years?"

This question was asked of Professor Charles S. Sargent, of the Arnold Arboretum, at Jamaica Plain, Mass., the other day. It would be hard to find a man better qualified to answer such a question, for great numbers of new plants of all kinds are constantly being tried out in the grounds of the arboretum to determine the ones most suitable for growing in the gardens of the United States.

In discussing this subject, Professor Sargent chose to select those shrubs which are hardy and will thrive over a large part of the New England and middle western states. This classification would automatically rule out rhododendrons and azaleas, for these plants will not grow in a soil containing a large percentage of lime.

At the head of the list, Professor Sargent placed four of the cotoneasters of western China, C. hupehensis, C. calocarpa, C. soongarica and C. nitens. These shrubs were all brought from China by Ernest H. Wilson, the famous plant hunter of the arboretum. They are admirably adapted to northern climatic conditions and may be used either for borders or for specimen plants. After flowering, they are especially attractive by reason of the wealth of showy berries they carry.

Names Chinese Roses.

Of newer shrubs, Professor Sargent named two Chinese roses, Rosa Hugonis and R. Jackii. The former is regarded by rosarians as a splendid acquisition to the list of hardy roses. It flowers early in the season and its blooms are large, single and of a pale yellow, set so close together on the stems that they touch. R. Jackii is a Korean rose which was introduced by Mr. Jack, of the arboretum staff, for whom it was named.

It is of a late-flowering habit, and its pure white blooms are nearly twice the size of those of R. multiflora.

Two lilacs are included in the list, both from China. One of these, Syringa reflexa, is thus named on account of the pendent habit of the sprays of bloom, so vividly in contrast to the upright position of other lilac blooms. The other lilac is a native of northern China and bears the name of S. Sweginzowii.

Diervilla florida venusta is the name of a species of the weigela, as this plant is often called, selected to grace this list, as the handsomest of its class.

Rare Shrub of Early Habit.

A rare shrub which is of early habit is the Prinsepia sinensis. Its leaves unfold earlier than any other in the arboretum, after which it is covered with almost innumerable yellow flowers.

Corylopsis gotoana is the name of a Japanese shrub which is given a place in the list. This bears drooping clusters of yellow flowers before the leaves appear.

Æsculus georgiana and Spiræa Veitchii complete the list. The former is a dwarf buckeye, with large red and yellow flowers borne in compact clusters. The special value of the latter lies in the fact that it is one of the latest blooming white-flowered spiræas.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

Business has been brisk the last week, with a good supply of cut flowers and plants. Considering the fact that it is Lent, a large amount of flowers is used for table bouquets and corsages. Roses find a ready market, with a small amount of poorer stock left over. Ophelias are the most popular on the market. A good stock of other roses, such as Russells, Hoosier Beauties, Columbias and Wards, also are coming into the market. Good spring stock is scarce. This includes jonquils, narcissi and freesias. Darwin tulips are a treat to the retailer, as the other varieties are poor stock. Carnations have stiffened up in the demand, there not being so large a quantity on hand as during the previous week. Plants are selling well, there being plenty of all kinds, the small ones retailing around $2.

Various Notes.

Several florists attended the funeral of Mrs. E. A. Scribner, wife of one of Detroit's oldest florists.

Joseph Streit and John Klang attended the funeral of Frank Friedley, at Cleveland.

The Detroit Florists' Club held its regular meeting March 12. Harry Breitmeyer gave an interesting talk on his experiences in France.

Joseph Streit spent a day away from his work recently to attend the wedding of his eldest daughter.

The Detroit Florists' Bowling Club met March 13 with the following results:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th
Fetters	180	190	146	183
P. Papes	156	138	137	214
Rabe	167	140	174	153
Charvot	188	168	147	164
Moss	123	136	185	159
H. Taylor	201	128	163	128

Peter Papes bowled high game with the score of 214. E. A. Fetters had the high average of 175.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange gave a banquet to the local florists. The attendance was 250 persons. Philip Breitmeyer was toastmaster. There were several vaudeville acts in the way of entertainment. J. F. Sullivan, president of the Detroit Florists' Club, made a talk on the need for requesting of nonmembers to join the club. H. E. The Market.

During last week the supply became much heavier than it was and the market eased up greatly. However, nearly everything coming into the wholesale houses sells readily. Shipping business holds up well. Roses are more plentiful than they were at the last writing, but still they are cleaning up easily. The carnation market has eased up considerably. Some excellent Easter lilies, callas and rubrums are available and find a good market. Sweet peas are plentiful and are selling well. The list of bulbous offerings includes jonquils, daffodils, tulips, Dutch hyacinths, freesias and Narcissus poeticus. Single violets are plentiful, while a good supply of doubles is available. Snapdragons continue to find a good market. Among other offerings are calendulas, mignonette, wallflowers, forget-me-nots and baby primroses. Greens of all kinds meet with a good demand.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has been getting some of the best sweet peas ever seen in this market from Henry Koester.

Arthur Becker is at the store again, having recovered from his recent illness.

Mrs. H. V. Thaden has sold her flower store to E. H. Urlage.

Walter Gray has been selling some fancy callas and freesias to L. H. Kyrk.

The William Murphy Co. has been having an excellent run on home-grown sweet peas during the last fortnight. Last week they disposed of 46,000, for one grower alone.

Edward H. Fries has been seriously ill during the last fortnight.

FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

S. J. Goddard called attention to the Dorner seedlings on trial here and anyone who has seen them growing in the two places is at once convinced of the wisdom of testing out under entirely different conditions. Curiously enough, the plants are in better shape here than at home, which is explained by the setback at Lafayette, which will take another season before conditions become normal again. Three highly promising seedlings were noted—a white, No. 141-15; a scarlet, No. 167-12, and No. 136, a lovely pink which might be classed as an improved morning-glory. Pink Sensation, Laddie and Rosalia are bringing the highest prices in this market. Mr. Goddard observed that they are monuments to the Dorner boys, although it is not believed that the climax has been attained. Missing one year means a great deal and will make the debutantes the more valuable.

Goddard's crimson, Doris, is a big favorite and takes well in England, to which country a shipment of unrooted cuttings was recently made by parcel post. They arrived in fine shape. A seedling snapdragon was noted. It is of a deeper shade than Keystone, the color of which is the only drawback to that popular variety.

Dorner's seedling chrysanthemums are giving a good account of themselves, while a bench of roses, consisting of Russell, Premier, Columbia and Rose Marie, proves that the same treatment is agreeable to all. W. M.

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

THE FUEL SITUATION.

In its weekly review of the coal situation the Coal Age says that signs are not wanting that the bituminous coal market is now on the mend, and both prices and production are already beginning to reflect the change in conditions. Coals of good quality are not being sold at less than the recent government prices and operators as a rule are adhering closely to their policy of producing only what the market will absorb.

Operators in all the producing districts are watching the current market conditions closely and efforts are many to close contracts for the next coal year —April 1, 1919, to March 31, 1920.

The continued drop in the output of soft coal for the last six weeks was checked during the week ended March 1 by the production of 8,088,000 net tons, an increase of more than 363,000 net tons over the output for the week ended February 22. As compared to the production of the similar period in 1918, however, this is a drop of 3,519,000 net tons.

"Unsettled" is the word that best characterizes the present condition of the anthracite industry. Even with the mines working only half time the operators find it difficult to dispose of their output. Instead of the decrease in prices loudly heralded in some quarters, the announcement has been made that beginning with May 1 there will be an increase in the price of domestic anthracite of 10 cents a ton each month until a maximum increase of 50 cents a ton is reached September 1. The so-called independent companies will increase their prices during the same period 15 cents per ton.

The production of anthracite during the week ended March 1 is estimated at 1,102,000 net tons, a slight decrease over the preceding week's output, but 834,000 net tons lower than the production during the corresponding week in 1918. The total output of anthracite for the coal year to date is 87,122,000 net tons.

THE RETURNS ARE TOO LOW.

Finding that I am unable to maintain a satisfactory temperature in the greenhouses of which I recently took charge, I am applying to The Review for aid and am enclosing a sketch of the heating system. When the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero, the highest temperature that I can obtain in the houses is 45 degrees. Even to get that result requires constant firing, as well as close attention to prevent the water from boiling over and leaving the pipes empty. I suspect that the trouble is sluggish circulation, but I am at a loss to know the cause of the difficulty and the best way to remedy it.

The city water system, which has a pressure of about sixty-five pounds, is connected to the return pipes and I had planned to close the expansion tank with an air cushion, but was unable to do so on account of the boiling proclivities. You will note, on referring to the sketch, that the flow pipe has a fall from the boiler end of the houses southward; is this right? Please recommend such changes as you consider best to put the system in the most serviceable condition. I wish to maintain a temperature of 52 degrees.

A proposed house, 30x60, also is shown in the sketch. I wish to build this house on ground that is about three feet higher than the present greenhouse floors, and ultimately I would raise the old houses to the same level if such a change would not interfere with the circulation. The house 30x60 will contain 2,420 square feet of glass and I estimate that twenty-three runs of 2-inch pipe, fed by two runs of 3-inch flow pipes, will heat the house to the desired temperature of 60 degrees. For another proposed house, 12x80, with 1,256 square feet of glass, I have figured that a 3-inch flow and six runs of 2-inch pipe will be needed, for a temperature of 45 degrees.

H. G. H.—Kan.

The two houses are even-span, eighty feet in length, and have sashbars ten feet eight inches and eleven feet one inch in length, respectively. The radiation in each of the houses is furnished by one 4-inch overhead flow pipe and nine 2-inch returns. The returns appear to be practically on a level with the bottom of the firepot of the boiler and have a fall of one foot. There are 515 square feet of exposed concrete wall and 5,252 square feet of glass in the roof of the house.

The radiating surface is made up of 146 linear feet of 4-inch pipe, 75 feet of 3-inch pipe and 1,200 feet of 2-inch pipe, with which there should be no difficulty in maintaining a temperature of 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero, if the houses are well built. The reason for the sluggish circulation and the boiling over of the water is that the returns are too low to secure a good circulation. The difficulty can be overcome in part by closing the system and relying on the city water system for expansion, but care should be taken to see that the service valve is not closed so long as the expansion tank is cut off.

The proper way to remedy the difficulty is to raise the level of the returns two or, better yet, three feet. If the slope of the pipes is uniform it is not necessary to have more than four inches of fall in the length of the houses, and such a change of slant would be of some benefit.

While a satisfactory circulation can generally be secured when there is a slight difference in the level of the returns in the different houses, it is better to have them on practically the same level.

While two 3-inch flows might be used in the new house 30x66, which is to be heated to 60 degrees, we would prefer to use five 2½-inch flow pipes and fifteen 2-inch returns. In the house 12x80 feet, to be heated to 45 degrees, the suggested radiation would give good results, although two 2½-inch flows and four 2-inch returns would answer if they can be placed one foot above the top of the boiler.

The Market.

Spring flowers are coming into the market in quantities sufficient for the trade. Prices, though higher than normal, are considerably lower than they were a few weeks ago. A few azaleas are coming into the market. There is likely to be a big shortage in these this year, however. St. Patrick's day flowers and novelties had a fair sale.

The Market.

There has been a slight falling off in the call for cut flowers in the city trade, but the out-of-town demand is as strong as ever. Roses and carnations are excellent and are arriving in large quantities, but clean up each day. Sweet peas are abundant and have a good call, being the favorite corsage flower just now. Snapdragons are fine, with long, stiff stems. Violets are not so popular as they were formerly. The market is well supplied with cattleyas, but they are moving satisfactorily. Bulbous stock is more abundant, jonquils especially so. The market is well supplied with pot plants just now, tulips, hyacinths, jonquils and daffodils being abundant. Other offerings include Primula malacoides, schizanthus, fuchsias, freesias and yellow callas. Pansies in 6 and 8-inch pans sell well. St. Patrick's day business was good, unusually large numbers of shamrocks in 2 and 3-inch pots being disposed of. Green flowers sold well, especially carnations and sweet peas. There was a good call for novelties.

Various Notes.

B. Lammerman, proprietor of the City Floral Co., was left so weak by an attack of Spanish influenza that he will be unable to attend to business for a long time; consequently he is offering his place for sale.

The America Flower Shop had an attractive St. Patrick's day window.

Frank Dykstra has accepted a position with Fred Hall.

C. F. Maler is making a number of improvements on his place. A much needed office is in the course of construction. A blower recently was installed in one of the boilers and is proving highly satisfactory.

Bernhardt Boldt is sending in some extra fine pot roses, with from ten to fifteen buds and flowers to the plant.

William Horlacher, manager of the retail store of the Barteldes Seed Co., has two interesting window displays that are attracting more than a little attention. One of the windows contained plants of the common and Japanese barberries. Posters tell the story that the Japanese variety should be saved, because it is harmless, and the other one should be destroyed, to prevent the spread of wheat rust. There were 10,000 plants of the common barberry in Denver, most of them in the parks. In the other window were shown heads of wheat, oats, barley and millet, affected by smut; also some smutted and healthy wheat. Bulletins from the State Agricultural College explain the method of treatment of grain that is affected by smut. A solution of formaldehyde is recommended. R. S.

Mr. Bahr Did. Read What He Says:

Highland Park, Illinois, July 21, 1918.

MR. F. A. ZENKE, Chicago, Ill.:

Dear Mr. Zenke: Nothing pleases me more than to acknowledge that you were right when you praised up "New Plant Life" to me, and there couldn't be a better proof of it than my asking you to forward five more gallons just as soon as you can.

The results obtained were most satisfactory to me: stunted, small bedding stock after about ten days began to show new life and kept on improving. With the existing lack of help, instead of giving thousands of 3½-inch Geraniums a final shift, three light doses of "New Life" were applied and I am more than pleased with the outcome.

Sincerely yours, FRITZ BAHR.

The Market.

Dark, rainy weather for several days has greatly retarded stock. Business has been good and the demand for funeral work unusually brisk, so stock of all kinds has been kept well cleared. Roses are limited in quantity and range in price from $6 to $35. Carnations also are on the short side, at $6 and $8. Both Easter and calla lilies are hard to procure. Callas are bringing $2 per dozen.

Bulbous stock is popular. Narcissi and jonquils are selling at $6 per hundred. Hyacinths range from $6 to $10. Cut tulips also are available.

Snapdragons are more conspicuous and sell at $1 to $2 per dozen. Sweet peas continue in great demand and vary in quality and price from 75 cents to $2 per hundred. Violets are scarce. Other offerings include mignonette, at $5 per hundred, pansies, calendulas, marguerites, yellow and blue daisies, orchids, valley, baby primroses and pussy willows.

In potted plants, bulbous stock is in the lead. Hyacinths, jonquils and tulips are being offered. Other varieties of potted plants include cinerarias, primroses, Chatelaine begonias, cyclamens and a few Easter lilies. Green goods are scarce and high.

Various Notes.

Lester F. Benson is suffering from a broken arm caused by a balky Ford.

Greene's Flower Shop is the first in the city to use the moving picture form of advertising. Pictures were taken recently of the store filled with customers, to show the courtesy with which they were received. The windows were decorated attractively. The delivery machine, arriving at a residence, was photographed and the chauffeur, in livery, was shown delivering a fancy box of flowers.

Mrs. E. E. Temperley and little daughter have been quite ill.

Fred H. Stoelte has been mustered out of the service and is now with Greene's Flower Shop. Mrs. Hoffman also is with this firm.

The Circle Flower Store had an attractive St. Patrick's day window. Green sweet peas, green carnations and spring flowers, in an attractive arrangement of Kewpies and ribbons, gave a pleasing effect.

The regular meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held April 7 at the commission house of the Smith & Young Co. The August or September meeting probably will be in Marion, in response to the recent invitation of Robert A. McKeand.

Henry Heningsen, of Greensburg, Ind., was a visitor here this week.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, March 11, was one of the most interesting held in a long time and was well attended. Further plans for the annual fall exhibition, to be held at the Newport beach September 3 and 4, and for the annual ball, on the latter date, were discussed and committees instructed. It was voted to award several of the society's bronze and silver medals at the New Haven County (Conn.) Horticultural Society's show and it was also voted to offer prizes at the next meeting of the society for the best specimen of flowering plants. An interesting paper, written by Robert Weeks, of Cleveland, O., on "Wanted, a Gardener," was read, and at the conclusion of the business session there were several informal discussions on stem-rot, tulip borers, rhododendrons and other horticultural subjects.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The usual Lenten conditions prevail in this city, with little demand, except for hospital deliveries and funerals, and even in the latter there has been a noticeable slacking off. The warm, sunshiny days have sent the bulbous stock into market in quantities that have caused a drop in prices, but these will stiffen again as Easter approaches. Many of the growers express the fear that their stock will be badly depleted before that time, unless there is cooler weather to hold the blooms in check.

Roses, carnations and sweet peas furnish the staple supply and are plentiful at prices ranging practically normal. Potted bulbs are finding a moderate demand. The little pots of shamrocks and green carnations put in their annual appearance the middle of the week and by Saturday were in active demand for St. Patrick's day.

Various Notes.

Following its custom of several years, the Providence Chamber of Commerce has appointed a sub-committee to arrange for and carry out its annual planting day. Through this medium, which has furnished the property owners of this and adjoining cities of the state with shrubs, trees and bushes at a nominal cost, more than 40,000 of these have been planted. This year rose bushes are favored.

James Hay, of East Greenwich, has added a new automobile truck to his delivery department.

Swan Peterson, of East Providence, has been confined to his bed the last week by a severe cold.

Thomas Gallagher has returned to his old position with T. O'Connor, having returned from service.

Miss M. F. Pollock, who has been confined to the house by sickness, is convalescing.

Thomas Dolan, formerly with T. J. Johnston & Co., has returned from military service. W. H. M.

Lansing, Mich.—Alice E. Wood now has her flower business in a prominent location in the department store of the J. W. Knapp Co., the largest here, and is doing finely.

Columbus, O.—Instructions on rose planting were given at a meeting here of the Columbus Horticultural Society. Catalogues from leading seed houses were distributed to those present.

MONTREAL, QUEBEC.

The Market.

Business conditions continue good and there is a plentiful supply of flowers. Roses are arriving in quantity. The color and quality are exceptionally good and continue to bring good prices as formerly. Tulips and daffodils also continue good and sell at $1.50, while sweet peas are improving and easily sell at $1 and $1.50 per bunch. Stock is of a superior quality and demands $3 per dozen. However, freesias and hyacinths are scarce and carnations are not as good as usual, the best of them bringing $1.50 per dozen. Forsythia can now be seen in the shop windows.

Owing to the advent of Lent, social activities have almost ceased, thereby causing a falling off in the demand for violets and orchids. However, the general public is again buying flowers for home use, which stimulates business to a large extent.

Various Notes.

Several representatives of the florists' trade have visited the city during the last week, among them Patrick Welch, of Boston.

After an absence of two years in France on active service, Lieut. Harold McKinney, of the Montreal Floral Exchange, Ltd., has returned home. He has resumed his work at the store. Incidentally, the concern has found it necessary to secure larger quarters to accommodate their increasing business, and William Cotter, the manager, hopes to be installed therein in time to take care of the Easter rush.

Thomas Hill, formerly with the Montreal Floral Exchange, and Mr. Cooper, another Montreal florist, recently opened a wholesale house on University street. They report business as encouraging.

In view of the growing appreciation of flowers and the steady demand for all varieties, Montreal florists certainly have every reason to be optimistic.

Preparations are being made by McKenna, Ltd., to build five new greenhouses, to replace those recently destroyed by fire. J. A. C.

Permanite

Will Last a Lifetime!

F. B. Davis, of Lincoln, Neb., bought a barrel of Permanite, covered more than one-fourth of an acre with it—and then watched the results. After a while Mr. Davis wrote that he wouldn't be surprised if Permanite were to last a lifetime. If you want to know what caused Mr. Davis to make this statement, be sure to read his letter.

"The principal objection I have against putty is that it works loose and consequently falls off. To overcome this trouble I used your Permanite, with the result that after years of service my houses are as tight as they were when we first used your material. Frost seems to have no effect on your Permanite and I see no reason why it shouldn't last a lifetime.

"Permanite is the only satisfactory glazing cement I have ever tried and it is with pleasure that I recommend your Permanite to all florists."

The Market.

The trade in general has experienced a sudden slump during the week; perhaps not as serious as some report, but nevertheless it has been evident enough to create a surplus in all varieties of stock. The accumulation has been more noticeable because such flowers as fancy sweet peas, callas, Easter lilies, roses and fancy bulbous stock have had the first need of vasing. Prices, of course, have dropped a peg or two, but not enough to indicate that they will not recover and be steady until after Easter.

At this time a year ago carnations could be had for as low as $1.50 per hundred; daffodils and narcissi at $2; roses as low as $5. Stock at these prices warranted retailers, in some residential districts, to quote low prices and by that means move a great amount of stock. But, at that, the market was flooded. The idea of some is that a great many people who bought flowers last year are not visiting the stores now. Flower lovers buy flowers now, and always will, though in smaller quantities. Furthermore, the last few months have taught the trade some lessons in floral work. Stock is not so liberally used as formerly.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's banquet and entertainment, which took place at the Statler hotel, March 11, turned out to be an affair which will long be remembered by those who attended. The attendance was beyond expectation. The entertainment created endless laughter. Chickens were there in eye-opening style and one, in particular, created much excitement by searching for hair on a bald florist's head. At last, when the fowl gave up in despair, the "henpecked" one drew a long breath, dipped his hand in his pocket and brought forth a handful of feed.

At the greenhouses of Frank J. Baum a fine batch of seedling amaryllis is flowering. Among them are some fine, clear colors and some large flowers. The fancier of these is Mr. Baum's son, Edward.

The Queen City Seed & Nursery Co., which started here a short time ago, reports good business. Many orders for planting are already booked and a large quantity of seeds and bulbs has already moved. F. P. A.

Port Huron, Mich.—M. D. Watt has purchased the William Murdoch Greenhouses here. He also has two greenhouses at Eloise, Mich., which were recently completed.

FLORISTS! Forward! March!

That is the command which is constantly hammering at your door. Florists sometimes let their business halt, or even execute to the rear march, if every precaution is not properly guarded.

Ventilation is one of your most essential problems and requires your attention in selecting a sash operator that is efficient. The Advance is the result of a careful study and is the selection of all up-to-date, critical buyers. It has a positive worm and gear locking arrangement that holds the sash secure in any position. It adds neatness to the appearance of your house. Nothing has been overlooked in building the machine strong, so that it handles its load easily and with no chance for anything to break. Our TRUSS arms and hangers are equally well made, to correspond with this unequaled Advance Machine.

Greenhouse Fittings

We can't explain here all about our many different type fittings, but we can explain that we have a complete line of them and that they are neatly and strongly designed. You may need some today. Benching, shelving, piping and repairing easily taken care of by using our product.

Don't be without our new catalogue and March 1 prices another day. Write today.

THE STORY OF CHRISTMAS GOLD.

The most unique novelty pompon ever offered to the trade. Originated by Herbert Bate, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., in 1915. A seedling of Baby. Has all the tough, lasting qualities peculiar to its parent, with a free growing habit similar to Lucille Knoble, Golden Climax, etc. The color is much darker than in the old Baby, almost a Golden Wedding yellow. Size, about one inch in diameter, of solid button type. Can be cut tight for Thanksgiving, is at its best from December 10 to 30, and holds on for weeks. We cut the last batch this season January 12, 1919.

Certified by and scored 90 points before the Chrysanthemum Society of America committee of Chicago, December 14, 1917.

From 2-in. pots, 20c each;
$17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

GLADIOLUS MRS. WATT.
The measure of success of any variety of gladiolus is its earning power to the grower and to the florist, based on the satisfaction it gives to the public.
Gladiolus Mrs. Watt has made good on this practical end of the proposition. One florist writes: "I could have sold double the quantity of Mrs. Watt, had I owned the stock."
Testimonials from growers affirm that owing to its distinctive color, its strong upright growth and the excellent keeping qualities of the bloom of this variety, it is a paying proposition to both grower and florist.
One color; brilliant deep rose shade. Only the following size bulbs unsold:

Speaking of SCIENTIFIC DESIGN—here are some AGMCO facts

There are TWO BIG expense items in operating a greenhouse—labor and fuel. Let's talk this week on labor and its cost.

About ninety per cent of the greenhouses built are inconvenient in one way or another — they waste labor.

The character of your plants and the operation of the house must be efficient if you want success. We have seen a number of new houses built lately that were pretty fair pieces of work but absolute failures as far as efficient operation was concerned.

The AGMCO houses are usually operated for considerably less money than any other type built, because—we know what your work is. You will find that you are saving time if you get an AGMCO house — that you are using less effort to do your work because there are less steps to take in an AGMCO house and it is easier for you to take them.

Let the AGMCO send some one to see you and tell you how we accomplish this saving of labor. Bear in mind, too, that in some things AGMCO systematic design saves you fifty per cent of your time. Nothing technical—nothing with a lot of figures and theory. Just some old-fashioned common sense that has thought of simple things that, somehow, nobody happened to think of before.

REMEMBER — in AGMCO houses nothing is designed by chance, but for a real purpose—one that always benefits the owner.

Ask us about these things if you are going to build and don't buy houses that waste labor and make it a struggle to keep up with your AGMCO neighbor.

AGMCO owners are the coming and successful growers

A Logical Time to Build

WHY?

Florists have not built many greenhouses during the wartime years.

The number of prospective buyers of flowers has increased at even a greater rate than formerly.

A good many greenhouses have been torn down and so the production of flowers is still more greatly reduced.

All of this results in a scarcity of flowers and high prices.

Greenhouse building materials are not likely to come down in price much if, indeed, any at all.

The man who acts first gets results first.

The man who buys his greenhouses from "Moninger's" gets results first, last and all the time. He saves himself a lot of experimenting.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

A JOURNAL for FLORISTS, SEEDSMEN and NURSERYMEN

EASTER NUMBER

The fact alone, that only one of every 100 houses we build is Ridge and Furrow, shows how conclusively the superiority of the wide, single houses has been proven.

Cost Comparison Between Ridge and Furrow and Single Houses

Jumping at conclusions is risky. Sometimes you land square and fair on your feet—sometimes you find yourself very short of the mark. Worst of all, you never know where you are going to land until you land.

To be guided by bulldog prejudices, rather than facts and figures, comes pretty close to believing there is gasoline in the tank and refusing to take the precaution of looking.

Being towed home is both annoying and expensive.

Looking into things prevents many an empty profit tank.

Take, for example, a single Iron-frame House 56 feet 4 inches wide and 400 feet long; and two Ridge and Furrow Pipe Frame, each 28 feet 2 inches by 400 feet. When the Iron-frame House is erected, glazed, painted three coats, having a steam system installed to maintain 55 to 60 degrees at zero, including excavating for posts, concrete piers and side walls, there is a difference of only two-tenths of a cent per area foot of bench space, in Frame.

Think of it, only two-tenths of a cent!

The Iron-Frame House has 15,803 actual square feet of bench surface, while the Pipe-frame Houses have only 15,054.

It costs more to heat the two houses, and the shaded north bench in the Ridge and Furrow Houses never produces as well as the unshaded ones in the single house.

If you care to have us show you exactly how these figures are arrived at, we will be only too glad to do it.

We have a large stock of materials that we bought at pre-war prices and our selling prices are based on the cost of these materials.

When you are ready to talk business, say when and where and we will be there.

The Affair Across the Water

BUY EASTER SUPPLIES NOW!

BEFORE the armistice was signed, and during the greater part of the war, we, like many other manufacturers, were handicapped in every way. At that time we thought it advisable to publish the subjoined poem.

NOW, Mr. Florist, with peace hovering over the entire world, and with more gladness in our hearts, we are in a decidedly different position to serve you.

HAVE you ever asked yourself the question why some men in business are very successful and why others are not? Success is not at all a matter of luck. The BOSTON FLORAL SUPPLY CO. has built up a most successful Florists' Supply House without depending in the slightest way on LUCK.

How Did We Achieve It? 1st.—We have treated our customers with the utmost regard and respect, regardless of whether they bought one dollar or one hundred dollars' worth. 2nd.—We have recognized that the price must be reasonable and the goods of a fair and practical quality. 3rd.—Any complaint ever made to us is conscientiously and faithfully taken care of, and always to the satisfaction of the customer.

THE Boston Floral Supply Co. is positively headquarters for Memorial Day Goods, such as Cut Flowers, Cycas, Baskets, Magnolia Wreaths, Sprays, Wax Designs, Wax Flowers, Wire Frames, Manila Boxes, and all other Florists' Supplies.

WE have added one department after another until today we are in a position to serve you with the best there is in Cut Flowers and Evergreens, such as Roses, Carnations, Violets, Jonquils, Valley, Ferns, Galax, Leucothoe Sprays, Smilax, etc.

WE can assure you that our prices are the lowest, and if you ever feel that we have overcharged you, even long after you have purchased the goods, we will adjust matters promptly. We are in business to stay in it, and no reputable concern can afford to make any remark unless it is done in the best of faith and sincerity. We kindly ask those florists who have not dealt with us to give us a trial. If you are in Boston come in to see us, or drop us a line, or telephone us at our expense.

YOUR BACK ORDERS

Keep your temper, gentle Sir,
Writes the Manu-facturer.
Though your goods are over-due,
For a week, or maybe two,
We can't help it; please don't swear;
Labor's scarce, and Needles rare;
Can't get wax, can't get dyes;
These are facts: We tell no lies.

Harry's drafted, so is Bill;
All our work is now uphill;
So your Orders, we're afraid,
May be still a bit delayed;
Still you'll get them, don't get vexed,
Maybe this week, maybe next.
Keep on hoping; don't say die,
You will get them by and by.

FOR EASTER

Wholesale and Retail

300,000 Cut Easter Lilies

$15.00 to $20.00 per 100

REALIZING the problem that is facing the Wholesale and Retail Florists throughout the country, relative to securing Easter Lilies for their Easter business, and considering that what few Lilies they may be able to obtain will be at such an exorbitant price, namely $35.00 to $40.00 per hundred, due to the fact that there is only one-tenth of the usual production on account of the Growers being unable to get sufficient LILY BULBS, you can readily see the seriousness of the LILY SITUATION.

WE, THE ONLY HOUSE IN NEW ENGLAND being able to obtain EASTER LILIES at a reasonable price, take pleasure in announcing that we will have a supply of THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND (300,000) CUT LILIES, which we are pleased to offer you at an approximate price of $15.00 to $20.00 PER HUNDRED.

We will also have in stock, as usual, a supply of all seasonable CUT FLOWERS at prevailing market prices.

We suggest that you place your order as soon as possible, and we assure you that same will receive our careful and prompt attention, with QUALITY, SERVICE and RIGHT PRICES.

Unknown customers will please send cash with order, or furnish satisfactory references.

SIM'S HYBRID YELLOW POLYANTHUS

This is one of my houses, 20x300 feet, of National Flower Show Gold Medal Polyanthus. These had been in bloom constantly since November.

These beautiful Primroses are still very scarce everywhere and good returns are awaiting those who will grow them. They find a ready sale when bunched like violets. The house may be utilized for other crops from May to November 1, as they are grown outdoors in summer.

Polyanthus this season have averaged 50 cents a small bunch and each plant will, when grown well, produce from two to three bunches.

They are planted 8x8 apart. Does any crop you grow give better returns? Strong divisions in May.

New Rose HUGONIS

Two Weeks Earlier Than The Earliest

HERE is another wonder, for which we are indebted to Chinese Wilson. Strange to say, its surpassing merits seem to have been overlooked. It weathered the rigid winters at the Arnold Arboretum and came back in May with its swaying, bloom-covered branches like veritable sprays of enlivened sunshine.

We count ourselves extraordinarily lucky in being able to offer Hugonis to you, even if we must restrict the sales to not more than two to any one customer.

And now a word or two more about it. Every branch of the previous years' growth is lined on all sides, right to the very tip, with closely set, open-eyed, single flowers. They are indeed quite like dainty yellow Hollyhocks, bending over with the weight of bloom profusion.

Its hardiness is remarkable. From trial grounds in Massachusetts and Wisconsin, never so much as a tip of a single branch was winter killed. Here, within 30 miles of Philadelphia, it bloomed two weeks ahead of the earliest early Roses.

Fine for shrub planting. Makes a symmetrical bush about 6 feet high and the like in diameter.

Need we add the necessity of early ordering, to save disappointment?

PRICE, Field-grown Plants, $1.50 each

American Pillar

When ordering Hugonis, include some American Pillar and Aunt Harriet. American Pillar is the most popular single hardy climber in existence. Its rich rosy pink flowers are exquisitely lovely, and are produced in such abundance as almost to hide the dark green, insect-proof, leathery foliage, which furnishes the plant right to the ground.

Gentlemen:—The judges of the American Rose Society, at the Hartford Rose test garden in June last, awarded to Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., Climbing American Pillar Rose a silver medal. Scored 85 points. Highly recommended as a Pillar Rose. The Society extends to you its hearty appreciation.
Very truly yours,

The New Wonder Rose Hugonis

Aunt Harriet (H. W.)

New, originated by the famous rose hybridizer, Dr. W. Van Fleet. For porches, arbors and arches this Rose will prove immensely popular. Last spring it was awarded Certificate of Merit by the American Rose Society. It is a cross between Appoline and Wichuraiana. In full bloom it is amazingly fine with its masses of dazzling scarlet-crimson Roses loading every branch. The bright effect is intensified by the pure white centers and brilliant golden anthers which shine out when the flowers are fully open.

The Story of Christmas Gold

Originated by Herbert Bate, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., in 1915. A seedling of Baby. The most unique novelty pompon ever offered to the trade. Has all the tough, lasting qualities peculiar to its parent, with a free growing habit similar to Lucille Knoble, Golden Climax, etc. The color is much darker than in the old Baby, almost a Golden Wedding yellow. Size, about one inch in diameter, of solid button type. Can be cut tight for Thanksgiving, is at its best from December 10 to 30, and holds on for weeks. We cut the last batch this season January 12, 1919.

Certificated by and scored 90 points before the Chrysanthemum Society of America committee of Chicago, December 14, 1917.

What good judges say of it:

The box of flowers of Christmas Gold pompon came safely and I would be glad to get 500 rooted cuttings of this variety, and would be willing to pay $30.00 per hundred for same. Should you decide to put Christmas Gold on the market this spring, please advise whether you can let me have the number mentioned, payment to be made before shipment of cuttings.—Charles M. Weaver, Ronks, Pa., December 19, 1918.

The box of Christmas Gold pompon mum came to hand in good shape. It is a splendid flower and in my opinion a wonderful flower to have through the whole month of December and especially at Christmas. Wish we had had a thousand bunches of it this season at Christmas time. I hope you will see your way to grow a big stock and sell a lot of it to our Detroit growers, so we will have it to sell in our Detroit retail stores next Christmas.—E. A. Fetters, Detroit, Mich., January 3, 1919.

The yellow pompon chrysanthemum, Christmas Gold, reached us December 19 in perfect condition. To our mind the sale of this flower at Christmas would be limited only by the supply to be had. It has remarkable keeping qualities and at this date, January 4, it is still in a fairly good condition. We feel that you have a good thing.—Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., January 4, 1919.

Your late blooming pompon, Christmas Gold, was received December 19. Half the bunch we kept in our icebox and the other half I took home with me. Those I took home remained in good condition until December 26, and those in the icebox until December 28, when the flowers were still good, but the foliage had shriveled. The variety, in my opinion, is a very good one for working up, not only for Christmas, but all through December, when there is a scarcity of the smaller yellow flowers. Christmas Gold seems to be a good shipper; it reached us in perfect condition.—Max Schling, New York, December 10, 1919.

Young stock will be in great demand after next season, when its merit has become known to the growers.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

MAKING HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES

Filled with confidence as the result of the largest season's business on record, the Trade is making preparations for Easter on a greater scale than ever before. The only thing that dampens our enthusiasm is the absence of certain kinds of stock heretofore relied on for this big special flower day.

IF ever there was a class of men trained more than another to practice that old precept, "Make hay while the sun shines," we are that class, we who deal in plants and flowers. And we all are getting ready for Easter with a wholehearted enthusiasm that indicates a unanimous belief that the third week of April, 1919, will be the "sunniest" we ever have known.

This has been a record season for all of us who were able to carry on in the face of the obstacles imposed by the war; not the largest, perhaps, in quantity of stock produced or handled, but the largest in point of money value and, with many, largest in point of profit. The growers never have had so good a season as this one and those who felt obliged to close part of their houses because of the fuel restriction or other difficulties have done splendid work in getting their idle glass back into production.

Big Business.

While retailers have fared less well, perhaps, than growers, their principal trouble has been to obtain as much stock as they needed; the only limits to demand were those set by the reduced supply of flowers and the higher prices which were a natural corollary.

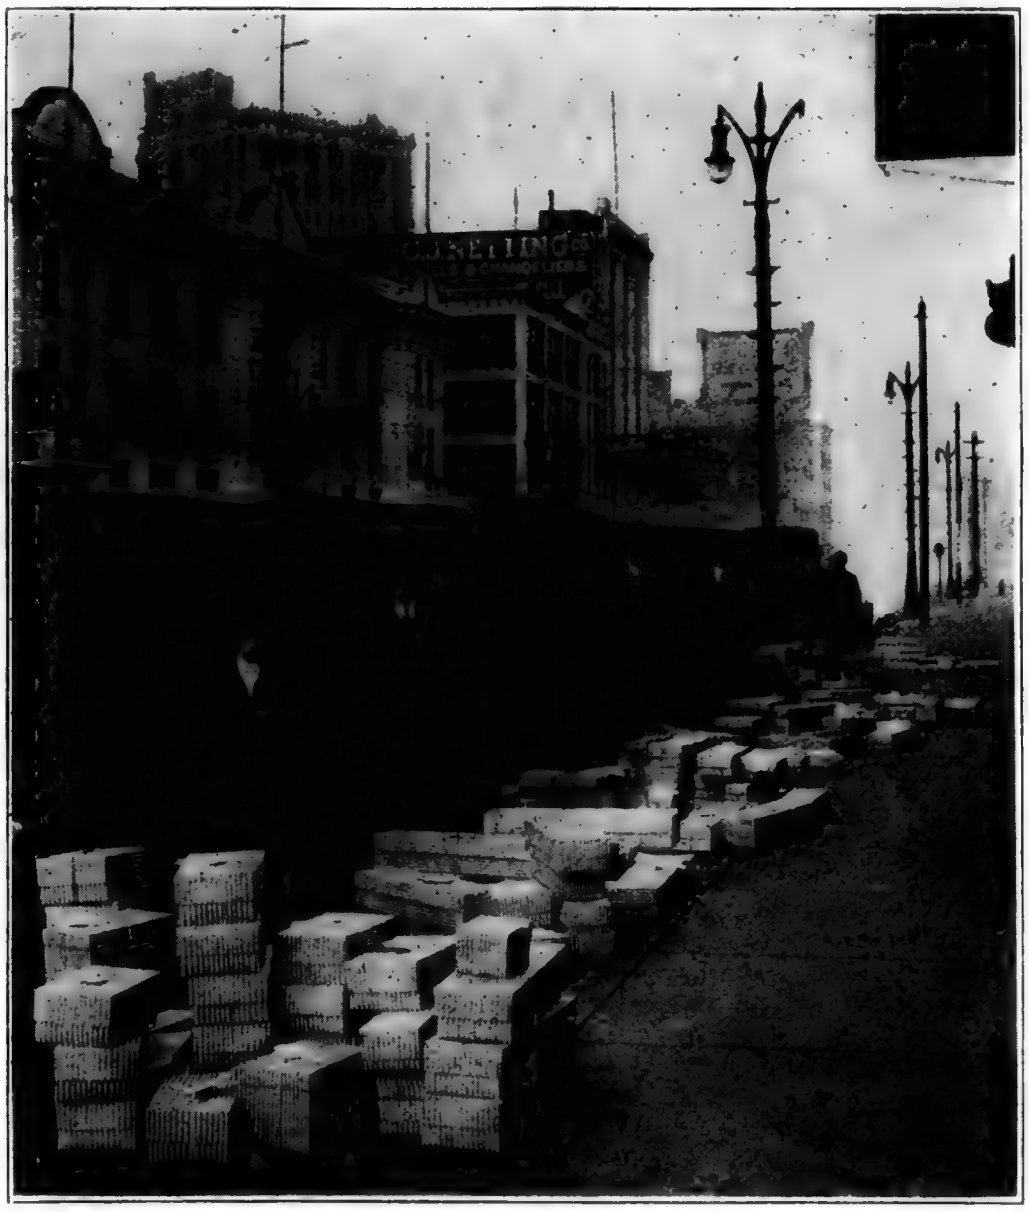
There has been no letup in flower selling from October to April; the boom began with the epidemic that swept the country last autumn and the heavy demand has continued steadily all season. It was by far the greatest Christmas the trade ever has known, limited only by the possibility of supplying flowers, and the readiness with which the public paid the higher prices was a revelation to the large number of florists who had failed to appreciate their own merchandise as fully as do the American people as a whole. Flowers never have been wanted more than now.

For many years Easter was the big day on the trade's calendar. Recently Christmas has gone ahead in dollars, but not in number of sales; indeed, there are any number of us whose customers have not yet adopted the custom of sending such unutilitarian Christmas gifts, but who, nevertheless, can be counted on with certainty to buy flowers to grace their own front window Easter morning.

Easter the Best Yet.

We all can reckon safely that Easter will give us the opportunity to make a larger number of sales than at Christmas, or at any previous Easter.

Those who had watched the business grow, year by year, some time ago came to realize that the sales for Easter, under the conditions heretofore prevailing, were not limited by the supply of stock, which was abundant, but by the individual florist's ability to wait on trade. The public habitually puts off buying until the last moment—then there is a most unholy rush.



But it is different this Easter. Not that the last-minute rush will be less heavy, but that the supply of material this Easter will be much reduced. To catalogue the facts with which the trade must reckon:

The supply of lilies is possibly one-tenth of what it has been in recent years, due to the War Trade Board's embargo on the importation of bulbs from Japan last autumn. The lilies available are almost all from the 1917 surplus of bulbs carried over in cold storage, although there are a few grown from 1918 bulbs obtained from Bermuda and the Azores. Pot lilies are almost unobtainable and, under the circumstances, the wholesale price of cut lilies in advance of Easter naturally is the owner's conception of what the traffic will bear.

Plants All Scarce.

Next in importance comes the reduced supply of Dutch bulbous stock. In the first place, the quantity of bulbs imported last season was only about one-third what it was in 1917 and, in the second place, Easter is so late this year that even this small supply has flowered and is gone. This is a serious loss to the smaller florists, meaning those who sell to people who do not buy the more costly flowers.

There is a general shortage of blooming plants. A late Easter seldom sees many azaleas; there are scarcely any this year, although a few eastern plantsmen are making the effort to flower plants imported since Belgium was freed. Pot roses, hydrangeas, spiræas, lilacs, callas, rhododendrons, primulas, daisies, genistas, cinerarias, schizanthus, lilacs, etc., are seen in somewhat increased quantities, but there are so few in proportion to the increased demand that practically all have been spoken for.

Of cut flowers, the supply of roses will be nearest normal; in fact, it may exceed that of some other years. Many growers who were handicapped by the fuel restrictions chose to close rose houses in preference to any others because they could merely rest the stock and start up again without replanting. These houses are in crop again. Carnation growers who closed in most cases are ready with catch crops, although in numerous cases it is vegetables. Violets are not useful for so late an Easter, but in their stead there is a record production of sweet peas.

Ingenuity Will Win.

But florists are resourceful people; they are accustomed to doing the best they can with what they have. Also, we have had a six months' postgraduate course in making a small supply of stock cover a multiplicity of needs. We have learned to use more accessories and to make our flowers go farther than they ever did before. We shall do it for Easter.

One thing we shall be spared is the competition of department stores and sidewalk salesmen, selling culls and surplus at prices which accomplished nothing more than to disturb the nice balance which heretofore has existed between retail rates and the cost of production.

Considering cost of production, the visible supply and advance wholesale prices for Easter, the trade is not profiteering. The people want flowers and have learned something of their value. There will be no objection to paying what the stock is worth this Easter. It will be our biggest one.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

THE TRADE'S BUSY DAY.

The accompanying illustrations, reproduced from photographs made on Good Friday, 1918, could be said to be typical of the florists' trade at Easter except that they show the interior of one of the larger stores, that of J. Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit. The illustration on page 23 shows the view in the store on the afternoon of Good Friday. The illustration on page 25 shows the conservatory in the rear of the store. The illustration on page 24 shows the store the following morning, at 7:40, after the Easter orders had gone out. The last of them, on the sidewalk, awaiting loading, are shown in the illustration on page 21.

Easter is a strenuous time in a big flower store. It is the usual thing for the staff to work all night on Saturday and until the orders are out on Sunday. Some florists still make all their deliveries Sunday morning, but the larger ones have found that this course is impracticable and they so arrange it that they can make the deliveries of plants Saturday afternoon and evening, making only cut flower deliveries Easter morning. Large numbers of the Sunday morning deliveries of course are corsage bouquets, which must be delivered in time for the church parade. Getting the orders ready, after the usual closing time, ordinarily means working all night. Last year Breitmeyer's had twenty all-night workers and served a midnight supper in the store. Loading the delivery cars began at 6:30 a. m., and all the orders for Easter were on their way in another hour.

It is not every store which can devise, or which needs, the elaborate system employed by Breitmeyer's, but system is the basis on which big business is built. Without system no florist can get beyond personal size with his holiday trade.

SUCCESSFUL SIMPLICITY.

Simplicity is the keynote of some of the most successful arrangements seen in the up-to-date flower stores and of these nothing could be more simple than the hamper shown in the illustration on page 27, which has been extremely popular in Boston this spring, according to a letter from Henry Penn. The receptacle is a willow hamper shaped almost like the popular picnic basket and in it there is a miscellaneous assortment of cut flowers; it can be varied to meet the needs of the store in working off stock or to please the preferences of the customer. The amaryllis in the center gives a line on a Boston preference. It is a flower often noted in Boston, but little seen elsewhere.

DECORATION FOR MEMORIAL.

Interior decoration is a part of the business which proves a stumbling block to many otherwise capable florists. The technique and mechanics of the art are thoroughly understood, yet their work lacks that subtle something necessary to gain it recognition as an original creation.

John Kirchner, of Cleveland, is one of the florists who possess aptitude for that which is simple and natural in floral art and his creations are sometimes almost startling in their departure from the commonplace.

Mr. Kirchner was recently commissioned by the committee on decorations of the Fraternal Order of Eagles in Cleveland to undertake the decorations of the stage of a local theater for the memorial service they were going to hold commemorating the lives of departed members. The instructions were to endeavor to create an atmosphere of solemnity and sorrow.

The illustration on page 29 shows how successfully Mr. Kirchner met the requirements. It was a highly original conception. Simplicity stands forth in the entire scheme, from the green sheet moss used for the greensward to the little cluster of forget-me-nots attached to the festoon of smilax and ribbon on the chairs at the front of the stage, and yet the result is all that could be desired.

HOW MUCH HAVE YOU GIVEN?

Coöperation an Ideal.

We are working toward an ideal. It is that of more coöperation among the various persons and concerns connected with our business, as between the grower and wholesaler, then between the retailer and the wholesaler, as well as the supply man. Your publicity committee has a heavy program outlined for 1919, which will entail an expenditure of $100,000, providing, of course, that you do your share. If you do, it will enable our publicity program to be carried out and make the sale of more flowers possible.

First, there is a psychological effect on all who have contributed, which makes them see our business from a higher plane, and makes them see that the further development of one's own business is accomplished by affiliation with a movement which brings all that is beneficial for a bigger growth, and which is ultimately certain to reach proportions in accordance with what one gives. Our success, which is bound to come, has already brought to the attention of those interested many phases which have been lacking heretofore, such as getting together for the common good and discussing ways and means for the continuation of higher ideals in the business of handling flowers, and stimulating the desire for doing things a little better than formerly.

Many Now Interested.

It is a fact that more men are interested now in publicity, which is growing by leaps and bounds, than in former years. It also is a fact that by giving to a general fund you are realizing the force of a country-wide movement that is bound to bring about that spirit of liberality which spells optimism. This eventually makes partners of all who have given and makes each one feel that the interests of his neighbor are his own. This has been evidenced best by the progress of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, in which every member of the organization is morally responsible for the actions of his fellow members. One need but to attend an F. T. D. meeting to see the result of this coöperation.

Evidences creep up every day that the trade in general is behind our publicity movement, as is the S. A. F., which is shown by that organization contributing $5,000 of its fund last year, and again this year, to help bring about the best possible results. This latter shows the unbounded faith the board of directors of the S. A. F. has in our publicity movement. Need you have less?

Put your name in with as liberal a contribution as you can afford and the benefits will be returned ten for one. Show by your action that you are in the greatest business on earth and that you mean to keep it such. The national publicity campaign is dependent on its fund for the good it can accomplish and the more contributed, the greater will be its accomplishments.

Make our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," felt all over the land and then you can feel proud that you did your part.

Send yours now.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Twentieth Annual Meeting.

The twentieth annual meeting of the American Rose Society was held at Hotel Breslin, New York city, April 2, President Hammond presiding. The president, in his annual report, reviewed briefly the development of the society during the twenty years of its existence and emphasized the broadened interest in rose growing which has resulted during the period. The secretary reported a membership, April 1, of 1,203, and the treasurer reported a balance of $2,137.58.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Captain George C. Thomas, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa.; vice-president, F. L. Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; treasurer, Harry O. May, Summit, N. J.; secretary, E. A. White, Ithaca, N. Y. Members of the executive committee, to serve for three years, were chosen as follows: Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.; George H. Peterson, Fair Lawn, N. J.; James Boyd, Haverford, Pa.

The president named Robert Simpson, Frank Traendly and Eugene Dailledouze members of a special committee to audit the books of the treasurer.

Thank Retiring President.

Following the election of officers, Treasurer May expressed the appreciation which he, personally, felt the society should extend to the retiring president, Benjamin Hammond, for the many years of faithful service he has given the organization. It was moved by J. Horace McFarland that the society express to Mr. Hammond, by a rising vote, its deep gratitude for the efficient service he has rendered. The vote was unanimous.

Mr. Pyle and Mr. Pennock also expressed their appreciation of the way in which Mr. Hammond stood by the society in its years of adversity. Mr. Pyle recalled the time when the finances of the society were at a low ebb, when Mr. Hammond came forward, offering to give a substantial sum to help put the society on its feet. Mr. Pennock moved that Mr. and Mrs. Hammond be presented with a vase of roses as a slight token of appreciation of the good will of the society.

Executive Committee Meets.

Previous to the annual meeting, a session of the executive committee was held in the office of the secretary of the Society of American Florists, 1170 Broadway. Consideration was given to the appointment of a committee to award the Gertrude H. Hubbard gold medal for the best rose of American origin introduced during the last five years. It was the opinion of the executive committee that only the varieties registered with the American Rose Society should be considered eligible for this medal. The secretary was instructed to prepare a list of the varieties eligible and mail a copy of this to each member of the committee. It also was voted that the award of the Hubbard medal be postponed until a fall meeting of the executive committee, so that special consideration might be given eligible varieties during the summer.

To Change Constitution?

J. Horace McFarland, as chairman of the committee appointed at the last meeting to consider changes in the constitution and by-laws of the society, read these changes in detail. It was voted that the secretary be instructed to prepare a draft of the changes under consideration and to mail these to each member of the committee. The question of reducing the life membership fee was discussed and it was the opinion of the committee that the present fee of $50 is not too high, and that no change should be made.

NOTES ON EASTER PLANTS

INCREASED DEMAND ASSURED.

Selling Conditions Are Favorable.

Each year it would seem as though plants had a greater call for Easter. It is certainly true that this year they will have a record-breaking sale, as weeks before the great floral festival the large growers of plants were practically sold out and it seems improbable that there will be enough stock to fill the demands. Trade in both cut flowers and plants has been remarkably good this season and prices have been quite satisfactory to the growers. Of course, there is a smaller area of glass devoted to both cut flowers and plants and supplies cannot reach those of former years. That the demand will be much larger than a year ago there can be no question, and the fact that the government postponed floating the fifth Liberty loan until after Easter is something that florists have cause to be thankful for. Had it come before, it would have seriously diminished the volume of sales.

With an Easter as late as April 20 we should reasonably expect balmy weather, but we cannot be sure on this score. April 13, 1918, New Englanders were running snowplows through the heaviest fall of the season, and we have had several pre-Easter storms in April of late years which we have abundant cause to remember. March was abnormally warm, except for two or three days at the close. It is not impossible that we may get our March weather in April and, while April 20 seems late enough to feel secure from bad weather, it is safer to be prepared for sudden changes.

Lilies the Principal Shortage.

One striking feature about the 1919 Easter plant offerings will be the marked shortage of lilies. There is no need to recount the cause of this. With the exception of a limited number of Bermuda Harrisii, practically the whole available lily supply will be from cold storage bulbs and a surprisingly large number of these will be offered. They will be only a fractional part of what we had in former years. Good growers state that if they get from fifty to sixty-five per cent of their bulbs to flower they will be doing well. Plants are, in most cases, short and the bulk of the stalks carry only two or three buds. To make the growing of these profitable, prices much larger than those of 1918 must be asked, and some florists wonder if those who want Easter lilies and have always had nice plants will be willing to pay an enhanced price for an inferior article, but the lily is so essentially the flower for this special day that the available supply will probably be cleaned up without trouble. It will be possible to work off some of the inferior stalks, carrying only one or two buds each, by planting several bulbs in a pot. The shaking away of loam from the roots will affect them but little if they are given a good soaking of water and are kept damp.

Such lilies as we have can only be handled at florists' stores. Dry goods and department stores will find them far beyond their means and they must needs purchase some less expensive material, and, with pans of bulbous stock far dearer than in former years, many of them will need to substitute "artificials" or leave flowers alone.

Roses Are Excellent.

With so marked a scarcity of Easter's most popular flower, there will be a largely increased call for other plants, and of these roses promise to be the most important. A grand assortment of these is ready and the later date of Easter makes it possible to have these splendidly flowered. The winter has been so warm that many batches are too early and need considerable retarding to hold them. With all roses, however, we must use great care when reducing temperatures. If the plants have been grown in a temperature of 60 degrees at night and, when they start to open their flowers, are moved to an airy house quite suitable for violet culture, we can look with confidence for a bad attack of mildew. Temperatures must be reduced gradually and, above everything, avoid drafts, as these will start mildew quickly and plants thus attacked are soon rendered unsalable.

I never saw a grander assortment of roses than are now offered. In addition to such grand ramblers as Hiawatha, Excelsa, Tausendschoen, Dorothy Perkins and Lady Gay, there are the polyanthas or baby ramblers, splendid hybrid perpetuals, like Magna Charta, Druschki and Ulrich Brunner, and some excellent hybrid teas in many glorious colors. We can safely recommend roses to our customers, as they keep satisfactorily and, when the flowering season has passed, they can be planted out in the garden.

French Hydrangeas.

For a good many weeks hydrangeas have been in evidence at the retail stores and this season they are of magnificent

The Calm After the Storm; the Store of J. Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Easter Morning, 1918.

Ready for the Rush; a Modern Flower Store Conservatory on Good Friday Morning.

quality. What valuable Easter plants these newer French varieties are! They far outclass the older otaksa, although that variety is by no means obsolete and has abundant uses later in the season. They propagate so easily, make such satisfactory growth in a season, either planted out or in pots, and bloom so profusely on even the weakest appearing stems, that it is not unusual to see a dozen good heads on a plant in a 6-inch pot. The average plant stands up nicely without staking. We can propagate, grow and flower hydrangeas beautifully in America. Remember that all the hydrangeas are thirsty subjects and need lots of water. They will stand a comparatively low temperature, but even they are not mildew-proof and a grower will soon find this out if he syringes them indiscriminately and subjects them to cold drafts.

Good Genistas.

Genistas can hardly be classed as among the most desirable plants for use in the house. Unless kept in a cool and well ventilated room, their flowers fall quickly. They are likely to be in considerable demand this season to fill up other shortages. The bulk of the plants offered have been sheared into shape and some topiary specimens are to be met with. I have a strong liking, however, for the less formal-looking plants and it is too bad that more of these are not offered. I am positive that many retailers would greatly prefer plants which had been allowed to make a more natural growth. Well flowered genistas, not too much expanded, are most excellent Easter plants and for those wanting neat little plants what can be prettier than plants in 3-inch and 4-inch pots?

Colored Spiræas.

Usually spiræas, or astilbes, to be botanically correct, are abundant for Easter. The number offered this year will be much reduced and prices are much advanced. Those beautifully colored varieties, Peach Blossom, Queen Alexandra, Rubens, Ceres, Pink Pearl, Juno and Venus, make superb Easter plants and can be had in fine shape for as late a date as April 20. They embrace such colors as salmon pink, lilac rose, purplish pink, delicate pink and deep rose. They grow taller than the japonica varieties and carry immense heads of flower. If unsold, the plants should be cut in two or three pieces with a sharp spade, planted out in rich soil and in a couple of years they will make splendid clumps for forcing again, better than any that are imported from Holland. Do not forget to place saucers under the spiræas; they are thirsty subjects and can scarcely be overwatered. It will not harm spiræas to be moved from a warm to a cool house if you remember to keep the roots always moist.

Show Pelargoniums.

A late Easter favors the show pelargoniums and in addition to Easter Greeting, Wurtembergia and one or two others of similar type, some of the older and more showy varieties of this showy species are available. All need cool culture from start to finish. You simply cannot hurry them, but place them in a good, sunny house and shade them somewhat as the flowers start to open. A group of one variety makes a most attractive window display and I am glad to note coming in again of this one-time popular flowering plant. Be sure the plants are free of green aphis before you send them out, remind purchasers that the aphis has a marked partiality for them and tell them how to keep them in subjection.

Callas Should Sell.

With such a marked scarcity of Easter lilies, a good many buyers will be glad to purchase callas. There has been something of a revolution in calla culture since the introduction of the Godfrey, which flowers with much greater freedom than the old æthiopica and carries flowers equally large but purer white in color. Plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots containing one bulb, or 8-inch pots containi.g three bulbs, nicely flowered, should prove salable; with other spikes showing, customers are certain of getting good value for their money. Callas are splendid house plants and, with an abundant water supply, will give satisfaction for a longer period than almost any other flowering plant.

Dutch Bulbous Stock.

Dutch bulbous stock will be much less plentiful than a year ago, but there should be no trouble in getting all varieties in flower. Murillo will no doubt take precedence over all other early tulips, but Darwins promise to be much in evidence and well flowered pans of such varieties as William Copeland, Nora Ware, Pride of Haarlem, Glow and Clara Butt should sell on sight. Victoria will be the single narcissus par excellence. We have nothing among daffodils to equal it as a stocky-growing and handsome bicolor. There will be, as usual, some of the old double Von Sion for those who can see beauty in double daffodils. Hyacinths brought along in a cold house and just coming into flower are to be preferred to those fully expanded. Some nice pans of Spanish iris promise to make a welcome addition and should be in demand. In the way of the more uncommon bulbs I have seen some pots or pans of ixias, Tritonia crocata, Roman anemones and ranunculi. There are always buyers who will prefer these to the more common tulips, daffodils and hyacinths, and a year hence, with the bars up on all these nice little bulbs, how we shall miss them!

Cinerarias and Calceolarias.

Cinerarias and calceolarias are not usually seen at Easter and, while the large-flowered cinerarias are now on the wane, the smaller and more decorative stellatas are at their best. They come in a wide range of colors and are much more effective than the grandiflora type. This year I have seen a good number of stocky, well-bloomed herbaceous calceolarias in 6-inch and 7-inch pots. In former years the few offered were easily disposed of and this year, with the plants better opened than ever before, they should sell well.

A Few Azaleas Available.

It seemed a short time ago that azaleas would scarcely be seen at all the coming Easter, but considerable shipments from Belgium have reached eastern forcers this spring and a part, at least, of these will be available, but at much advanced prices. Rhododendrons, including the exquisite Pink Pearl, are also being offered from arrivals this spring and make a most welcome addition.

The supply of deciduous flowering shrubs will not be at all equal to that of former years, but a fair number are being grown, among which I have noted laburnums, wisterias, Prunus triloba, deutzias, lilacs, ornamental apples and plums and hawthorns. All these are much better if only opened a little. They ship better then and give a longer season of pleasure to the customers.

There are some nice little low-growing plants suggestive of spring which we can plant carefully in pots or pans now and which never fail to attract buyers. Included among these are pansies, violas, double daisies, double violets, forget-me-nots, yellow and white polyanthus and English primroses. In some cases single plants will suffice for each receptacle, while in other cases several are needed. These need not necessarily be used in the house at all, but can be planted outdoors, where practically all will prove hardy and flower for a considerable time. Then there are geraniums, which will always meet with some demand at a late Easter.

Many Other Plants.

A number of other plants are available in addition to those named. Among them are late-flowering acacias, ericas in variety, boronias, white marguerites, Agathæa cœlestis, better known as the blue marguerite, an old plant but a novelty to many; metrosideros, or bottle brush; Primula malacoides and P. obconica, the beautiful Delphinium Belladonna, something of a novelty for the Easter trade; Canterbury bells, fuchsias and nicely flowered snapdragons. With the severe restrictions on fuel last fall, it is astonishing what a fine assortment of flowering plants is available and, with the addition of crotons and other colored leaved plants, ferns, palms, ficus, araucarias and draccenas, the offerings of Easter, 1919, will be well varied even if somewhat less abundant than those of some former years.

BACKING UP ON No. 37

A SECOND AMENDMENT.

Will Issue Special Permits.

The Federal Horticultural Board has announced a second amendment to the order for Quarantine No. 37. The first amendment, first reported in The Review for February 13, permits lily bulbs to enter packed in soil; the second amendment, dated March 27, gives notice that special permits will be issued for the importation of quarantined stock. The full text of the amendment to the regulations is as follows:

"Under authority conferred by the plant quarantine act of August 20, 1912 (37 Stat., 315), it is ordered that Regulation 14 of the Rules and Regulations Supplemental to notice of Quarantine No. 37 Governing the Importation of Nursery Stock and Other Plants and Seeds into the United States, effective June 1, 1919, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Regulation 14. Special permits for importation in limited quantities of prohibited stock.

"Application may be made to the Secretary of Agriculture for special permits for the importation, in limited quantities and under safeguards to be prescribed in such permits, of nursery stock and other plants and seeds not covered by the preceding regulations for the purpose of keeping the country supplied with new varieties and necessary propagating stock: Provided, That this shall not apply to nursery stock and other plants and seeds covered by special quarantines and other restrictive orders now in force, nor to such as may hereafter be made the subject of special quarantines."

Lets Down the Bars.

The new modification of the quarantine seems, on short acquaintance, to be the worst thing that possibly could happen, because it opens the door for the play of politics, blarney and favoritism. When the door was closed, we knew we all were shut out, but when the door is open a crack with a door tender on the other side, who knows who and what will slip through?

It seems plain, however, that the Federal Horticultural Board is beginning to feel the pressure of objection to its unwarranted quarantine and that a thorough and well advised, practical revision may yet develop.

HOLLANDERS COMING HERE.

The United Bulb Co., Inc., Mount Clemens, Mich., is the name under which two of the leading Holland growers of gladiolus bulbs have established themselves in America as the result of quarantine order No. 37, which will prohibit the importation of gladiolus bulbs after June 1.

K. Velthuys is widely known as a gladiolus specialist at Hillegom, Holland, and P. Vos also is well known to the trade in America as a bulb grower at Sassenheim, Holland. Mr. Vos was one of the pioneer bulb travelers in the United States, having made annual trips here from 1890 to 1899. He has been growing and exporting to the United States for thirty years. These two growers have combined their interests and their stocks of bulbs for the American trade. They have secured sixty acres of land at Mount Clemens, Mich., and their planting stock is arriving. Their place is to be known as Maple Park Farm, according to Th. De Groot, who has been American representative for K. Velthuys for some years. While the company will specialize on gladiolus bulbs, including the dissemination of a large collection of novelties, peonies, dahlias and other Holland crops will be grown.

DEFENDING THE QUARANTINE.

Government Replies to Objectors.

There are increasing evidences that the protests of the horticultural trades with reference to Plant Quarantine No. 37 are having some effect on the Federal Horticultural Board, the author of the measure. In response to the protests, the board has not only placed itself distinctly on the defensive, but has even retreated in certain sections of its line of battle, abandoning important positions. In one of these retreats, known as Amendment No. 1, the Board modified

A Hamper Basket of Flowers that has Proved Popular in Boston this Spring.

Regulation 3 of the quarantine so as to permit the importation of lily bulbs packed in sterilized soil. Amendment No. 2 is published on page 26 of this issue. Among the board's defensive movements are its argumentative messages, such as the one which here follows. It will be noted that the chief import of the board's reasoning in this instance is, that it is unsafe to rely on foreign inspection of nursery stock. Here is the complete message:

"The main arguments of objectors to Plant Quarantine No. 37, which will greatly restrict the entry of nursery stock and other plants and seeds, beginning June 1, 1919, are that either no pests are brought in on such imported stock or that thorough inspection abroad would eliminate any undesirable insects. There is no question that the chief exporting foreign governments have given to their nursery stock the best inspection which human skill and science can afford. Failures, says the United States Department of Agriculture, are due to the human equation and to conditions not subject to change, which make inspection and certification insufficient safeguards.

Inadequacy of Foreign Inspection.

"The inadequacy of such inspection since 1912, when it became operative, is shown by the findings resulting from reinspection of imported material at destination in this country. Data gathered by the United States Department of Agriculture show that there have been received from Holland 1,051 infested shipments, involving 148 kinds of insect pests; from Belgium, 1,306 infested shipments, involving 64 kinds of insects; from France, 347 infested shipments, involving 89 kinds of insects; from England, 154 infested shipments, involving 62 kinds of insects; from Japan, 291 infested shipments, involving 108 kinds of insects; from Germany, 12 infested shipments, involving 15 kinds of insect pests. Many of these intercepted insects are not known to be established anywhere in this country and numbers of them, if established, would undoubtedly become important farm, garden or forest pests.

"Typical of the insects thus imported, some of which have come in on more than 1,000 shipments, are the records in relation to gypsy and brown tail moths.

"Under the system of inspection which has been established in the principal exporting countries, there is little excuse for the passing and certification of stock infested with the egg masses of the gypsy moth or with the large and rather conspicuous leafy winter nests of the larvæ of the brown-tail moth. In point of fact, however, during the period in which the highest possible grade of inspection has been enforced, no less than fifty-two different shipments of plants from foreign countries have been found to be infested with egg masses of the gypsy moth or larval nests of the brown-tail moth. Three of these were from Japan and the others were from France, Holland or Belgium.

When American Inspection Fails.

"Unfortunately, these records do not necessarily comprise the total entry of these two pests. They represent merely the instances of infestation discovered by reinspection on this side. Under the law the inspection of imported nursery stock in this country is left to the inspectors of the states, and the finding of infestation is therefore entirely dependent on the efficiency of state inspection. In many states this inspection is of a high order and probably most, if not all, instances of infestation are found. In other states the inspection service is inadequately provided for and insufficient, and in a few states the service has little support and little, if any, efficiency. There is, therefore, the possibility that one or both of these pests have already gained foothold at one point or another in the United States and have not yet been discovered and reported. In this connection, it should be remembered that the gypsy moth was twenty years in Massachusetts before it was known, and this in the face of the fact that the infestation started in a thickly populated suburb of Boston.

"That foreign inspection gives no real securities is sufficiently shown in this record relating to two insects for which there is little, if any, excuse for overlooking.

Danger to Human Beings.

"The establishment of these two insects in different parts of the United States would soon lead to their general spread throughout the country. What this would mean in cost and damage and also in human suffering can hardly be estimated. Only a portion of the New England states is now invaded by these insects, and yet the expenditure in clean-up and control work alone amounts to more than a million dollars a year by the states concerned, in addition to an aiding federal appropriation of upwards of $300,000 annually.

"An important consideration in relation to the brown-tail moth is that, in addition to the actual damage to deciduous forests, orchard and ornamental plantings, the larval hairs which are shed and fill the air at the time of the transformation of the insect to the chrysalis stage have an intensely irritating or nettling character, which causes a great deal of inflammation to the exposed parts of the human skin, such as the neck, face and hands, and this irritation, in one or two known instances, and perhaps in others, has been the cause of death by affecting the lungs and leading to fatal cases of tuberculosis. Should the brown-tail moth reach the south and southwest, this irritation to human beings would doubtless be increased by reason of greater warmth and by the moisture of the skin and consequent greater likelihood of adherence of the larval hairs."

BUCKEYE BULL'S-EYES

WANTED: A FORMULA.

With few exceptions, the poor attendance of florists at meetings designed for their instruction or entertainment is notorious. Despite the most urgent business necessity of their presence, or the persistent efforts of special committees to secure their appearance, the great majority of florists make themselves conspicuous by their absence. And club presidents, actuated by a conscientious desire to make their administrations noteworthy in point of service rendered, are frequently at their wit's end to find some hitherto untried plan to promote a fuller and more representative attendance at the regular meetings.

A single illustration will serve to indictate this peculiar weakness. April 2, the entertainment committee of the Cleveland Florists' Club held a smoker at the Hollenden, the announcement having been made by personal notice, sufficiently in advance. Although the social activities of the club had entirely ceased during the war, and notwithstanding the return of many of its members from the army, in addition to an excellent program and refreshments, but thirty out of a total membership of over 200 honored the event by their presence. The same lack of interest is also manifested by the small attendance at the business sessions.

In all organizations, it is said, active interest is taken by a minority; but this should not obtain in business bodies, the reason for whose existence is the promotion of the common good. In substance, the expression, "Let George do it," should be utterly tabooed. The example set by a few florists, who not only attend the meetings with religious regularity, but encourage their employees to do likewise, is praiseworthy, and should be the rule instead of the exception.

The plan adopted by our St. Louis brethren—that of bestowing prizes for faithful attendance at meetings—might be copied with benefit by the Cleveland club. Obviously, a stimulus of some sort is needed, as at present the club is not sustaining its enviable record for progressive accomplishment. Mac.

CARNATION PRICES.

The eternal law of supply and demand governs the prices of all commodities, including carnations. At peak times they never were, nor will they ever be adequate to the demand. Annually a better market is being created for flowers by unexampled publicity and, production not being augmented commensurately, higher values are the inevitable result. The great desideratum is an improvement in output and in quality, as well as quantity.

Logically, the incentive of a price permitting profit must exist to induce the grower to enlarge his crops and possibly sacrifice much in the attainment of quality; for it should be remembered that demand alone establishes price. There is no other recipe for securing and maintaining increased production. It is imperative for growers to organize and to agree upon a safe and equitable selling price, after a careful examination of cost, and commission men should work in thorough harmony. The average price per flower should be considered in its relationship to the average cost, with the percentage of loss operating to raise or lower the former.

Upon this sound basic structure the retail florist is obliged to build his business; and, being closest to the public, the welfare of the profession is virtually in his hands. If he is eminently fair to the public, his work is constructive and the entire trade is benefited. If, on the other hand, he charges immoderate prices for popular flowers—for instance, white carnations on Mothers' day—his practice is substantially destructive, and his act should meet with a well merited rebuke by his local trade organization. The retail florist is entitled to a legitimate margin of profit and it should be established in concert with his fellow retailer, after a close scrutiny of the cost of operating. His margin, however, should not be inflexible, but sufficiently elastic to safeguard the good will of the public, as well as his own interest—a practice in vogue in the successful department stores and well worthy of emulation by florists. Mac.

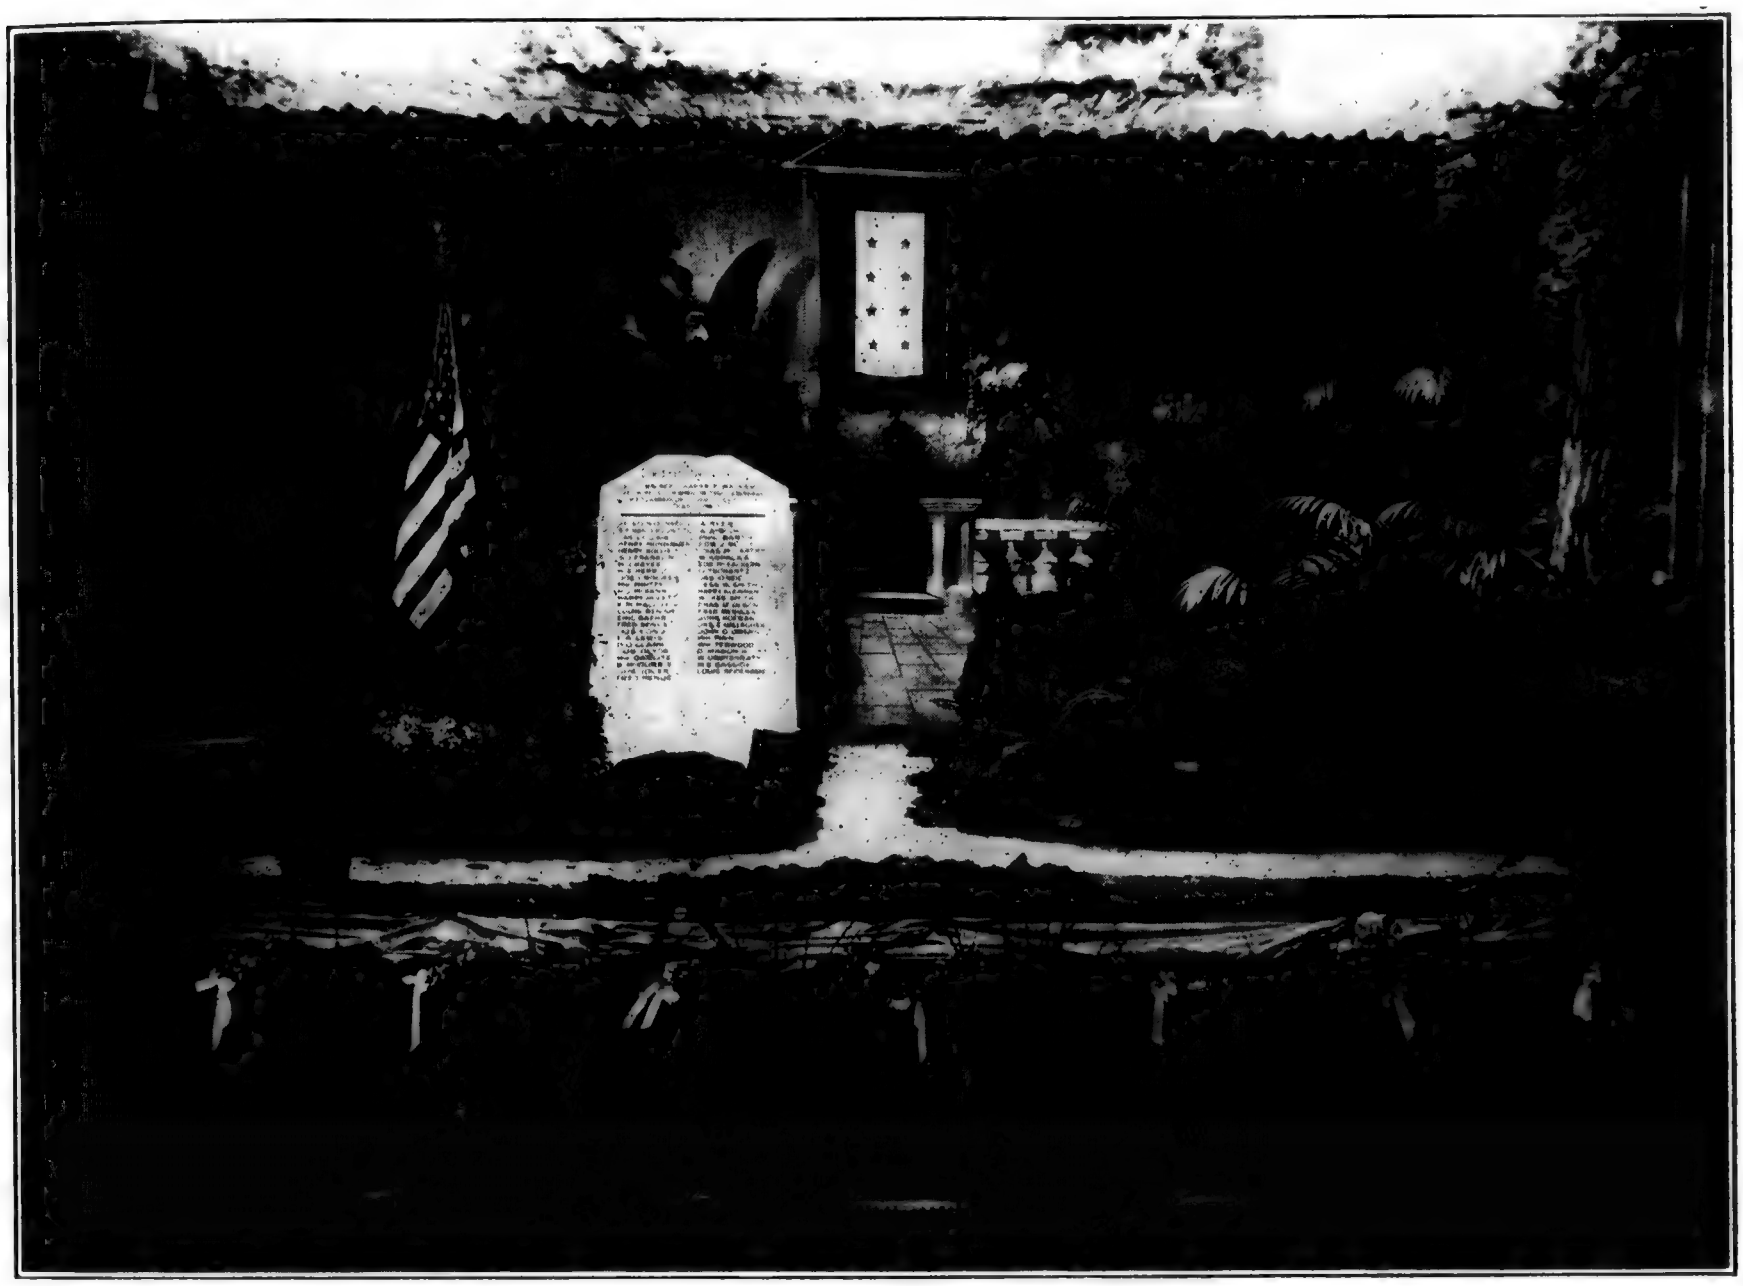
HOW ABOUT HEROES' DAY?

Allow me to make a suggestion to all flower growers and florists, both wholesale and retail. Let us have a Heroes' day November 11 of each year and "Say It with Flowers."

In memory of our departed heroes, let all Americans wear yellow chrysanthemums for the brave lads who fought and won and died for us "over there." To our living heroes let us show that we shall not forget what they did for us by sending them white chrysanthemums on Heroes' day, November 11.

Picture that mother or wife, who gave her loved one for you and me, receiving November 11 a box of yellow blooms, together with a card bearing a tender message of comfort. I am sure those flowers would be kept fresh as long as possible.

Picture the smile of a laddie who wore the khaki uniform, perhaps minus an arm or leg, and a sailor boy in blue, receiving a box of white chrysanthemums in honor of the greatest victory ever won. The great day was November 11, 1918.



Come, growers and florists, let us place flowers where they belong. That place is the place of honor. I repeat, "Say It with Flowers" on Heroes' day, November 11. Mrs. George Wolfrum.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

CENTAUREA AND GYPSOPHILA.

During some severe winters, the autumn sowings outdoors of Centaurea Cyanus are liable to winter-kill, but the winter of 1918-19 has been so abnormally mild that practically every seedling is alive and now making an active growth. The writer prefers the double to the single blue bachelor's button and the double pink comes next in popularity.

If you want some of these popular annuals and failed to sow any last fall, or to start any in small pots under glass, you can make a sowing outside as soon as the soil is dry enough to be workable. Nothing is gained by waiting until the soil is warm. A number of annuals do vastly better if started while both soil and atmosphere are cool, including mignonette, candytuft and sweet peas, all of which are valuable commercially. At the same time also make a sowing of Gypsophila elegans and continue to make sowings of this useful annual until the middle of July. If you have an empty frame, put in a few sashes of Gypsophila elegans or centaureas now. Be sure they have good soil below them. Keep the sashes over them until the weather becomes settled and they will come in well ahead of open-air-sown seedlings of the same annuals.

PERENNIAL PHLOX.

As the perennial phlox clumps start to push up their numerous shoots is the proper time to take a liberal batch of nice, succulent cuttings, which will practically all root in any propagating bench which will root mums or carnations. You can hardly grow too many of the best varieties of hardy phlox, such as Miss Lingard, Elizabeth Campbell, F. G. Von Lassberg, Europa, Le Mahdi, Coquelicot, Richard Wallace, Rynstrom, Beacon and Esperance. You can either pot off these cuttings singly, or lift with good roots and line out eight inches apart in the field or garden about May 1. These will give you a handsome truss of flowers each at a time when the older clumps are on the wane and make excellent clumps for fall sales. Be sure to give them a deep, well enriched soil, but do not use any fresh manure about them.

STEVIAS.

It may seem unimportant to bother about the stevias now, when so much else needs doing, but next fall and winter you will be badly handicapped unless you have a good batch of this useful little flower. This will serve as a reminder that there still is time to put in a generous batch of cuttings. They root easily and should then be potted off, pinched and grown cool. In a short time they can go into a coldframe, to gradually harden them before time for planting out. Perhaps you may prefer to grow your stevia in pots through the summer and this plan has the advantage of securing nice, stocky plants, which can be flowered a little earlier than lifted stock, and it does away with the work of digging up and potting. Of course, against this is to be placed additional labor in watering and potting, but, having tried both plans, the writer of this note has concluded that pot culture gives finer plants, better flower spikes and more of them than are produced on field-grown plants. For pot plants, the dwarf form of serrata is best, but for cutting by all means grow the tall variety.

A BELGIAN'S WAR EXPERIENCE.

The name of De Smet Freres is well known to large numbers of American florists who never have visited Belgium, for it was on the labels of some of the best azaleas that came to this country before the war. The following letter, then, will be of interest to many readers of The Review. It was written by one of the De Smet brothers and was made public by a customer in England. In part it was as follows:

The communication states that the Germans arrived in Ghent October 12, 1914. "In September we had already some battles in our neighborhood, but we did not suffer and we went to visit the battlefields. We established our daughters at Heyst, but they fled from there and went to England, where they are now, but we expect them back every day. Mr. Snow, of Bush Hill Park, took them under his protection and Mr. Eisele, of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, provided them with money. We knew all that and were contented and happy, although we had scarcely a letter from them. Everything has been dear and scarce. Nearly every month the German soldiers came to our houses to look for plunder. They requisitioned all our copper, wool, leather, bicycles; our meat, ham, eggs, butter and other food in the house they took away. But we put most things away in security and they could only find a little plunder. They are thieves and murderers, but we bore everything with courage, knowing that we would be victorious. From October 25 to November 11 last we had dangerous days during the battles around Ghent. The Germans had put sixty cannon close to our nurseries, and we heard during all those days the shells flying and whistling over our nurseries, but we suffered no more damage than a lot of glass broken by shrapnel."

Toledo, O.—Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, stopped off to congratulate Mrs. E. Suder on passing another milestone in her life of floral activity. Fifty years in the same place is an enviable record and our busy confrere is as active as ever, although her son, Arnin, now has charge of the greenhouses, which are filled with a choice line of Easter stock.

OFFICE: 1170 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Magazine Advertising.

In the June issue of the Metropolitan magazine, which has a subscription circulation of nearly half a million and a readers' circulation of perhaps two million more, will appear an insert page, 11x14 inches, in colors, featuring our glass sign, "Say It with Flowers," and its use in a florist's window. Two small panels at the foot of the page will carry the following legends:

"If you would have friends—be one.

"REMEMBER:

"The anniversaries, the birthdays, the events that call for congratulations of your friends with a token of flowers. What hurts quite as much as the knowledge that 'someone' who should remember 'forgot all about it' this year? Life is made sweeter by those friends who never forget. You will have such friends if you are one.

"REMEMBER:

"For flowers that will exactly express as living, breathing messages, the words your heart would dictate, go to the florist displaying the sign, 'Say It with Flowers.' His affiliation as a member of the Society of American Florists gives him advantages that better fit him to serve you.

"Your local florist, within a few hours, can deliver fresh flowers in any city or town in the United States and Canada through the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Service."

Recognizing Support.

This advertisement is intended as a direct recognition of the support to the campaign given by the many florists who, through watchful interest, have realized the immense amount of good resulting from the efforts of the publicity committees so far put forth, and who have backed these efforts with liberal subscriptions.

It will pay any florist who has not already provided himself with one or the other of our signs to supply himself without delay. The glass sign may be had from the secretary for the small amount of $2. This is a unit of four decalcomanie signs for $1. A careful reading of the lower legend quoted above should show the reason for this suggestion.

Become a "real American florist," Mr. Nonsubscriber. You surely have the interests of the trade at heart, or you would not be—in fact, could not be—a florist. Join this movement for the good of the business which is providing your living. Send in your contribution to the campaign fund—monthly payments, if you prefer—and join the grand organization which is upholding and protecting our industry.

Mailing Broadside.

Our promotion bureau is mailing to the 14,000 florists on our mailing list a broadside detailing the work of our campaign, describing the various aids for linking up with the national publicity, and designed to increase interest in our work. With it will be sent a specimen of the magazine page referred to in this article, subscription blanks, and other matter. Any florist not receiving a copy of this broadside can have one on application to this office.

VARIOUS S. A. F. MATTERS.

New Journal Mailed.

The March number of the Journal of the Society of American Florists was sent out under second-class mailing privileges accorded by the postal authorities. Any member who did not receive his copy should communicate at once with the secretary. This number contained a full account of the midwinter meeting of the executive board, with reports in full, up-to-date news of the national publicity campaign, a list of new members, and other matter of interest to members.

A proposed amendment to the constitution and by-laws is to be presented to the convention in Detroit next August, increasing the life membership fee to $50. Members in good standing contemplating life membership will do well to take notice of this and send in their checks for $25, the amount of the fee at present, thus avoiding the possibility of having to pay the higher rate later on.

The 1919 convention will open in Arcadia hall, Detroit, Mich., August 19, continuing through the two days following. Indications point to a record-breaking gathering.

The Trade Exhibition.

From inquiries already received, the trade exhibition to be held in connection with the convention will surpass all previous exhibitions of this nature. Floor plans will be sent out next month, but prospective exhibitors should not wait for the plans before making reservations. There will be no preferred locations in Arcadia hall, as the exhibition will be staged and the business sessions held on the same floor. The space rental has not been increased, and is the same as charged at previous exhibitions—40 cents per square foot. Among the early applicants for large blocks of space are the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; Joseph G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia; Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind.; A. Henderson & Co., Chicago; John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.; Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, and Schloss Bros., Ribbons, Inc., New York.

To facilitate arrangements, orders for space should be sent in now. This will be a phenomenal convention, with many new features to attract trade visitors from all sections of the country, and it will pay exhibitors to take liberal space. John Young, Sec'y.

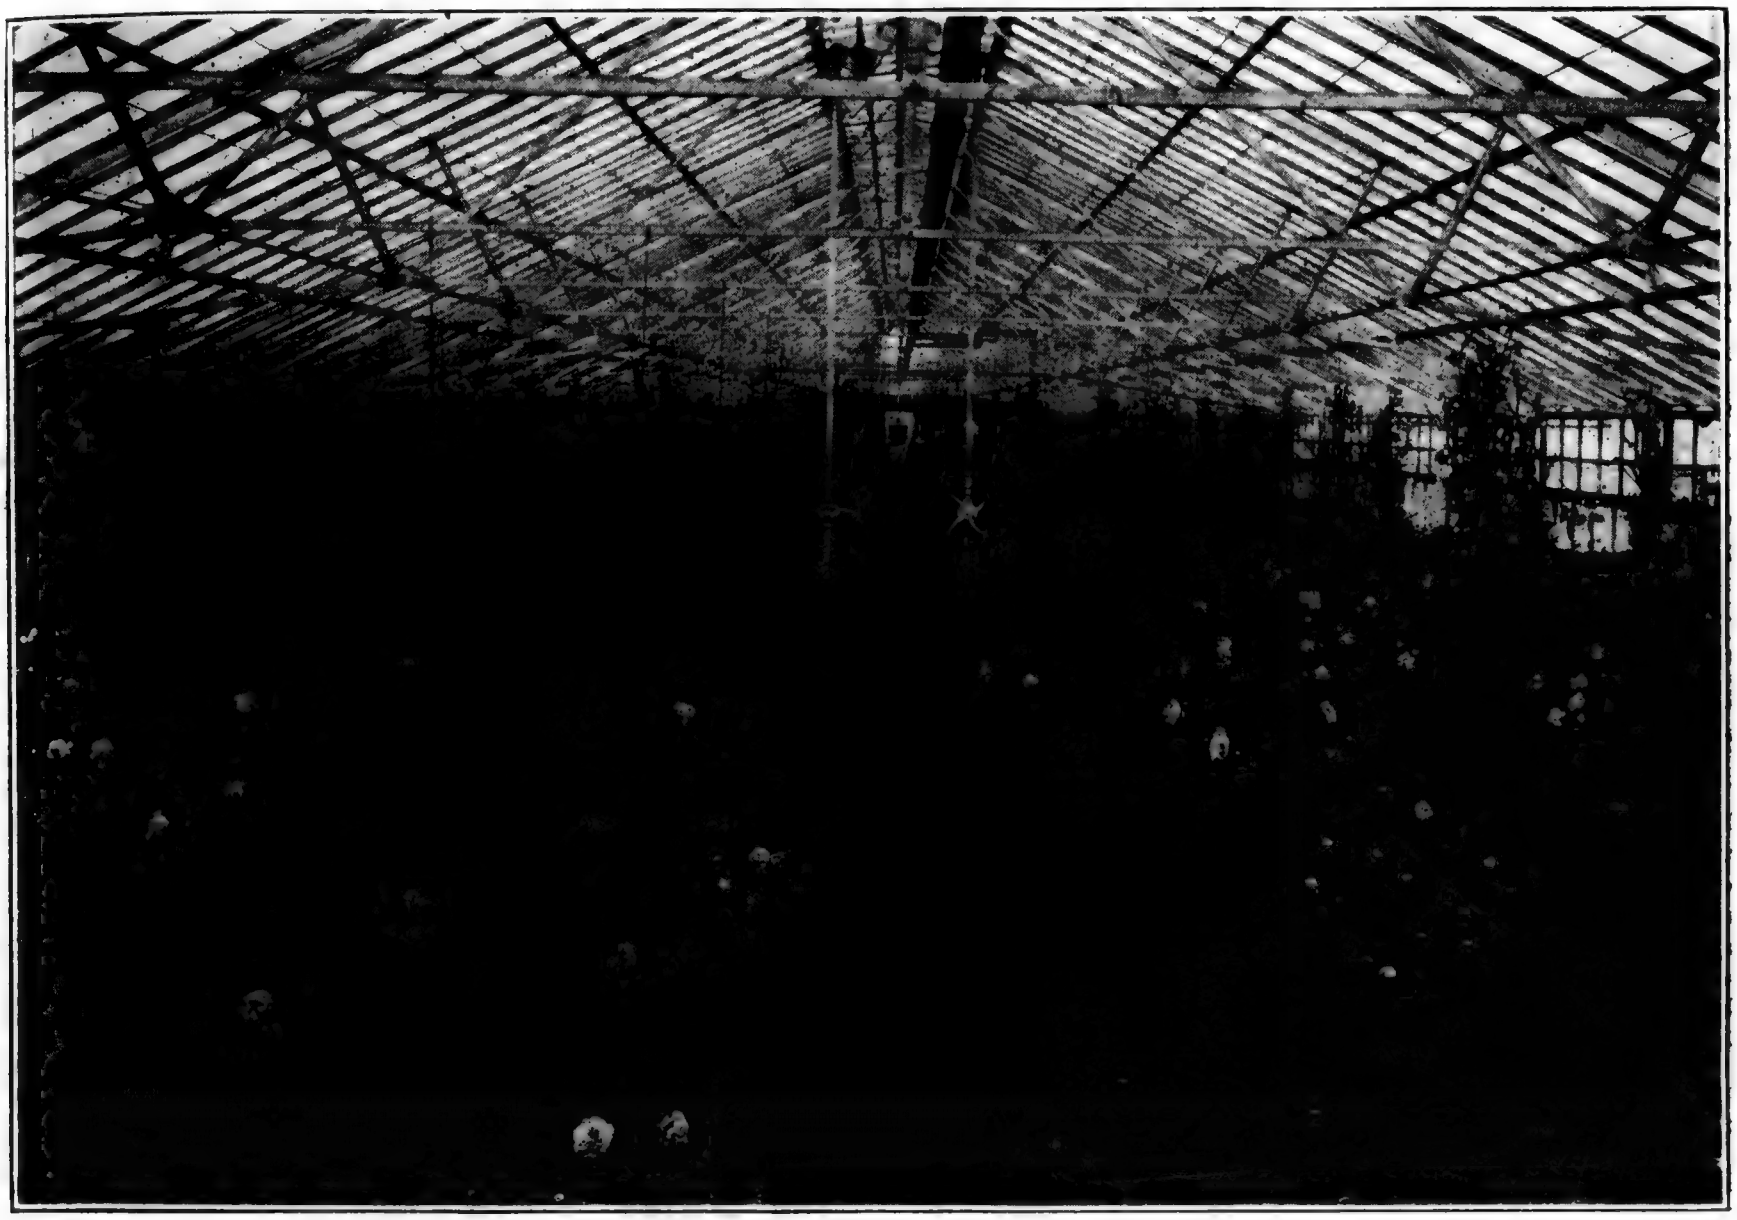
RUST ON CARNATIONS.

Our carnations, especially the red variety called The Herald, are getting covered with rust. Please tell us what to do for the rust and where the material can be purchased, with directions for its use. S. B. —Ill.

Bordeaux mixture, which you can obtain at any seed store, will help you to keep down the rust. Apply it thoroughly after having picked off the leaves most affected.

SOLID CARNATION BEDS.

I would like a little information on making up solid beds to grow carnations, with sides of either lumber or concrete, two or two and one-half feet high. If filled with ashes as drainage, how far up is it necessary to put the ashes? Or is the whole space filled with soil, with only a little drainage at the bottom?



W. G.—Can.

We build our beds twelve to fourteen inches high, using pecky cypress boards and red cedar posts. All but the top four inches is filled in with cinders. We change the soil each season, the same as is done with raised benches. To build your beds twenty-four to thirty inches high, you will need a lot of cinders. You probably will have trouble in keeping the sides up, unless you set your posts quite deep. We consider fourteen to eighteen inches the most desirable height, everything considered.

CARNATIONS IN MISSOURI.

Longview Farm, at Lees Summit, Mo., is the property of R. A. Long. C. J. Tucker is manager. The farm has been famous for its pure-bred Duroc Jersey hogs, but it is rapidly coming to the front in another sphere, that in which the readers of The Review principally are interested. The greenhouses at Longview Farm are of modern construction and in apple-pie order. The accompanying illustration shows one of the houses devoted to carnations and its condition speaks for itself. Growers will be interested in the sweet pea plants spaced at intervals in the carnation beds. It has been found that this method gives excellent results, producing peas of quality without injury to the carnations. Shawyer rose is one of the specialties at Longview Farm, it having proved much at home there.

MONTREAL, QUE.

The Market.

The month of April was ushered in with a snowfall of about twenty-one inches in less than twenty-four hours. The only reminders of spring were the artistic displays in the windows of the local florists. As this is a most unusual condition at this time of the year, it is causing the growers some little anxiety, as some fear that such a state of affairs, preceding a holiday, will prevent their plants from blooming in time; while others are afraid their plants are too far advanced.

However, Easter is only two weeks off, and as the sun is daily getting stronger and the weather warmer, more confidence is being felt.

In another week the responsibility will shift from the grower to the retailer, but there is little cause for worry, as every person purchases flowers or plants at Easter, and willingly pays good prices for them.

Business seems to have slackened a little in the retail trade, but in the long run this has proved rather beneficial, as everyone is given the chance to take stock and make the necessary preparations to handle the Easter trade. At the same time, this slackness is to be wondered at, just at this particular time, for all the department and dry goods stores are featuring their Easter millinery openings. While no expense is spared in these fashion shows, yet little of it seems to reach the florists. Who is to blame? In some cities the retailer finds this an extremely profitable trade, coming, as it does, in a dull season.

The display men advocate the use of flowers for window trimmings, and with this to urge them on, it is believed that the up-to-the-minute department stores will not hesitate to purchase, provided the florist offers them an attractive display at a reasonable figure.

Various Notes.

Bryson's have again opened their floral department and are displaying a good line of cut flowers.

Montreal florists have received a questionnaire from Toronto regarding a retail association. This is a step in the right direction and deserves active support.

The automobile show opens this week and local florists have received orders from certain motor car manufacturers for floral decorations.

W. J. T. Ivey is receiving a quantity of sweet peas and feels sure that there will be a plentiful supply of these for Easter.

The Montreal Floral Exchange, Ltd., is receiving more stock than at any time in the last year. Still there is no chance of a glut, according to the manager, Mr. Cotter.

Miss A. Gerneay, one of our leading French-speaking florists, reports a busy year. She has been particularly fortunate in receiving some exceptionally fine orders from the city authorities.

Thomas Hill is kept busy and is quite optimistic as to the future of the florists' business.

The Alps, a thriving flower store, reports business as showing a big increase over last year.

J. A. C.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is holding up well. Last week there was a surplus in the market during the early part and middle of the week, but toward the end this cleaned up fairly well. The demand from out of town is extremely heavy.

The supply of roses is fair and equal to present needs. The same is true of carnations. Easter lilies are in good supply and are selling well. The larger part of the prospective cut of this flower for Easter already has been sold. Some excellent callas and rubrum lilies may be had. Sweet peas are in fair supply.

Bulbous offerings include daffodils, jonquils, Darwin tulips, Narcissus poeticus and freesias. Some excellent snapdragons are coming into the market. Among other offerings are orchids, pansies, mignonette, calendulas, forget-me-nots and wallflowers.

The supply of greens is fair. Wild smilax is meeting with a good demand.

Various Notes.

The April meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held April 14.

L. H. Kyrk furnished carnations for the Rotary Club, of which he is a member, used to shower the members of the 136th Artillery, which was welcomed here April 4. E. G. Gillett and the William Murphy Co. assisted Mr. Kyrk.

R. Witterstaetter has an excellent lot of potted roses, as well as hydrangeas, for Easter business.

C. E. Critchell has been having a strong demand for hanging baskets and green sheet moss during the last fortnight.

The Eck brothers, who have returned from service in the army, are opening a retail flower store on Vine street, above Twelfth street.

Among recent visitors were W. G. Matthews, of Dayton, O.; Charles P. Brunner, of Springfield, O.; Fred Rupp, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., and Joseph H. Hill, of Richmond, Ind. C. H. H.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A week of rather cool weather, with little sunshine, reduced the supplies of cut flowers quite materially and, as a consequence, prices advanced, especially on roses and carnations. Roses stiffened after April came in and have held their advance. Milder weather, with clear skies, naturally will cause a reaction. On short-stemmed stock, prices doubled and all grades made good advances. Where a week ago prices on short-stemmed flowers were from $1 to $2 per hundred, with slow trade at these prices, the same grades now readily sell at $3 to $4, with one or two varieties bringing $5. The quality of roses is now fine and all flowers are of an extra fine color. Columbia, Ophelia, Russell, Hadley, Shawyer and Miller are great favorites. The Killarneys sell lower than other varieties. Carnations have braced up and $4 was bottom price April 5 and 7, with fancies like Good Cheer and Laddie selling for $8 and $10 per hundred.

Violets are getting fewer and are of poorer quality, but sweet peas are fine and are selling well.

Lilies are scarce and dear; callas are abundant and moderate in price. Dutch bulbous flowers realize high prices. Snapdragon cleans up better, while both marguerites and pansies have had good calls. Some nice Gypsophila elegans is arriving and sells well. Cattleyas are scarce and there is a reduced supply of other orchids. There is a fair supply of valley, with but little call for it. Pot plants are of fine quality and are meeting with an excellent demand. Practically every Easter variety is now obtainable.

New Florists' Organization.

About 100 members of the florists' trade, including wholesalers, retailers, growers and salesmen, met at the Boston City Club April 1 to discuss problems pertaining to the trade and, after partaking of an excellent dinner and listening to a number of persuasive speeches, voted to form an organization for the betterment of all branches of the trade. The name of the new organization will be the Boston Florists' Association. Membership will be confined to the trade. Officers were elected as follows: President, Henry Penn; vice-president, W. H. Elliott; treasurer, W. C. Stickel; financial secretary, J. Frank Edgar; recording secretary, E. F. Gorney. Another meeting will be held soon and will, it is hoped, put the association on a permanent basis.

There has been need of such an association in Boston for many years. It is one which is expected to iron out differences and harmonize all elements in the trade. The mere election of officers will mean little, however, if these men are not supported by the rank and file. The Boston Retail Florists' Club started off with considerable eclat, but has been in a comatose condition for a long time. If all elements in the trade will come out and support the new association, it should prove of considerable value to all its members.

Spring Show in 1920.

The committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on prizes and exhibitions has practically completed the schedule for the spring flower show of 1920. The dates will be March 24 to 28. Orchids will be a great feature and $4,000 in prizes will be offered for them alone. For a commercial group covering 250 square feet, premiums of $500, $300 and $200 are offered. There are several other group classes and numerous classes for twelve, six and single specimens, which take in practically every important orchid genus.

Other important features of this show will be rock gardens and rose gardens, in addition to the usual wide assortment of spring flowering plants. Schedules will be ready during the present month.

Various Notes.

William R. Morris, of Wellesley, has had remarkable success with carnations this season and no finer flowers come into the Boston market than those sent by him. Mr. Morris was formerly a rose specialist and planted his carnations in the old rose soil. In this they have made surprising growth. He has over 50,000 plants. Of Ward 10,000 are grown and they do so well that 15,000 will be planted next season. Beacon, Benora, Matchless, Pink Delight and Fenn are other sorts grown. Doris will be planted next season and one or two others, if Mr. Morris can secure stock.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, April 15, George N. Smith, of the Wellesley Nurseries, will give an illustrated lecture on "Community Betterment," which will prove of great value to every gardener and florist who has any planting to do. There will be much business of importance to be given attention at this meeting.

T. F. Galvin, Inc., at the Park street store, has a notable display of choice flowering plants. One window is devoted to roses; others to French hydrangeas, including big specimens in tubs; acacias, ericas, rhododendrons, genistas and deciduous flowering shrubs.

William Hannan & Son, of Dorchester, has some 10,000 cold storage lilies in good shape for Easter. They have a large stock of bulbous plants in pans.

The Welch Bros. Co. is making a handsome display of well-grown Easter plants and their growers promise them a big cut of roses, carnations and other flowers for the great flower carnival.

All the seed houses are busily employed now and obliged to work overtime to keep abreast of orders. Far more flower seeds are being sold than a year ago and there is a big call for nursery stock of all kinds. War garden orders are somewhat decreased, but many thousands of small growers are planting gardens again.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, finds Good Cheer the best paying carnation on his establishment. George Gordon, who handles Mr. Pembroke's flowers, says Good Cheer has averaged at least $8 per hundred for the entire season to date and he never has as many flowers as customers want.

Neil E. Boyle is cutting heavy crops of Stanley, Ophelia and the Killarneys. His new sport from Stanley looks fine and is sending up a great crop of strong, succulent shoots from the base.

The windows of Wax Bros., at 143 Tremont street, have a most charming appearance these days. Huge bunches of pansies are a feature, while anemones, irises, tritonias, calendulas, ranunculi and others suggestive of spring are attractively arranged.

F. E. Palmer, of Brookline, has a handsome lot of flowering plants for Easter in his Newton street greenhouses. Included are rambler roses, French hydrangeas, Dutch bulbs, azaleas, genistas and herbaceous calceolarias. The latter are fine, stocky plants. A batch of 3,000 cyclamens for next season looks fine. Mr. Palmer has an attractive nursery here and with George B. Palmer, his eldest son, as landscape chief, his business in this line shows a steady expansion.

Lively & Bond, of Holbrook, are having a successful season with callas, Dutch bulbs and carnations. Of the latter, Pink Delight, Matchless, Belle Washburn, Beacon and Ward are grown. Mr. Lively says that any scarlet carnation which will beat Beacon has to "travel some."

At Penn's this week one window is devoted to begonias, mostly Rex varieties, planted in beds with green moss-covered walks between them. All are named and the exhibit is both unique and educational.

The Quidnick Greenhouses, Quidnick, R. I., are having an excellent season with roses. They have especially good Ophelia, Shawyer, Double White Killarney and Hoosier Beauty.

The W. W. Edgar Co. has a fine stock of cold storage lilies for Easter; also roses in abundance, genistas, azaleas, lilacs, rhododendrons, bulbous plants and hard-wooded stock. They already are nearly sold out. W. N. C.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business continues quite good and the bright, warm days have brought on plenty of stock with which to do business.

Roses have finally become plentiful and are priced at $3 per hundred and up. These are to be had in almost all varieties. Carnations are abundant and in good demand, ranging in quality and price from $3 to $6. Lilies are equal to the demand.

Sweet peas are in large supply, but are readily utilized. These are in special favor along with various spring bulbous flowers for corsages and social affairs. The latter are becoming more numerous and the next two months bid fair to set a record, so far as social affairs are concerned.

Funeral work has been unusually heavy and flowers for the ill have been in constant demand.

Indications point to an ample supply of cut stock for Easter, but a great scarcity of all potted plants. Potted bulbous stock will be extremely short and other varieties of plants will be limited.

Indiana Florists Meet.

The regular meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association was held April 1, at the Smith & Young Co. commission house. In the absence of President Rasmussen, the meeting was presided over by the vice-president of the association, Herman Young.

Lawrence Greene, professor of agriculture at Purdue University, was proposed for membership. Besides Professor Greene, the following were elected to membership: H. D. Bookedis, of Indianapolis; Herman D. Roth, of La Fayette; M. A. Stewart, of Cleveland, O., associate member; Joseph Mock and Frank Rieman, both of Indianapolis.

An announcement was made of the acceptance of the invitation of the Kentucky State Florists' Association for the Kentucky show next fall. It is expected that a large delegation from Indiana will attend the show.

One of the unusual features of the meeting was the presence of Theodore Dorner, who has not graced a meeting in years. Mr. Dorner gave an interesting talk and, as president of the American Carnation Society, urged a large attendance of Hoosiers at the Chicago carnation show.

The meeting was well attended, both by city and state members. The latter included: W. E. Lommel, of Purdue University, La Fayette; Theodore Dorner, of La Fayette; W. W. Coles and Lincoln A. Coles, of Kokomo; Frank S. Morris, of Bloomington; Theodore D. Kuebler, of Evansville.

After the meeting a social hour was enjoyed. The hosts had prepared a splendid buffet lunch, to which justice certainly was done.

Various Notes.

Baur & Steinkamp have started a nine-hour day plan, which dates from April 1. Previous to that time this firm followed a ten-hour program.

S. T. Hitz is somewhat better after his operation, in which it was necessary to amputate his large toe.

The exhibition committee of the fall chrysanthemum show will soon have the preliminary premium list in the hands of the growers, so that the latter can make their arrangements accordingly.

E. H. Rieman has added a new truck to his delivery outfit.

O. E. Steinkamp motored to Richmond April 5, with his mother and father. The latter has been receiving treatment in an Indianapolis hospital for the last two months, but is now on the road to recovery.

Through the efforts of the committee selected by the Carnation Society to cooperate with English growers, the latter have received permission to import carnation stock from this country. Upon request, reports have been made of the various growers who can furnish stock for exportation, and some of this is now ready to ship.

The Market.

Although the receipts of stock for the week ending April 5 were extremely heavy, occasioned by the warm weather, there was no surplus on hand any day. This was due to the increase in business in all lines, particularly counter trade and flowers for social purposes. The latter part of the week there was an increase in funeral work, which used up a large quantity of stock. The weather is almost like that of summer and the forsythia shrubs are in bloom. Many bulbous flowers are seen outdoors.

There are some handsome snapdragons, well flowered and with long spikes, coming into this market, in all colors. They are used to a great extent in basket work and for funeral sprays. In many cases they are taking the place of sweet peas, which have been scarce during the last two weeks.

Roses are in good supply and many varieties are of splendid quality, especially Russell, which has an unusually good color. Carnations are more plentiful than they have been for some months, but retailers report there is no oversupply. Callas are at the height of their season now and are coming in to good advantage in funeral sprays and church decorations. Of the latter, there have been a large number during the Lenten season. The style show last week called for large quantities of flowers, for the most part in baskets. Some were sold for use in decorative work for show windows and the interiors of stores.

Orchids are having a good call for corsages and casket blankets. Bulbous stock is coming into the market in large quantities, especially tulips, daffodils and hyacinths. Single violets continue to arrive in good supply. Exceedingly few Easter lilies are offered on this market at present. Freesias, daisies, pansies, forget-me-nots, stocks, mignonette, sweet alyssum, pussy willows and narcissi make up the variety of stock offered.

In blooming plants, some attractive specimens of azaleas, spiræas, rambler roses, calceolarias and cinerarias are being offered. Many of these plants undoubtedly were intended for Easter, but on account of the warm weather the growers were unable to hold them over for this holiday.

The supply of potted plants for Easter will include hydrangeas, rambler rose plants, azaleas, pelargoniums, Martha Washingtons, calceolarias, a small quantity of bulbous stock, and a good supply of Easter lilies. Prices are expected to be high on Easter lilies.

Various Notes.

Some handsome snapdragons are being sent to this market from the greenhouses of the Flick Floral Co. This firm will have an excellent stock of cut flowers and plants, particularly Easter lilies and rambler roses, judging from the appearance of their greenhouses at present. An extremely unfortunate automobile accident occurred here last week, when the Auburn touring car belonging to the Flick concern was driven into a telegraph pole. The pole was broken in two, but Paul Shive, who was driving the car, escaped without serious injury.

George W. Doswell & Son will have a fine line of blooming plants for this Easter. These include azaleas, rambler roses, hydrangeas, pelargoniums, Martha Washingtons and lilies.

Mrs. H. J. Wickman, nee Rhoda Doswell, and small son, Ernest George, of St. Louis, Mo., are visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Doswell.

Lilies, hydrangeas, rambler roses and bulbous stock will be in good supply at the A. J. Lanternier store for Easter. This firm anticipates a heavy holiday demand and is preparing accordingly.

A large number of baskets and vases of cut flowers were sent out to various stores by Ed Wenninghoff for the style show last week. R. F. B.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Frank Hotaling, of Amsterdam, N. Y., opines that lily blooms will be so scarce this Easter that a plan will be adopted to sell the plant from $1 upwards, with but one bloom open, buds counting extra. He predicts a big business, basing his opinion on orders already on file.

• • • •

Joseph Traudt, of Canajoharie, N. Y., will have the best lilies in the Mohawk valley. Grown in a high temperature until buds appeared, then placed in a cool house, they will be just right for Easter. Spring stock is in fine shape. An additional house will be built during the summer.

• • • •

William P. Pfeifer, of Utica, N. Y., observed that he presumed his subscription to The Review should be charged up to the business when figuring out the income tax, as most assuredly it is a valuable asset. He notes, by the way, that he never knew until now how small a salary he drew out of the business. So the tax helps wake us up.

It was the noon hour, when, accompanied by James McLaughlin, of the J. M. Gasser Co., at Cleveland, O., I made a round of the retail stores to note the Saturday specials being offered in cut flowers. The variety and arrangement were distinctive and doubtless attracted the elusive dollar into the several cash registers. A stunning new delivery outfit Gasser's have in sight will make a hit on the streets at Easter.

• • • •

The business of J. Gammage & Sons, Ltd., of London, Ont., which suffered through the misfortunes of war, is rapidly recovering its former momentum with the return of the lads from the front, fortunately unharmed and again on duty at the store, while the head of the establishment is watching the finest lot of lilies seen in many moons. These will be just right for Easter. A choice batch of geraniums is another little gold mine this year. And, by the way, how did our Canadian brethren effect such a coup on Japanese lilies this year W. M.

IT may be in line to open flower stores in some of the good rooms which will cease to be saloons July 1.

WHAT this trade needs is not so much increased quantity as it is improved quality in plants and cut flowers.

MOTHERS' day comes only three weeks after Easter, and Memorial day less than three weeks after Mothers' day. Some busy season, eh, what?

THUS far there has been a big shortage of geraniums this season, but unless all signs fail there will be enough, perhaps some to spare, by late May or early June.

MOSS, one of the scarce items early in the season, has turned the way so many of our trade commodities do under the stimulus of a little better than the usual prices.

THE florists' business improves wonderfully in all its aspects as the units become larger. Big business can do with ease many things impossible to small business.

THERE will not always be the equal of this season's demand for plants and the shipper who thinks anything good enough to send to the man who has paid cash in advance will be the first to feel the change.

AFTER all, there are lilies, cut, enough to supply the demand this Easter—to supply the demand at the price, that is. Many retailers are not handling lilies because they are not disposed to pay the prices asked.

THE rapidity with which production has been brought back to normal has been the surprise of the season. Florists have been able to resume normal production more quickly than most other trades curtailed during the war.

IT is a perfectly good policy to ship cuttings and plants only to those who have sent cash with order, but with such a policy goes the necessity of satisfying the buyers. One who does not do so soon runs himself out of the business.

TEN years ago there were no flower stores outside the larger cities, practically all the product being retailed from the greenhouses. Now there are retail flower stores even in the small towns and scores of new ones are being opened this season.

THE Rainbow Number.

FLOWERS are linguists; they speak all languages.

THERE never was a time when the florists' business grew as fast as it is growing now.

ALL the signs indicate that the florists' business rapidly is returning to the conditions which existed before the war.

EXCEEDINGLY easy terms have been arranged for the Victory loan and florists will not be hard pressed in buying to the limit.

"STONE walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage," is a statement of fact. Another statement, just as true, is that flowers alone do not make a florist's shop.

THE high cost of tulip bulbs is given by city authorities of Boston as the reason for the absence of the usual beds in the public parks of that city this spring.

NOT much courage is needed to prophesy that Easter business this year will be good, and even a timid man might venture to say that a record or two may lose prestige when the figures are compiled.

THE immediate future of the fuel market still is in doubt. The coal trade and one government department seem to be seeking to stabilize prices at about the same level as last season, but the railroad administration refuses to recognize such action and contends that both coal and steel should come down still more.

THE farmers are decidedly opposed to the change of time occasioned by the daylight saving law, but florists, large numbers of whom work from sunrise to sunset, just as farmers were supposed to do, seem to favor the change. Giving advice to farmers is the city man's specialty, so The Review ventures the suggestion that those who do not like the present order of things just let the old clock run down and go on doing business by the sun as in ye olden time.

SHORT CREDITS, PROMPT PAY.

Florists should note the trend of the times indicated in the warning to credit men of the country that a new danger confronts them, by J. H. Tregoe, secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Credit Men, in a letter addressed to members of the organization. He declares there has arisen a demand for the exercise of credit skill such as never before has been known in the history of the nation. Mr. Tregoe states that a marked change has come to business in the last four months, as from a state of incapacity to produce all that was required, the business men now have capacity waiting on demand. To bring about a better balance between capacity and demand by increasing the latter is the problem, he continues.

"The time has arrived for credit men throughout the country," avers Mr. Tregoe, "to use ingenuity to sell and protect accounts to the fullest, a time to know every credit fact and have a well established reason for the hope that is in them. The credit men must not be obstinate in changing the attitude which has become fixed during the war period. We realize that the working out of readjustment problems rests upon the flexibility of commercial credits, yet it is just as important now that terms be short, collections prompt, with discrimination exercised in the selections of risks, as at any time in the war period.

"Don't be an easy mark in the time ahead when the pressure will be to let down credit bars. Never be accused of being easy, but be known as a credit man who is ready to grant credits liberally if only it can be shown that the basis of credit is there. The temptation is strong, but do not let down the bars in our hour of peril."

TOO MANY READERS.

It is generally recognized that practically all the florists, nurserymen and seedsmen in the United States are regular readers of The Review, and that this publication is the buyers' guide for practically the whole trade. Usually such a condition is considered a valuable asset for a trade paper, but this season there is complaint that The Review reaches too many buyers, that unless an advertiser has a pretty fair batch of stock the orders he receives exceed his ability to fill them. Like this:

For heaven's sake cut out my ad for Easter Greeting. It takes two men and a boy to open the orders and I spend most of my time returning money. I did not know there were so many florists in this good old U. S. A.—E. M. Robinson, the Emporia Floral Co., Emporia, Kan., April 2, 1919.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

QUALITY OUR CUE.

With each passing season florists come more and more into competition with those in other lines of business. This comes about through the addition of various lines of accessories, etc., which are being taken up by flower stores, and through the disposition of department stores to try out anything noted as selling well in specialty shops. But the florist has nothing to fear from competition if he makes quality the keynote of his establishment, both in merchandise and in service. The merchandise in a flower store should be of superior quality; there should be no attempt to compete on price. Not only should the flowers and plants be better than those offered elsewhere, but the ribbons, baskets, flower bowls and other items should be good. The handling of the stock should be as skillful as can be. The leaders in the trade are not the Cheap Johns, but those who strive to excel on quality. With the increasing wealth of the country there is an increasing number of buyers who know quality when they see it and who are willing to pay what quality costs.

Work each day toward a higher standard. Remember that it is not so much where we are, but where we are going that counts.

AN ANTIDOTE.

Enviousness is of course a bad thing and should be avoided.

If you have a little of it in your system in consequence of progress being made by some other concern in your line, you should take an antidote at once.

The best antidote in a case of this kind is advertising. It will eradicate the trouble more rapidly than anything else.

Do not take it, however, without expert advice. One way to get advice on the subject is to write to the Editor of The Review.

OBITUARY

Alfred Broman.

Alfred Broman, for the last ten years foreman for the J. S. Wilson Floral Co., of Des Moines, Ia., died suddenly April 3. Death was attributed to heart failure. Mr. Broman was found dead in his room early in the morning by his landlady.

Mr. Broman was 60 years old and a native of Norway. He came to the United States twenty-six years ago. He had been in the business of growing flowers all of his life and, before taking the position with the Des Moines concern, owned and operated a greenhouse in Independence, Mo.

Surviving Mr. Broman are a brother, P. Broman, of Chicago, and a daughter, thought to be living in Kansas City, Mo.

Funeral services were held and burial made in Kansas City, Mo., April 7.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

After a dullness extending over several days, the market became quite active during the last two days of last week. In a measure, the condition was accounted for by a shortening, to the point of passing, of the supply of bulbous flowers and a diminished supply of carnations, with, perhaps, a stimulation of the general demand, which had been quite sluggish for a time. This week opened with a continuance of these conditions and arrivals in all lines were on the short side.

Roses continue plentiful, but clearances are not difficult. Prices are quite well maintained and quality is good. Yellow varieties are scarcer, but this fact does not appear to occasion concern on the part of buyers. American Beauties are in fair supply, with the top grade at 50 cents, a normal figure. Other varieties are fairly even in supply, with short grades becoming more and more abundant.

Arrivals of carnations are not so heavy as they have been of late and prices have stiffened in consequence. The best stock brings as high as 8 cents, according to variety, but the general range may be said to be 3 cents to 6 cents.

Orchids are not in particularly good supply. In cattleyas, the general quality of arrivals is rather low. While the top-grade flowers of Mossiæ occasionally bring as much as $1 each, the next grade moves at 60 cents or less, with inferior grades down to 40 cents and even less. The general grades of gardenias move within a range of $3 to $5 per dozen, with special grades at $6 to $9.

Lilies are plentiful at prices ranging from 10 cents to 15 cents. There is considerable speculation as to what these will bring at Easter, but it is known that a number of orders have been booked at $25 per hundred, with no difficulty in the way of placing further orders. Lily of the valley is plentiful, but the quality is inferior. Prices range from 1 cent to 4 cents. A few rubrums are to be had at 8 cents to 10 cents.

Tulips have almost passed, with the exception, of course, of Darwins, which are now coming in. These command as high as $1 per dozen for the best. Narcissi, too, glass-grown, are about done, but the best of the final shipments are moving at 75 cents per dozen.

Spanish irises are plentiful, as are sweet peas, pansies, mignonette, daisies, callas, gladioli, wallflowers, delphiniums, lupines and ranunculi. Scabious and camellias also are among the offerings.

The Victory Loan.

Quotas for the Victory loan have been assigned to the florists' and allied trades of New York and Brooklyn, and the organization of committees has started. Philip F. Kessler will be chairman of the New York committee and William A. Phillips chairman of the Brooklyn committee. The latter committee also includes the whole of Long Island in its working territory.

In the last loan drive similar committees greatly exceeded their quotas and it is expected that in the forthcoming drive the efforts of the new committees will be rewarded by like successes.

Florists' Club.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held in the club's rooms, Grand Opera House building, Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue, on the evening of April 14. At this meeting, it is expected, the reply of the Secretary of Agriculture to the brief presented to him a few weeks ago will be formally presented and discussed.

Chairman Roman J. Irwin, of the exhibition committee, is making an effort to stage a fine exhibit of plants and flowers at this meeting.

Schedule Committee Meeting.

The schedule committee, having in charge the preparation of the schedule for the 1920 International Flower Show, is to meet at the secretary's office, 1170 Broadway, April 14, to discuss preliminaries.

Various Notes.

There was exhibited, April 5, in the window of Joseph S. Fenrich, 51 West Twenty-eighth street, a vase of the new rose, Frank W. Dunlop, raised by John H. Dunlop, of Toronto, Can. It is a cross of the roses Mrs. George Shawyer and Mrs. Charles Russell. Later in the day the exhibit was to be seen in the window of one of the stores of the Colonial Florists.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., is spending a few days in the city, calling on the trade. He has been making some side trips, one of which was a visit to Hadley, Mass., where he saw some new roses in the houses of the Montgomery Co., Inc., although they were in the last stages of propagation. While privileged only to see lateral blooms, he was impressed. "Anyway," he says, "anything Montgomery puts forward is almost sure to be right." Incidentally, it may be said that Hadley has been a Mecca of late, almost every visitor interested in roses having that town on his itinerary.

A visit to the plant growing establishment of Louis Dupuy, at Whitestone, N. Y., discloses some fine Easter stock, finished in the well known Easter style. While to describe the various items would be merely to catalogue them, a word must be said for the potted roses, which are superb. Chief among them are the varieties Tausendschoen and Excelsa, the former in a strong pink color, evidently a selected strain, and the latter generously budded, the open flowers and clean foliage at once testifying to the advantage the variety has over the old Crimson Rambler, when used under similar conditions. A surprise was a generous bench of Lilium candidum in pots, timed just right for Easter flowering. It was a disappointment not to have seen Mrs. Dupuy, who, since her return from Indian River, Fla., where she and her husband recently spent a winter vacation, has been quite ill. Edward Dupuy, since his return from France, has been visiting the trade in distant sections and now is actively engaged in his father's business.

Charles Weber, of Lynbrook, N. Y., is cutting some fine Laddie carnations. He speaks highly of this variety and, evidently, it appears to be up to the standard he looks for.

Frank R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, N. Y., was present at the meeting, April 3, of the Horticultural Club of Boston, on which occasion E. H. Wilson, the well known plant collector, was welcomed home from an expedition in eastern lands. E. G. Hill also was present, staying over for the occasion while returning from Hadley, Mass., to New York.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Last week's market showed strong symptoms of spring fever. There was not a large quantity of stock in the market, but the demand was what our former associate, W. E. Lynch, delighted to describe as lackadaisical, judged by this season's standards. The fact of the matter seems to be that flowers are much more plentiful in all that part of the United States tributary to the Chicago market and that ordinary demands can, in greater part, be met from home supply. The retailers who look to this market for their stock still are ordering in the usual quantities, but those who call on Chicago only in case of having business exceeding their own production are not being heard from so frequently as earlier in the season. The result is that there is considerable variation in the reports of wholesalers, depending on what class of buyers they cater to.

The market weakened on roses more than it did on any other item. Rose crops are rather on the down grade, but there were more roses than the market required last week and the condition still prevails, for spring weather has returned. While quoted prices for selected stock have not been greatly affected, the market does not clean up as it did earlier in the season and the average price is pulled down by the necessity of forcing a sale on the leftover receipts. In a general way the quality of roses is fine. This is especially true of Beauty, Russell, Ophelia and Columbia.

Carnations have held up splendidly in price considering the enervated condition of the market. There have been times when it was difficult to find carnations of shipping quality.

Sweet peas have become one of the important items. There are large quantities on the market and the quality in most cases is excellent. They are all Spencers; one never sees any of the old, grandiflora type on this market. A large business is being done with the peas because the fine flowers and long stems make them one of the best values in the market today. Violets are disappearing, are poor and are in slight request.

Snapdragon has come to the front. It will be one of the important items for the next few weeks. There are many fine varieties and the big spikes on long stems are excellent for decorative purposes. The short stock goes well for basket work. Valley was not obtainable at all times last week, an unusual condition. Bulbous stock is passing. The far southern jonquils are about gone. There is still the crop of southern Illinois, but it has not made its appearance here. In the meantime the limited quantities of greenhouse jonquils, daffodils and the few early tulips that are left are meeting a better market. Neither Easter lilies nor callas are as conspicuous as heretofore, the growers apparently trying to hold them back for Easter.

The supply of orchids is going down. There are few Cattleya Trianæ now to be had and prices are stiffening. Calendulas are popular. Mignonette is unusually plentiful for this time of year, but sells slowly. The early blue irises are about gone and only a few German irises are seen. A small lot of ranunculi sells well.

There are enough greens, but there is considerable waste in the cold storage ferns.

Easter Prospects.

The principal subject for discussion at present is the prospect for Easter. The retailers agree that the public is ready to buy, but there is considerable divergence of opinion as to what will happen when the people find there are few lilies and scarcely any bulbous stock, with the price of lilies at least double what it usually is. Some retailers profess to believe people will leave without buying, but more of them say there will be little trouble turning purchases to other lines, either cut flowers or plants.

reports that retailers are not ordering lilies because of the price, but the houses which have been advertising quantities of lilies say they have been booking advance orders steadily, with more prospect that the price will advance than that it will fall. roses to go around. Carnations are not in full crop; Mothers' day, three weeks later, is likely to see a larger cut than at Easter. Violets are out of the running, but there will be large supplies of sweet peas. These are the big items; the others will be in the usual supply.

Among the wholesalers there has been some expression of surprise that the market's leaders did not strike out for higher prices, considering all conditions.

Various Notes.

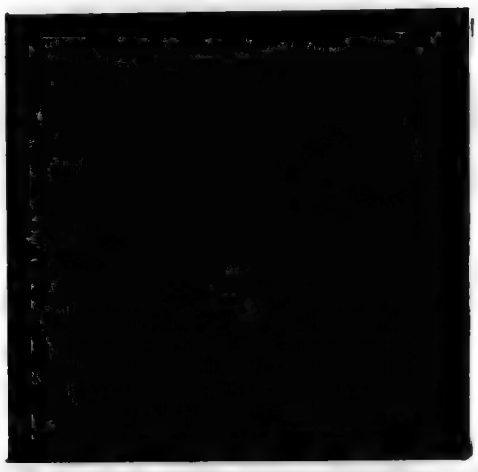
Some people think that success as a grower comes as a matter of good fortune and there is an idea among retailers that your good grower has it "pretty soft," but one gets a glimpse of the other side of the picture when it is stated that in the fourteen years Edward Meuret has been in business at Park Ridge he has slept off the place just one night! There is more than skill in being a good grower; there is painstaking and unremitting attention to business.

The Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, recently has added to its real estate holdings a tract of land lying between the present property and the Soo Line railroad, so that it now will be possible to get a railroad connection directly into the greenhouse property without going off the company's own land.

Mrs. Ward rose will practically disappear from this market in the next few weeks. Most of the growers discarded it two or three years ago and now Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, the largest producers of it during the last two seasons, are throwing it out to make room, principally for Columbia and Rose Premier.

Vern Schluraff has opened a new flower store at 11243 Michigan avenue. Mr. Schluraff formerly was in business for himself at Erie, Pa., but for two years was employed in the store of J. M. Cochrane, 11405 Michigan avenue, where a large business is done. Mr. Schluraff recently returned from the army.

That Easter orders at this date exceed anything in the history of the E. C. Amling Co., is the report of C. J. Michelsen.



At Wheaton R. Scheffler this season tried iris for the first time. He had fine success with tingitana and now is beginning to cut a splendid batch of filifolia. These are two of the flowers which will be missed from the market in future seasons unless an American supply of the bulbs is developed. Most of the stock has come from Holland, but some of the best bulbs have been obtained from the Channel Islands. They will be barred out by the approaching quarantine.

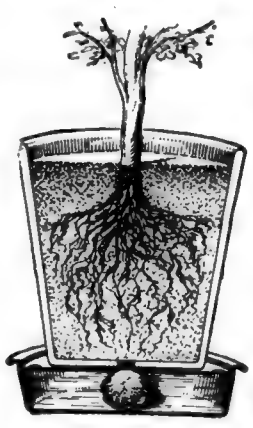
A new Cadillac in battle gray, with red running gear, was delivered to A. L. Randall last week. It is one of the niftiest gasoline buggies in town.

A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., is spending a week at the Twin Cities and neighborhood.

If current report may be relied upon, two local commission houses have made sales records around half a million dollars in the last six months.

H. N. Bruns believes that German valley pips will come to the United States next November. With Dutch and Danish pips he has been able to maintain a daily supply of cut valley in this market ever since the war cut off the normal supply of pips.

A. T. Pyfer, secretary of the Florists' Club, sent out an announcement that Hodgson Jolly had accepted an invitation to address the meeting April 10.



That business is more active than in many years is the report of R. E. Kurowski, of the John C. Moninger Co., who says the number of jobs under negotiation seems to indicate a big building season in the greenhouse trade.

John Mangel is the latest Chicago recruit in the ranks of the F. T. D.

It is said one of the commission houses has taken one Easter order for 1,000 callas. It would be pretty hard to fill unless one knew where the flowers are coming from.

It is reported that Albert Lies, of Niles Center, is planning to sell out and take a rest. He has been a successful grower of roses for many years and has a good range of about 65,000 feet of glass.

Allen Humason, who has traveled for various local supply concerns, returned from the army April 7 and will at once take up his former work.

Mrs. Victor Bergman is ill and her mother, Mrs. Ludwig, of the well known Pittsburgh florists bearing that name, is here to help her get well again.

F. M. Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., comments on the different attitude florists now take, remarking that a few years ago it was difficult to get the trade to accept baskets in assortment, whereas now orders come in, "Send me $500 worth," and then in the course of time, "Baskets running low; send another lot."

The Chicago Retail Florists' Association and the Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Association are doing fine work in the way of increasing the amount of business done in Chicago. These organizations were created to keep before the public the idea, "Say It with Flowers," and to promote that idea to the point of saying it with flowers, by publicity. Beginning with the use of the Chicago papers, they launched a new campaign last week, using the elevated roads as their medium. The executive board of the wholesalers is John Poehlmann, chairman; John Michelsen and Eric Johnson. The retailers' executive board is L. R. Bohannon, chairman; George Wienhoeber and George Asmus. Everyone is working hard to make the campaign a success and it is gaining ground each day.

H. Van Gelder, of Percy Jones, Inc., says he is more than pleased with the increase in transient trade in his first week in the Atlas block.

George C. Weiland, Evanston, is well pleased with results in flowering cold storage giganteum bulbs.

That roses will equal the demand, but that carnations will be short this Easter is the belief of Paul Klingsporn, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, after a tour of the greenhouses in the familiar Moline-Knight. He says many carnation growers will cut more heavily for Mothers' day than for Easter.

Word was received in Chicago last week of the death of C. M. Dudey, of Dubuque, Ia. He was an employee of the Northwestern Wire Works, in that city, and had been engaged in that line of work for many years.

Visitors.

C. M. Grossman, who ships gladioli, peonies, etc., from his place, Evergreen Farm, at Petoskey, Mich., was here last week. He grows gladiolus bulbs for the trade and reports the demand the strongest he ever has known. His planting will be increased this season.

Among last week's visitors was Earl Lehman, of the Quality Brands Co., Cleveland, distributor of Vitaplastic glazing compound. He was in high glee because of the success his concern has had in developing a glazing gun adapted to these new glazing materials.

H. Kusik, of Henry Kusik & Co., Kansas City, Mo., was in town last week.

A Visit to Poehlmann Bros. Co.

"While standing outside the Union station, in Chicago, waiting for the train to take me to Morton Grove," says Walter Mott, famous for his musings, "I saw an ancient nag, attached to a seagoing hack, slip and fall down. As the Jehu alighted to assist it to rise, the animal raised its head, surveyed the fleet of taxis sailing past, and looking at its master, seemed to say, in horse language: 'It is of no use, boss; we have got to quit. This is an age of progress.'

Roses for Easter

We will have a splendid supply of RUSSELL, more Russell than we have had at any holiday. Please do not order the cheaper grades and then be disappointed in the length of the stem and size of the flower.

You will find PRIMA DONNA a very satisfactory rose at this season.

Our big HADLEY will be very fine stock, in fact nothing better is coming to the Philadelphia market. We will have very few of the shorter grades; mostly long and medium.

In other Red Roses, we can offer you RICHMOND, McDONALD and short LIBERTY.

We will have a nice cut of OPHELIA, but very few of the shorts.

SNAPDRAGON

Any quantity of Pink, and also some White and Yellow.

This is one item of which we can promise you a large supply.

are very moderate, and you will make no mistake in ordering a liberal supply. It is items like Snapdragon that you will have to depend on this Easter to help make up a display.

ter stock being practically all spoken for, attention was called to the supply for later sales, especially cyclamens, of which an estimated number of 35,000 to 40,000 is being grown for next season. Many will be in 5 to 7-inch pans, a grand lot of plants. Among palms, Livistona rotundifolia is conspicuous. It is a satisfactory seller, giving satisfaction as a house plant. Adiantum gloriosum is the peer of its family.

"Cattleyas and phalænopsis are in fine shape. We saw a specimen of the latter which bore a spike that carried seventy-five blooms.

"Carnations and roses will be in heavy crop around Easter. The Beauties were especially interesting to Guy W. French, of French & Salm, Union Grove, Wis., who happened along, and who was Beauty specialist here before he left to grow the stock which has brought his concern fame in the Chicago market."

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The week opened poorly, but ended well, despite a rainy Saturday. March went out like a lion. April came in with a rush that would have done credit to any of the winter months. The effect was to cut down production. Business was fairly brisk, so prices improved.

Carnations have shortened a little. Sweet peas are apparently past the height of their season. Roses are plentiful, especially the inferior grades and short stems.

Single violets are over. Double violets are only in moderate supply. Southern daffodils are gone. Greenhouse-grown daffodils are short of the demand. There are a few tulips, mostly Darwin, as yet short in stem. Snapdragon is plentiful and fairly good. There are some lupines in three colors and some larkspur, pale blue. Daisies, pansies and calendulas are quite plentiful and nice.

To return to the better flowers, Russell promises to be more plentiful and good. Beauties are in moderate supply, becoming scarcer. There is a heavy supply of callas, but only a moderate quantity of Easter lilies. Shipping continues active.

A Chance to Uplift.

The next eight weeks will afford an unusual opportunity for putting our calling on a better plane. Will we grasp it?

On the one hand, we may go on in the old way that has brought us insufficient returns for our work. On the other hand, we can easily obtain proper remuneration for our labor. How? By knowing what our plants or flowers cost and asking a fair price for them, a price sufficient to give a sufficient profit after all costs have been met. On our decision in this matter rests the future of commercial floriculture—whether it will be worth while for the young men of tomorrow, the schoolboys of today, to go into our stores and our greenhouses, or whether they will say, "No, we can do better at something else," and leave to us only those who are less desirable. There is no need to overcharge, no need to "burn" those with whom we deal. There is great need of understanding values or there is great need of making those with whom we deal know that we do understand values.

Here is a story that will illustrate this point: There was an extremely clever grower of a certain variety of plant. He grew them better than anybody else. He sold them so cheaply that they barely paid cost and left nothing over to lay by for a rainy day. He was hit hard by the war. His place required improvements. He had no reserve. He went out of business. Today the market price of the plant he grew so well and sold so cheaply is four times as much as it was three years ago, when he ruled the market. This is out of all proportion to the advance in cost of labor and material. Had that man known exactly what his plants cost him and had he asked a fair price for them, he would not have been obliged to go out of business, but would have weathered the gale. The same principle applies to each and every one of us.

the secretary's salary. The secretary's salary had been originally fixed with the idea that the secretary would attend to the club's records and correspondence and that he would keep the minutes of the monthly meetings. While the amount of the salary was trifling, it was quite sufficient for the services expected. The present secretary, Robert Kift, has done this work and a great deal more. He has brought exhibits that have been worth coming miles to see. He has added many new members and encouraged others to do the same and he has put a lot of enthusiasm into his work. The motion to increase the secretary's salary was in recognition of this work. The motion was amended to a further increase. The motion as amended was passed.

A Solemn Dedication to a High Purpose

The highest ideals are attained only when a lofty purpose is in view as a goal.

That we may ever keep unfalteringly to the path of high ideals, we here place before the trade those purposes which are our goal.

We have long ago dedicated and now publicly re-dedicate our utmost effort to the attainment of that goal.

Our aim is to give to cut flower dealers a better merchandising service, in the full sense of the term. That all may know what we consider "better service," we are giving a summary below:

VALUE—In buying cut flowers value and price are sometimes confused. The flowers we ship are the kind which will yield to you the greatest profit, regardless of the price you pay. Flowers which do not satisfy your customers are always costly. When quality values are really a consideration, Randall's prices are the lowest.

CONSISTENCY—The service we give you is uniform. The best pleased Randall customers are those who buy regularly. You can feel that you are safe in placing your regular order with us. You will be treated right, not once, but always.

ORGANIZATION—No matter how unusual your requirements or extraordinary your demands, they will be filled if it is humanly possible. Every man in the Cut Flower Department, from its managers, who have grown up with it, to the packers and wrappers, have the buyer's interest at heart. Equally important, they all know how to do their part in giving service.

RESOURCES—The grandest aims or fondest hopes of service would be of little avail unless we had the merchandise to back them up. We are only stating known and admitted facts in saying that A. L. Randall Company markets the product of the largest combined area of glass in America. It naturally follows that our volume of cut flower business far exceeds that of any of our co-workers in the wholesale florists' business. The great number of individual growers whose stock we sell is in itself your guarantee of variety of stock, quality of flowers and fairness of price.

MODESTY—It is our aim to do the utmost to help the florists of this country to make money by giving service as here defined. We aim to do this efficiently and quietly, in both printed page and spoken word.

INFORMATION—Our Cut Flower price lists are the market guide for the majority of America's leading florists. If your name is not on the mailing list, a postal card from you will put it there.

ELEMENTS

The Improved Glazing Compound

COLD

Grip Plastic will withstand the most severe winter weather. Snow and cold will not destroy it.

Before we decided to offer Grip Plastic for sale we spent considerable time and money experimenting. It was our aim to overcome all of the faults so common in Glazing Compounds and putty. We have finally succeeded and now offer to you a superior glazing material. We have overcome chipping by making Grip Plastic pliable, allowing for expansion and vibration. Grip Plastic is waterproof and weatherproof on account of the pure asphaltum oil that forms one of the basic materials. After Grip Plastic is applied a thin film forms on the surface, keeping the compound beneath it in a soft, pliable condition, making it easily removed. It can be applied in less time than putty, regardless of weather conditions.

RANDO MOSS IS BACK

Guaranteed Rando Brand Selected Sphagnum Moss Will Again be Offered to Florists This Summer

QUANTITY LIMITED ORDER NOW

PULLING MOSS.

BACK in 1912 we said we were going to produce a new grade of Sphagnum Moss good enough to trade-mark.

They said, "It can't be done," so we did it.

The florists felt that "moss was moss," that there couldn't be much difference in quality and the kind they were using was the best to be had.

The "mossbacks"—men who had been gathering moss all their lives—did not see how their methods could be improved.

We knew that a better grade of moss could be produced, because every once in a while we would find a bale or a part of a bale of clean, fresh-colored, long-fibered Sphagnum in with a shipment of the usual, short, brittle, brown moss, which in those days was the best to be had.

To produce the moss good enough to trade-mark, we started at the very source. A large swamp in the best moss producing part of Wisconsin was finally located. This was covered with the finest growth of Sphagnum Moss that had ever been known in this section.

It had never been worked over and was in ideal condition. As can be imagined, a marsh of this nature was difficult to reach, so numerous roads and bridges had to be built.

To always guarantee long-fibered, clean, full growth moss, it was necessary to reach the farthest limits of the marsh. To do this, a complete system of narrow gauge railroad was built. Gasoline locomotives and flat cars were installed. By the use of this equipment it was made possible to secure the moss where it was best.

It was never necessary to pull any moss in an area where it had not grown to its full length and strength. No area of the Randall Marsh has moss taken from it oftener than once in six years.

To furnish dry, properly sun-cured moss to the florists a large area called a dry bed was leveled, drained and tracked with narrow gauge. On this land was constructed a big warehouse through which ran the railroad track.

These resulted in clean, dry, fresh moss for florists' use as described below.

TRAIN LOAD OF WET MOSS READY TO UNLOAD ON DRYING BED. Gasoline locomotive is between the flat cars.

How Moss is Gathered

The moss is pulled from the marsh, as illustrated in the upper left-hand picture. It is then loaded upon the flat cars and hauled across the wet marsh to the drying bed above mentioned. Here it is spread out in thin layers on the ground to be sun-dried and cured. By means of the railroad equipment, it is possible to spread it over large area economically and thus get the moss perfectly dry before packing.

As soon as the moss is properly cured and dried, it is again placed on board the cars and hauled into the big packing shed. Even the idea of a shed for unbaled moss was unheard of until we started to produce RANDO BRAND SPHAGNUM, as it was always previously baled in the open air after it had been dried or partly dried. If the florists will picture a lot of moss spread out in a field partly dried, a couple of men baling as fast as they can and a thunder storm coming up over the horizon, they can readily see why they frequently get wet, soggy moss.

ONE OF THE BALING SHEDS IN COURSE OF CONSTRUCTION. These sheds keep the moss dry and clean after it is taken off the dry bed. Railroad track goes through the center of each.

As soon as our moss is properly dried, it is stored and can be baled regardless of weather conditions.

When we started to produce Sphagnum Moss, it was the usual thing to pack Sphagnum in any available old, used burlap. Realizing that most florists bought a year's supply of moss in the summer and that these old burlap bales would rot away, we used nothing but brand-new, clean 7½-oz. burlap.

We built our presses strong and over size. We loaded them with moss until when the bale was completed, it was bulging almost to the bursting point. The result was so good that we proudly signed the job by labeling it "RANDO BRAND SPHAGNUM MOSS."

When the war came on labor shortage and the prohibitive cost of new burlap made it impossible for us to continue turning out Rando Brand Moss.

The florists needed moss of some kind and we had to use the few men we could get to pull moss without paying much attention to quality.

Conditions are now returning to normal—we are going to produce some Rando Brand Moss this summer. Labor is still scarce and new burlap none too plentiful. There won't be enough Rando Brand Moss to fill the demand. In fact, we look for a scarcity of both Rando Brand and Standard Quality.

Orders are being booked now for summer delivery, from June to October.

Write and tell us how much you can use and when you would want shipment.
We will quote you on Rando Brand or Standard Quality, or both, as desired.

Do it now—the supply is limited.

from a friend, with a few jolly lines of congratulation.

Larkspur will be an Easter specialty with William J. Baker.

Clarence J. Watson, who is a thoughtful observer of the market, thinks that the effect of the high prices of cut flowers during last winter's scarcity has been to make buyers more critical now that flowers are plentiful. They want the best. Phil.

Detroit, Mich.—The Springman Floral Co. has been purchased by Homer Townsend.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale market was greatly overstocked most of last week. There were occasional good days, but, as a whole, business was far from satisfactory, according to reports from both wholesalers and retailers. Receipts were large all the week in all seasonable stock and prices suffering greatly in all grades.

Roses have been plentiful and of splendid quality all through and only the extra fancy stock held up to a fair price. In other grades, low prices prevailed in big lots. The bulk of the stock consists of Killarney and Ophelia. Red roses have been scarce all season, while fancy Russell, Stanley and Columbia are not in oversupply.

Carnations, for the first time this season, were down to $10 per thousand and 2 cents in small lots. As all the local carnation growers are now on crop, large cuts are expected until after Easter. All stock is of fine quality, especially in the Enchantress varieties.

Sweet peas are now in full crop and great quantities came in daily last week. Excellent stock was sold as low as $3 and $4 per thousand, while extra fancy Spencers brought from 50 to 60 cents per hundred.

Bulbous stock is not quite so heavy as a week ago and the growers say that it is rather well cut out. Good stock in Dutch hyacinths sells well, as do fancy jonquils. Good valley is limited, while Easter lilies are in plenty and will be for Easter—that is, in cut stock. Heavy shipments of southern jonquils and lilac are coming in daily, with little sale for them. There are good cuts of calendulas, snapdragons, Darwin tulips, mignonette and pansies, for which there is a good daily call.

Flat ferns are again up to $5 per thousand and there is a good, steady demand for plumosus, Sprengeri, galax and smilax. There is a steady demand for good blooming plants of all kinds.

ciation held its regular meeting at the Eleven Mile House, April 2. The meeting was well attended. The members are enthused over the new publicity plan, which was started April 1.

After all business had been transacted, the nomination of officers for the ensuing year took place and the following members were placed in nomination for the various offices:

For president, W. A. Rowe, W. J. Pilcher and George Deutschmann; for vice-president, Charles Meier and F. W. Ude, Jr.; for secretary, Joseph Deutschmann; for treasurer, August Hartmann.

The election will be held at the next meeting.

It was decided by a full vote that the association will hold a "get-together" party on the night of April 30, at W. A. Rowe's greenhouse establishment, to which everybody in the trade is invited.

The next meeting of the association will be held May 7.

President Jensen opened the meeting. After a short talk on plants for spring planting, the chair called on Mr. Moritz and Mr. Werner to open a discussion on "Hardy Plants in Gardens." This discussion continued until adjournment.

The next meeting will be held May 7.

The Market.

The last week has been marked by almost the coldest weather of the season, cold March winds bringing a little snow and leaden skies. All this, of course, has had the effect which could be expected on the market and cut blooms and greens are again at a premium. Carnations at $6 per hundred are cleaning up every day, while the home producers have been unable to furnish enough roses to supply the demand. As a matter of fact, it has been necessary to call upon outside wholesalers to supplement the local production, Chicago, the writer believes, contributing all. The usual prices are $6, $7.50 and $15.

Easter lilies continue scarce, the few coming in having short stems and demanding $25. Unless the weather gets much warmer, as is promised at the time fair quality, the wholesale prices being $4 and $6. The same prices apply to daffodils, which are coming mainly from the south.

Greens of all varieties are scarcer and higher in price than at any previous time during the season. Smilax is 25 cents per string; plumosus 50 cents and Sprengeri 60 cents per bunch. Almost all of the plumosus is sent in from Florida.

Various Notes.

Having served his country for almost a year, Leon Henry Bergman has returned to his old position as manager of the supply department of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. While in the army Mr. Bergman spent most of the time in the motor transportation service. During the war period his route was from Allentown, Pa., and Rochester, N. Y., to Hoboken, N. J., and, since the signing of the armistice, from Baltimore to Hoboken. His itinerary included Camps Meade, Dix, Holabird, Merritt, Crane and Benjamin. Mr. Bergman has been with the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. for the last four years and he is glad to be on the job again.

The E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. is daily receiving about a dozen exceptionally fine Brunner roses from the farm at Ludwig Station, near Mars, Pa. These are selling readily. Sergt. Edward Earl Ludwig has notified his family to send him no more mail, as he expects to sail for the United States May 7.

MR. JOHN T. MUIR,
4647 Grand Blvd., City.

Dear Mr. Muir:

It might be of interest to you to know how much the officers of this bank appreciated the admirable taste which you displayed in the arrangement of the design and the beautiful flowers used in the floral piece furnished by you at the time of Mr. Lampert's funeral.

It was an occasion on which we felt that the best was none too good and we were very much gratified at your efforts in that direction. It was also spoken of by Mrs. Lampert afterwards as being the most wonderful assemblage of flowers that she had ever seen.

Feeling confident that you would be pleased to know of these favorable comments, I have taken the liberty of writing you this letter.

Very sincerely, smiles upon the retailers' faces as well as on those of the growers. Few weeks bring such a happy feeling to the entire trade.

During the first part of the week there was an oversupply in some varieties of stock. The trade has not yet advantageously used up this surplus, but has more than taken care of the arriving stock. Carnations again have advanced a peg. It is reported that they are off crop, but, of course, they are not off crop everywhere. The fact is that the bright, warm weather has allowed the grower to let up on firing and the houses have been averaging a lower temperature. One thing is certain, and that is that the flowers are better and the stems stronger.

The supply of sweet peas has not been equal to the demand. The poorer grades have been absent, generally speaking, and the prominent supply has been bringing $2 per hundred.

In roses there is no change; there are plenty, but not enough to bring the price down. Indications are that they will recover and average a good price for Easter. There is a limited supply of calendulas, Easter lilies, daffodils and tulips.

Various Notes.

The many friends of Max Buehler, who conducted greenhouses on the Genesee road, in Cheektowaga, were shocked to hear of his drowning March 30. Mr. Buehler and his daughter, Lena, were crossing Spears' bridge, on Ellicott creek road, in an automobile. A tire blew out and caused the machine to swerve to the side of the bridge and fall into eight feet of water. The two were pinned on the bottom of the stream.

It is seldom that we hear of one firm controlling the market on a particular line of plants or cut flowers, especially when that stock is for Easter. Schwert & Berner, on Broadway, have thousands of pelargoniums for the Easter trade. A number of them are in 8-inch pots and no better stock could be wished for.

The only attendants were the niece of the bride, Mary Beaman, who was the ring bearer, and the twin nieces of the groom, Dorothy and Eudora Bachman, who were the flower girls. Before the ceremony, Mrs. Katherine Moseley Beaman, sister of the bride, sang "Oh, Perfect Love." Miss Augusta Moseley played the wedding march. Mr. and Mrs. Aikmus left for an Eastern trip and will be at home, after April 30, at 846 Barnett avenue, Kansas City, Kan. The bride's mother is a florist, at 710 Minnesota avenue, Kansas City, Kan. Use an up-to-date N. C. R. System and match your neighbor's success!

The merchant who combines a cash register system with progressive merchandising is bound to grow.

The merchant who handles his money and accounts slowly by hand instead of quickly by machinery, cannot meet competition.

An up-to-date N. C. R. System protects hard-earned profits; increases trade; cuts down expenses; makes clerks more efficient; stops errors, losses, and disputes; speeds up the business.

Every merchant needs the help of an up-to-date N. C. R. System in handling his money and accounts.

An N. C. R. System is within the reach of everybody. The payments are easy and the machine will more than pay for itself out of what it saves.

An N. C. R. System is a modern business necessity

Use an up-to-date N. C. R. System and match your neighbor's success!

The merchant who combines a cash register system with progressive merchandising is bound to grow.

The merchant who handles his money and accounts slowly by hand instead of quickly by machinery, cannot meet competition.

An up-to-date N. C. R. System protects hard-earned profits; increases trade; cuts down expenses; makes clerks more efficient; stops errors, losses, and disputes; speeds up the business.

Every merchant needs the help of an up-to-date N. C. R. System in handling his money and accounts.

An N. C. R. System is within the reach of everybody. The payments are easy and the machine will more than pay for itself out of what it saves.

An N. C. R. System is a modern business necessity

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; thirty-seventh annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 24, 25, 26, 1919.

H. Cresson Prichett, formerly with the Indianapolis branch of the Southern Seed Co., has joined the traveling staff of the Everette R. Peacock Co., Chicago.

C. R. Root, of the Colorado Seed Co., Denver, Colo., was elected president of the Denver Society of Ornamental Horticulture at a recent meeting of that organization.

Considering the extremely heavy demand for planting stock of all the popular varieties of gladiolus, it is apparent that the bulb growers do not expect Quarantine No. 37 to be modified with respect to gladioli next season. They are getting ready to produce a larger number of bulbs than America ever has used in one season.

Perhaps the most immediate result of Quarantine No. 37 is that the Holland exporters are establishing branches in America. Already three or four of the progressive Holland houses have established bulb growing farms in this country, principally for the production of gladiolus and other bulbs which will be prohibited entry when the quarantine goes into effect, but they no doubt will enter into general competition with American growers.

CATALOG SIZES NOT AFFECTED.

Referring to the communication which appeared in The Review, wherein the superintendent of mails of the Baltimore postoffice had advised J. Bolgiano & Son that after March 31 no catalog under eight ounces measuring more than 4x9 inches would be received by the Baltimore office, the American Seed Trade Association's committee on postal laws investigated and had the following communication from Third Assistant Postmaster General Dockery:

"In reply to your communication of the 31st ultimo, there are enclosed for your information copies of circulars of this office dated January 12 and June 3, 1918, regarding the use of envelopes of unusual size or irregular shape, and you are informed that it is desired that patrons of the postal service will coöperate with the department in preparing their mail so that it will be put up in the best possible manner to facilitate handling in the mails. Whenever it is practicable to prepare matter so that it can be enclosed in an envelope not exceeding 4x9 inches, this should be done. The sender will thereby cause the matter to be handled more expeditiously, thus benefiting both himself and the postal service."

You will see by this that the postoffice is only asking for coöperation in matters of folders and light catalogs that would be in no way injured by folding. Their idea of getting a uniform sized envelope was to give better service in the handling of the mail.

W. F. Therkildson,
Chairman Postal Laws Committee.

The Nieuw Amsterdam is loading at Rotterdam and will bring, on its next trip, perhaps the largest cargo of nursery stock which ever crossed the Atlantic. The big steamer left New York March 26 for Plymouth, England, where it arrived April 4 and was held two days by the British authorities before being allowed to proceed to Rotterdam.

DEALER NOT LIABLE.

Defective Goods Case.

The general rule of law that one who markets a product is not liable for defects in it, as far as a person with whom he has no contractual relationship is concerned, was applied by the Washington Supreme court in the recent case of Kramer vs. Carbolineum Wood Preserving Co., 177 Pacific Reporter, 771.

The defendant was general sales agent in Washington and Oregon for a secret process preparation to protect fruit trees against the ravages of borers and the Portland Seed Co., dealers, sold a quantity to the plaintiff. The cans in which the substance was sold were labeled: "Trunks of fruit trees painted with Avenarius Carbolineum will not be troubled with borers and will become healthier."

Declaring that application of the preparation to trees in his prune orchard resulted in injury to the trees, the plaintiff sued for $15,000 damages, but was nonsuited, the court holding that no right of action against the defendant was shown.

Evidence Deficient.

"If we may assume," said the Supreme court, "that there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury that the preparation, which was purchased by plaintiff and used upon the prune orchard, destroyed the trees, it is plain that this respondent was not liable therefor. It was not shown that the Avenarius Carbolineum which was purchased by the plaintiff was sold by the defendant or was ever in its possession. It is not claimed by the plaintiff that it was purchased from the defendant and it is conclusively shown that the defendant was not the manufacturer and had no connection with the manufacturers and did not know the ingredients. The defendant was simply an agent for the sale of the preparation and so far as the record shows, the Portland Seed Co., from which the plaintiff purchased, was likewise an agent. . . .

"It has been accepted as a general rule that a manufacturer is not liable to any person, other than his immediate vendee; that the action is necessarily one upon an implied or express warranty, and that without privity of contract, no suit can be maintained; that each purchaser must resort to his immediate vendor. To this rule, certain exceptions have been recognized: (1) Where the thing causing the injury is of a noxious or dangerous kind; (2) where the defendant has been guilty of fraud or deceit in passing off the article; (3) where the defendant has been negligent

". . . . The Avenarius Carbolineum is not shown to be of a noxious or dangerous kind. It was not shown that the defendant had been guilty of fraud or deceit in passing off the article, or that the defendant had sold or ever had possession of the article purchased by the plaintiff; and it was not shown that the defendant had been negligent in any respect with reference to the sale of the article purchased by the plaintiff and used upon his fruit trees. Not coming within any of these exceptions, the general rule must apply that where there is no privity of contract between the plaintiff and the defendant, with reference to the sale of the Avenarius Carbolineum, no liability exists against the defendant." PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The market during the last week was in fair condition. All the growers and retailers were busy preparing for the Easter business. The growers were especially busy, as the lateness of Easter crowds that holiday close to Memorial day. Prices took a slight decline in some cases, though not sufficient to make any material general change. Roses were quoted at $3 to $18, Columbia, Russell and Francis Scott Key being the topnotchers. Carnations brought $4 to $6; bulbous stock, $5 and $6.

The entire week was cold, raw, drizzling and disagreeable, the lack of sunshine making a considerable difference in the regular cut; but the weather has served to check, to some degree, the rapid advancement of stock that was being held for Easter.

Various Notes.

Eugene Appleton has again started a landscape gardening business, this time at 272 Knight street.

Farrell Toher, son of Stephen J. Toher, has returned to Providence after eleven months of service in the navy. This is the second of three sons of Mr. Toher who has returned. The third is still in France.

John H. Brown has been appointed tree warden at Warren, R. I., for one year.

S. Dilmotte is preparing to erect a new greenhouse at his place on Aylesworth avenue, Woonsocket.

Philip Swanson is back on the job after several months in the government service.

Swan Peterson, of East Providence, has added a new automobile truck to his delivery department.

The estate of William B. King, of Apponaug, is about to dismantle the greenhouses conducted by Mr. King at the time of his death.

Benjamin Andrews has resigned his position with M. J. Leach & Sons and has reopened the flower department of a 5 and 10-cent store, Pawtucket.

Daniel Lamont, of the Quidnick Greenhouses, Inc., has purchased an Overland touring car for his private use.

Lindsay Bros., who closed their greenhouses at Clyde last winter, have now given up their retail business.

Marten Schuman, of the Quidnick Greenhouses, Inc., is to be married early in July.

Burke & Burns, 548 Dyer avenue, have just purchased 5,000 rose bushes, mostly Prima Donna and Tiffany.

Alex Macrae is preparing to erect a 2½-story dwelling at 1138 Smith street, near his greenhouses.

The Quidnick Greenhouses, Inc., are preparing to entirely remodel and rebuild their range of houses, which contain 135,000 square feet, as soon as Easter and Memorial day are over. A new office building will be one of the changes. One house will be devoted entirely to Russell roses. There will be in this house more than 3,000 plants. They have upwards of 60,000 plants of all kinds for selling purposes, including 1,500 pots of lilies for their own retail trade at Easter. The firm has five automobiles in its delivery department.

W. H. M.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Portland, Ore.—James Forbes, of the Martin & Forbes Co., says there will be in Portland this year fewer than 1,000 Easter lilies where there were 25,000 last year. He does not predict a great increase in price, saying that other flowers will be substituted for Easter lilies this year.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A scarcity in some lines of stock developed this week, especially in choice bulbous plants. The appearance of Dutch iris is always welcome and the earlier flowers are bringing good prices. With the passing of Emperor and similar types of daffodils, the later poeticus hybrids appear, and are useful.

Roses have been more plentiful this week, with the exception of the small Cecile Brunners, which are late in coming. The appearance of Cattleya Mossiæ helps the orchid situation some and the demand is good.

Callas are at their height now and, for the first time this year, the supply has kept up with the demand. Advance orders for these for Easter are coming in to the wholesalers and it is doubtful if there will be enough to go around for the holiday.

Greens are more plentiful, but still on the short side.

Various Notes.

Looking around the nursery of E. H. Rust, at Pasadena, Cal., is always interesting, especially in company with the genial Frank Warner and "Billy" Rapp, who is congenial. The finest herbaceous plant the writer has seen for a long time is the new scarlet pentstemon, of which a large stock has been raised and which will be disseminated shortly. This has already been mentioned as exhibited at the Pasadena show, but the few flowers shown there did not give an idea of what a fine thing it is. The flowers are of the gloxiniæflora type, upwards of three inches across and of the richest scarlet in color, with a white throat. The spikes on well grown plants are three to four feet high, forty to fifty flowers being open at a time. For a cut flower or a display in the herbaceous border, it is unrivaled by any plant outside of the delphinium, and it does not take much of a prophet to foretell a great future for it. In the greenhouses, Easter stock is coming along finely and some extra large Cocos plumosa were being boxed for shipment in the nursery. The place, as usual, looks neat and clean and business is good.

Tony Tassano reports much bigger and better shipments of evergreens coming in than for many months and does not look for any shortage from now on. Fine statice also is coming in from the nursery at Artesia and meeting with a big demand.

Mrs. F. R. Hills has returned home from Phoenix, Ariz., where she has been nursing her son through a dangerous illness. Mrs. Hills speaks highly of the

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

The Market.

While the reduction of the number of soldiers and sailors has given the town a quieter appearance, retailers say that business has kept up well, prices being well maintained and stock of good quality in fine demand. The climatic conditions of San Diego being so nearly perfect, all stock thrives well, so the call from outside sources just now is small. Leaving out the purely commercial end of the business, a visitor from farther north cannot help being impressed with the color, substance and general excellence of the outdoor-grown flowers in San Diego.

Various Notes.

Boyle & Darnaud report business good, Mr. Darnaud especially commenting on the number of orchids they had sold this year.

Miss Rainford's store is always the picture of neatness and order. While there is always something of interest to see there, the writer was much impressed by some branches of casuarina, which appear perfect for decorative purposes. The branches have the cone-like seed vessels on the older portions and, with the male flowers on the younger, drooping branches, make a delightful combination. Miss Rainford says they have been in the store for several weeks, so there is a hint here for the wise decorator.

If there is a busier man in San Diego than George F. Otto, he will be hard to find. A great deal of the fine stock shown comes from Mr. Otto's own nursery.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There is an abundance of stock of all descriptions, as usual here at this time of the year. With the offerings on the increase, some items are inclined to accumulate to a certain extent, but the facts that shipping holds up well and that local business is seasonably brisk, seem to keep the surplus from becoming burdensome. Prices are more or less unstable, however, values depending largely upon the immediate demand.

The feature at present is the heavy crop of Darwin and other tulips. Large shipments are coming from Eureka, Cal., in addition to the stock grown in the San Francisco bay region. The first part of the week the best long-stemmed tulips brought 75 cents per dozen, but, by Wednesday, 60 cents was top price and many were being sold as low as 25 cents. Daffodils are still coming from the north, but the local crop is about gone; the best bring $1 per hundred. In the wealth of miscellaneous flowers, anemones and ranunculi are prominent items, both in regard to supply and demand, the former selling five or six dozen for $1, and the latter around 25 cents per dozen. Peonies are starting and irises are offered in limited quantity. Indoor freesias are about gone, after a long and successful run. The outdoor blooms do not seem to take their place. Santa Cruz growers have about stopped shipments of these flowers to this market, in view of the lack of interest accorded them. Paper Whites are about finished, but not missed, with so much other stock available.

The warm weather has brought out more carnations than are needed and the limit has nearly been reached on the amount of roses that can be absorbed. Under the circumstances, it is not surprising to see prices on the decline. For local requirements, $2 per dozen is about top price for Russell; the better offerings of Columbia reach $1.50 per dozen, while only a few Ophelia, Shawyer, Radiance or Ward bring more than $1.50 per bunch of two dozen.

Violets are beginning to shorten up. Unless the weather is cool and damp, it is doubtful whether they will last until Easter. Outdoor sweet peas are due in about two weeks. There is a good supply of orchids, Cattleya Trianæ being plentiful again after a period of scarcity, which made it difficult for the trade to supply the demand on various occasions. Fine gardenias are to be had at $3 per dozen. When lilies are mentioned here, callas come to mind, as they are the only offerings. They sell for $3 per hundred.

Various Notes.

Albert O. Stein reports a busy week on decorations and funeral work. One of the best orders was for the wedding of Miss Margaret Wolff and McKinley Bissinger, in the Empire room of the Fairmont hotel. Pink blossoms were used effectively, in conjunction with window boxes of spring flowers. The bride's bouquet was of phalænopsis. At a pretty home affair for Mrs. Tyson, of Alameda, French mirrors were used on the table, with five white marble bowls of flowers, the center one containing spring flowers and the other four double gold tulips. Garlands of heather and spring flowers outlined the mirrors. A new idea in funeral work at the Stein establishment is a pall made of spring flowers and blossoms, with lots of color. One for the 11-year-old son of John I. Walter was made this week, it being the fifth or sixth pall of this nature made in the last month. Spring housecleaning is in progress at the Stein store, so the place will be in first-class shape for Easter.

Thomas Wright, of Los Angeles, grower and florist, visited friends in the trade here a few days ago and was a welcome visitor; as usual, he was looking on the bright side of life and radiating good cheer wherever he went.

With the exception of Easter lilies, S. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., Inc., thinks there will be plenty of stock for Easter, and he is preparing for a banner shipping business in callas, roses and other flowers.

Charles Soter, of Salt Lake City, Utah, was in San Francisco a few days ago looking up Easter stock.

C. Kooyman is receiving large shipments of tulips from the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Inc., at Eureka, Cal., and is still getting a good many daffodils from the same source. There is a good demand for this stock, he says, the only difficulty being that the shipments arrive in the night, leaving him little time for sleep.

Easter orders for calla lilies continue to pile up at the headquarters of the United Flower & Supply Co., on Bush street, and current business is reported fairly brisk on these flowers and other seasonable stock.

Avansino Bros. are starting to pick their crop of peonies and the blooms show excellent quality, owing to the moderate weather. At the Avansino store, preparations for Easter indicate confidence on the part of the proprietors in good business.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have arranged to use an adjoining store for the sale of potted plants at Easter time and, in the meantime, are utilizing the windows for display purposes. Judging by his observations, Frank Pelicano expects to see flowering plants in good supply and of good quality for Easter, with the exception of lilies. He has been supplying a good demand for dahlia roots this season, his Dr. Tevis heading the list in popularity.

Charles Shellgrain, of Shellgrain & Ritter, says business has held up well during Lent and he looks for a fine Easter.

B. M. Joseph has installed new glass shelving at his store. This makes an attractive display arrangement for fancy glass baskets, bowls, etc. Plants and cut flowers are being sent out in specially decorated boxes of oriental design, that will make excellent containers for milady's Easter hat, after serving their original purpose. The idea is meeting with liberal response.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee has improved the appearance of her store on Hyde street by a thorough renovation, including a PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

There was a perceptible drop in this market last week, not entirely due to an increased supply, but, to some extent, to the decrease in demand.

We have had beautiful weather with a great deal of sunshine and large quantities of flowers have bloomed—in fact, at no time before has there been such a variety to choose from as at the present time. Some exceptionally pretty window effects have been made, with the Japanese cherry as the background.

Some of the varieties noticed in particular lately are rhododendrons, tulips, daffodils, sweet peas, roses, irises and carnations, besides many others, too numerous to mention.

No complaints on business are heard. The florists all have an optimistic look and all report doing a good business, with prospects excellent for good business all summer.

Various Notes.

Martin & Forbes Co. displayed in the window a vase of Iris Susanne, which attracted considerable attention and favorable comment, not so much on account of its beauty as because of its oddity.

S. G. Lubliner is fitting up a new store at 248 Morrison street, about one block west of his present location, and from all appearances it will be one of the finest in town.

Clarence Jones, of Walla Walla, Wash., was in town a few days ago and announced that he has severed his connection with the bank in Walla Walla, where he was employed for several years before the war. He joined the army and was abroad until the armistice was signed. He has bought the retail store of the Blossom Floral Co. and took possession April 1.

Several new places have sprung up in the last few days, their purpose being to get a slice of the spring business. Their main trade is in bedding stock and garden plants, and, of course, they dabble a little in cut flowers and potted plants. Such places take a certain amount of business from the regular trade. They will stay in business two or three months, or as long as the picking is good, and then vanish until the following season. L. T. S.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; secretary, Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Mo.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; forty-fourth annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1919.

THE McKay Nursery Co., of Madison, Wis., reports extremely heavy business. Everybody connected with the concern is busy packing stock for spring shipment.

THE Morningside Nurseries, of Sioux City, Ia., recently successfully removed twenty-eight trees in the courthouse yard at Spencer, Ia., and replanted them in various parts of the town.

THE Nurserymen's National Service Bureau is the right idea. Properly managed, it will accomplish for that trade what the publicity committee is accomplishing for the S. A. F.

THE Thomas B. Meehan Co., Dresher, Pa., reports that orders have been difficult to fill, due to the number and size and the shortage of labor. Mr. Meehan says that he is forced to spend a portion of his days in the nursery and work in his office at night to keep up with the rush.

FIFTY-SIX nurseries were doing business in Rhode Island during 1918 and fifty-four were allowed to continue after inspection, according to the thirty-third annual report of the state board of agriculture, presented to the Rhode Island general assembly recently. The two closed were not sufficiently free from plant diseases and insect pests.

C. J. MCGREGOR & SONS, of Newburyport, Mass., have purchased the farm, greenhouses, barns and dwelling houses which for many years were owned and operated there by the firm of Kent & Marsh. The farm is composed of all kinds of land, from bog to high upland, and it is the intention of the new owners to carry on a general nursery business in addition to their present retail florists' business. All sales will be made from the office, located on Chapel street.

STANDARDIZATION NEEDED.

Question Is Complicated.

The subject of standardization in the nursery business, not only as to prices, but as it relates to every phase of nursery endeavor, is a question that is today engrossing the minds of nurserymen in every part of the United States. While this is true, this problem is peculiarly difficult by reason of the fact that such a large part of those who handle trees and plants are not brought under the influence of any of our many associations, and because this is a large country, with varying conditions in different localities. Therefore, the prices which might be equal on certain commodities in one section of our great country would perchance not be applicable to another section.

To illustrate, the south can grow peach trees cheaper than any other section of the United States, but the south would go bankrupt growing apples in quantity. I believe the nursery business is attempting a solution of this problem and that in the future each nurseryman will determine just the items which can be grown successfully and profitably, depending upon the more favored locations for such items as he has been trying to grow and which have been losing money for him.

Committee Appointed.

There is a rapidly growing sentiment in favor of standardization, and in view of this fact, the writer, who is president of the American Association of Nurserymen, has appointed a special committee to meet prior to the convention, which is to be held in Chicago June 25-27, this year, and this committee will endeavor to work out certain policies for the guidance of the membership, and standardization is certain to be one of the questions considered. Just how far it will be possible to go in the matter of standardization, future events alone can determine, but, to say the least, we can do better in the future than in the past. Certainly there should be some uniformity in prices, both wholesale and retail, all over the country, though, to be sure, that organization which is able, because of its efficiency, to produce at a minimum cost its stock, will be able, as has been true in the past, to render services at a lower price than its unfortunate competitor, who has produced stock at the maximum cost.

I cannot say anything of definite nature on the subject, but believe that de-

MARKET DEVELOPMENT.

"Among nurserymen, it seems to me at present, the topic uppermost in the minds of most of them is market development," says Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., "and men who have most to do with market development seem to realize that our industry needs standardization, not only of prices, but also of products and practices, if we are to stabilize the situation.

"I am inclined to think there is more importance attached to the matter of cost accounting than most of us realize. We sell with the idea of competing as to price, whereas, if we were better schooled and knew what stock cost to produce, there would be less risk of our undercutting our own cost prices, losing money and lowering, in consequence, the standard of the entire industry.

"I am now referring to the national industry, because if the bulb growers of Holland can get together and pull their members up on the plateau with right business methods, which go halfway toward insuring success, it seems to me the nurserymen of America ought to be able to do the same.

"Please keep your eye on F. F. Rockwell, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, general manager of the Nurserymen's National Service Bureau. He is the megaphone for the most open-eyed and progressive nurserymen in the country. He is careful what he talks about, but when he opens his mouth he says something and he knows how to write. This is merely a suggestion.

BUREAU'S PLAN PROGRESSES.

Much Work Ahead.

The work of the Nurserymen's National Service Bureau is progressing satisfactorily, according to F. F. Rockwell, manager, though he believes that it will be necessary to do a considerable amount of organizing in the nursery trade itself before there is a solid foundation for market development work, now being started by the bureau.

An effort is to be made by Mr. Rockwell to induce the committee of the American Association of Nurserymen which has jurisdiction over his bureau to sanction a plan for making the month of June a market development and trade organization month.

"I think it would be a good idea if everyone interested would pitch in and do everything possible to get market development and trade organization talked about and discussed," says Mr. Rockwell, "for two or three weeks preceding the convention in Chicago."

List of Contributors.

Firms and individuals from whom cash contributions to the bureau's fund have been received are named in the following list:

The Market.

Flowers have been a little scarce during the last week. Prices are not quite so high as they were, though still above normal for this time of the year. All kinds of early spring flowers are coming into the market in limited quantities. Fair business is reported by many florists. There is beginning to be some call for seeds. This would have been greater, had not the first days of the month been unusually cold, with the heaviest snowfall of the season. The snow did not last more than a few hours and the frost is out of the ground, so there doubtless will be a much larger demand for seeds from now on.

Various Notes.

Fred P. Wolfinger, 883 Broad street, reports that business is extremely good now. Transient trade, which has been small for many months, he reports, is beginning to pick up.

Local florists are looking forward to a good Easter trade. Many of them do not expect, however, any record trade, as there is a scarcity of azaleas, bulbous flowers, etc., due to war conditions. Plants are more plentiful than flowers and the sale of these will probably be quite large. R. B. M.

DENVER, COLO.

At a recent meeting of the Denver Society of Ornamental Horticulture, held March 25, papers were read by E. L. Sargent, assistant pathologist of the Bureau of Plant Industry, on "The Eradication of the Common Barberry," and by A. Kohankie, on the carnation show at Cleveland. George Brenkert exhibited his new carnation, Denver.

In an announcement of the last meeting of the society a number of timely hints on gardening are given.

Officers were elected as follows: President, C. R. Root; vice-president, A. Kohankie; secretary-treasurer, S. R. De Boer; members of the executive committee, Mrs. Bradish P. Morse, Mrs. S. B. Walker, G. Klaiber, P. L. Clarke and E. Albrecht.

Des Plaines, Ill.—"Do you remember?" inquired Sol Garland, Jr., "on your last visit a year ago when Biddy was laying an egg in the tonneau of our Pierce-Arrow car and held us up from delivering a purchase of lettuce? She was doing her bit and we surely needed it, for things certainly looked black at that time. Now we have money to bank and the outlook is extremely bright. We have been able to run the whole plant at full capacity all winter."

ST. LOUIS NOTES.

week. Mr. Ammann had just returned from his eastern trip, on which he visited Secretary John Young and conferred with him on S. A. F. matters. He reports a most pleasant trip. He also is much pleased that the local trade has adopted the Milwaukee publicity plan.

The Retail Florists' Association will hold an important meeting the night of April 14, in the Knights of Columbus hall. The officers of the association have announced that all retailers, regardless of membership, are invited to attend. Easter business will be the main topic of discussion.

Arbor day, April 4, was celebrated more generally throughout the city than in previous years. Business men's associations in all parts of the city planted trees in honor of Missouri soldiers who have fallen in battle. Governor Gardner and Mayor Kiel issued proclamations suggesting this observance. School children took part in planting trees at the various parks.

Edward Eisner, for the last two years buyer and manager for Grimm & Gorly, has resigned his position and returned to his former home in Chicago. Mr. Eisner made many friends in the trade here, who wish him well in the future.

Charles Beyer, of South Grand avenue, has his big show window facing Grand avenue filled with a great stock of excellent Easter blooming plants. This is a great attraction, especially at this time.

The officers of the Florists' Club held their monthly conference, April 4, at Trustee Windler's home and arranged a program for this week's meeting of the club.

Joseph Frank has opened the Kresge cut flower department, at Sixth and St. Charles streets. During the last week, this department greatly relieved the wholesale market by using the surplus stock which had accumulated.

The many friends of George Waldbart will be pleased to learn that Mr. Waldbart has fully recovered from his illness of nearly a year, and that he is back at his desk, attending to business affairs with his old familiar smile.

The warm spring days of the last week created considerable good transient trade for the downtown florists. With plenty of seasonable flowers in the market, bargain sales were advertised and seven downtown florists had heavy counter trade. J. J. B.

Ozark, Mich.—Mrs. Charles Dell has been shipping ferns, sphagnum moss and lycopodium for a matter of fifteen years and intends this season to enlarge the business.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

WILL IT STAND THE PRESSURE?

We are planning to build 7,000 feet more glass and wish to know which is the cheaper heating medium, hot water or steam, for this size of place, considering the present price of pipe. We have one Moninger sectional boiler, which has been used for steam, and one Iowa sectional boiler, which we are now using for hot water. The Iowa boiler has a dome or top section eight inches deep. Will this boiler stand enough steam pressure to heat the same amount of glass as it is now caring for?

A. A. H.—Okla.

Since the size of the Iowa sectional boiler is not given, we cannot tell just how much pressure will be required to heat the 8,000 square feet of glass. If the boiler has a grate of good size, there should be no difficulty in keeping up, with a low steam pressure, the same temperature as could be secured with hot water, and any boiler which is in a sufficiently good condition to warrant its being used could carry a steam pressure of two or three pounds, with five pounds as a maximum, without any serious danger.

The cost of a hot water installation, exclusive of the boiler, will be fifty per cent more than the cost of one designed for steam. On the other hand, the cost of fuel and labor for heating with hot water will be about twenty-five per cent less than for steam in a small range. It will probably take five years for the amount saved in fuel to equal the extra cost of the hot water installation.

STEAM FROM A MILL.

We are building a greenhouse, 28x100, and adding a new section, 25x20, to one of the other houses. We are also changing our heating system from hot water to steam. The two old houses will be used for carnations and the new one is intended for roses. Is it necessary to have any heating pipes under the benches in either house? If any such pipes are needed, please state how many. We have 2-inch wrought-iron pipe on hand. We expect to get heat from a mill near here, getting it in the form of exhaust steam in the daytime and live steam at night. Are any data to be had on the size of the pipes that will be needed to convey the exhaust steam? Will traps be needed at the mill and at the greenhouse?

O. F. E.—Mich.

From the data given we are not sure of the size of the old houses, but infer that they are 25x100. Whether there is glass in the side walls is not stated.

If 2-inch pipe is to be used for the

The Best Insurance for Your Stock!

INSURE your valuable stock by making certain that the temperature in your houses will be uniform during the winter months.

You can rest assured that your steam lines will be kept at top heat if you install the Morehead Back-to-Boiler System.

With the coming of the summer months, now is the time to install the Morehead System, which keeps condensation out of the steam lines—returns it instantly to the boilers as pure, hot feed water.

The steam lines are kept clear. The steam circulates freely—every inch of the heating space is made to do its full share of the heating.

Let our engineers give you complete information—tell you how the Morehead System also saves a large percentage of your heating expense. Many users say that this runs from 8 per cent to 20 per cent.

Get the best insurance—the Morehead Back-to-Boiler System—and save money at the same time.

Let us send you the Morehead Book—it will give you full information and show you how the Morehead System is being used today wherever there are steam heating lines.

DETROIT, Dept. "M" MICHIGAN

returns, we would suggest putting in a 2½-inch overhead flow in the rose house, with ten 2-inch returns if there is no glass in the side walls, and not over five feet of well-built wooden walls. For each two and one-half feet of glass in the walls we would add another return. We would prefer to use 1¼-inch pipe for the returns, and would substitute fourteen pipes of that size for the ten 2-inch. In the carnation houses, if they are twenty-five feet in width, we would use one 2½-inch overhead flow pipe and seven 2-inch or ten 1¼-inch returns.

We would place a portion of the returns under the benches, but just how many should be used in that way will depend upon the number and width of the benches. As a rule we would place about one-third of the returns under the benches in houses from twenty-five to thirty feet in width. Thus, in the rose house we would use about four of the 2-inch pipes under the benches or from six to eight of the 1¼-inch returns, depending upon the number of the benches and whether there is glass in the side walls. We would place the flow about two feet below the ridge.

The size of the main will be determined in part by the distance from the boiler to the greenhouses and by the thoroughness with which it is insulated. If the houses are practically of the size mentioned above, we would use a 4-inch main, with a 3-inch pipe for the condensed steam, covering both carefully to hold the heat. Particularly when exhaust steam is used, it is desirable to be able to return the water by gravity. If this cannot be secured, a steam pump or trap should be used.

An exhibit of polyanthus by William MacKay, gardener for H. A. C. Taylor, was awarded a gratuity at the regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society in Music hall last week, and a gratuity and cultural certificate were given to Charles Philpott for an exhibit of Princess of Wales violets. Plans for the annual shows during the coming spring, summer and fall were discussed. It was announced as probable that at the next meeting there will be an illustrated lecture by E. I. Thomas H. Wright, of Wright's Flower Shop, left late last week for San Francisco, driving up by the coast route. Mrs. Wright accompanied him and the store staff is looking for some fine Easter plants as a result.

Fred Westrum mentions a table decoration made entirely of phalænopsis, many hundreds of flowers being used.

The L. A. Floral Co. has contracted with one of the largest of the southern growers of statice, rhodanthe and other varieties of everlastings, for the entire crop, and the earlier shipments are coming in splendid shape. The rhodanthes are especially useful at this time for making up small baskets, which are in big demand.

The Walter Armacost & Co. cut of roses is coming in grand order now, Ophelia being among the finest ever seen in this market.

Walter Ollestad, of San Diego, was a visitor this week.

Roy Wilcox is getting down to business at Montebello with his well-known energy, and the whole trade is to be congratulated.

The Marcell Flower Shop is always attractive and R. Overstreet is always "on the job." With no orchids on the market and a big table decoration ordered, he gets the wires hot and fills the bill on time. His idea seems to be to "never turn down the big money."

With the increased force in the shipping room of S. Murata & Co., the orders are going out rapidly and everybody looks smiling and happy.

H. R. Richards.

Charleston, Ill.—Miss Etta Nott and Miss Bertha Newby have purchased the greenhouse and flower store of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. McClelland and will continue their operation. The flower store will be known as the Ingleside Flower Shop. Miss Nott was for many years a florist here, but has been out of the business since 1917, when a tornado destroyed her greenhouse.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Spring business is beginning to show itself and within the next two weeks will be in full swing. Funeral work continues heavy, with a good supply of flowers with which to work. The warm weather is hastening all bulbous stock and it is doubtful whether much will be left for Easter. There is a large supply of fine Easter Greeting pelargoniums, which will be valuable for Easter. Easter lilies are scarce.

Various Notes.

Otto J. Kuebler, of Newburg, Ind., has opened a beautiful flower store in the Hotel McCurdy. It is located on the right of the lobby, near the entrance. He should do well in this location. B. L. Fern, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, was here a few days and sold Mr. Kuebler his fixtures, etc., and assisted in arranging the store. Miss Leda Evans, of this city, who is an unusually capable artist, is in charge of the store. Mr. Kuebler has just finished a new house at Newburg, 25x100 feet, which gives him much needed additional space. He has a large stock of geraniums, ferns, Easter Greeting and other plants for the spring trade.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are cutting a large number of carnations. Their spring business is heavy and they have a fine stock of Easter Greeting in full bloom.

The Blackman Floral Co. is enjoying its usual good business. The firm has a fine stock of spring plants and flowers.

Mrs. J. C. Elspermann is getting some large orders for funeral designs. She has a nice stock of plants, especially geraniums.

Karl Zeidler has a big demand for funeral work and spring plants. He finds it hard to get enough greens in this market.

The Lockyear Floral Co. is having a large demand for plants and funeral work. Mr. Lockyear is always looking for plants and flowers to keep up a good stock.

Royston & Fenton are having an extra large demand for coleus, especially for Liberty and Brilliancy. E. L. F.

Oak Park, Ill.—George Jung has purchased the greenhouses of the C. Pfund Co., located at the corner of Congress street and Wenonah avenue, and will conduct the business under the name of the Home Florist. Mr. Jung formerly was located at 1725 North Campbell avenue, Chicago.

Nic Zweifel has clipped the following from a local newspaper as an evidence of the power of advertising and the value of the trade's slogan: "According to Joseph Murarik, proprietor of a shoe repairing shop, Greenfield avenue, his wife Barbara had her own interpretation of the florists' suggestion, 'Say It with Flowers.' Murarik, Friday, filed petition for divorce in the Circuit court, stating, among other things, that March 7, 1919, while he visited with his married daughter in West Allis, his wife threw a flower pot through the window near which he was sitting, smashing the window and nearly injuring his grandchild. They were married August 20, 1918."

Greenhouse White Paint

It is an absolutely pure Linseed Oil Paint, having a covering capacity of 330 square feet—two coats—to the gallon. It is made especially for your use. We can't make it any better. The value of a pure white, light-reflecting surface, which will diffuse and re-use every ray of light, cannot be overestimated. Greenhouse White will stay white—therefore it is the paint to use.

Remember——

all ordinary paint will not do. The conditions are extreme—not to say remarkable—and it takes a paint complying with certain technical requirements to give satisfaction. You will find Greenhouse White to be the paint.

Gentlemen:—In connection with our conversation of a few days ago, I had occasion to look over my ranges at Niles Center, wherein your GREENHOUSE WHITE was used.

There isn't any doubt in my mind now that your recommendation pertaining to the quality, whiteness and durability of this paint was fully justified. It is a wonderful piece of goods, well worth the increased cost—although this point is easily made up from the extra covering capacity that can be obtained with a little care in following directions.

Me for your GREENHOUSE WHITE when I have occasion to order again. Yours very truly.

coat of light paint and rearrangement of the offices and workroom at the rear, which utilizes the space to better advantage. Mrs. Darbee says shipments hold up well for this time of the year, large orders this week going to Quebec and Toronto, Canada.

P. V. Matraia, head of the Art Floral Co., Inc., is being congratulated upon his recent marriage to Mrs. Mitchell Hays, of this city. The couple slipped away to Santa Cruz March 28 and the announcement of the wedding from that city came as a surprise to their many friends here.

Walter Hoff, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., has been spending most of his time recently out of town on landscape work, including the laying out of an estate of over 300 acres at Santa Cruz and a large job at Healdsburg. Fred Bertrand, manager of the same company's retail business, is contemplating various store improvements, but probably will not start them until after Easter. He reports many F. T. D. orders of late.

William Hertrich, superintendent of the Huntington estate, at San Gabriel, Cal., was the guest of Daniel MacRorie a few days ago.

"Flowers are plentiful and business is good," is the way Steve Fazo, of the California Floral Co., sums up the situation this week.

A telegram from F. C. Jaeger, Jr., sent from New York a few days ago, occasioned considerable excitement at the store of F. C. Jaeger & Son, as it announced the younger Mr. Jaeger's arrival in New York, by discharge from the service, and readiness to start home immediately. He left here in August of last year and since then has been in Italy, Spain and other foreign lands. Mrs. Bartlett, of the Jaeger staff, has resumed her duties after a pleasant vacation spent in Los Angeles.

No complaints are voiced by Podesta & Baldocchi, as March closed a good month and all indications point to a big Easter business.

T. Thomas has given notice of the sale of his florists' business at 702 Bush street, including plants, flower pots, fixtures, etc., to Martha L. Fraser.

John F. Miller, nurseryman of Healdsburg, Cal., was a recent visitor in San Francisco.

The twentieth annual blossom festival at Saratoga, Cal., given under the auspices of the Saratoga Improvement Association, was postponed from March 29 to April 5, cold weather having held back the blossoms to such an extent that the trees were hardly past the bud stage on the first date. M. M.

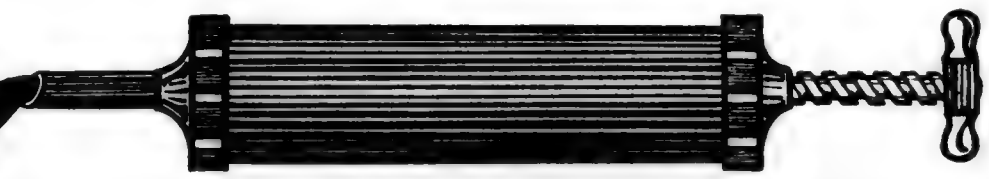
Permanite

Back in 1912 a florist came to us and said:—

"Gentlemen: I want something better than putty; I want a Glazing Cement that will not harden and fall off, but remain elastic under any condition. You can make your own price—all I want to know is whether or not you can make it."

That's the time we first realized the urgent demand for a better putty and after extensive research work, as well as actual tests, we finally produced a cement that would not harden and fall out, but would remain ever-elastic, regardless of what might happen.

The PERMANITE of those days wasn't by any means as perfected as it is today, but even then, in its earlier stages of development, Permanite was enthusiastically taken up by wide-awake Greenhouse Men and actually proved far superior to putty. One Florist told another—together they helped us along with valuable suggestions—with the result that Permanite stands today as the most economical, most dependable and positively ever-elastic Glazing Cement, guaranteed to outlast putty three to four times.



A practical Greenhouse Man gave us the idea—in our own little way we helped make a Glazing Cement that filled the demand for a better putty—and we are genuinely glad to have had a part in making

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The dull, unsettled weather of the last week, combined with the Lenten season, has made business somewhat dull. Funeral work has kept up fairly well and has been the means of moving a quantity of stock. However, stock is not quite so plentiful as it has been, as most of the growers are endeavoring to hold it back as much as possible for the Easter trade. Stock is becoming somewhat cheaper, with prices averaging those of a year ago.

Russell, Ophelia, Ward, Sunburst, Hadley, Killarney, Prima Donna and September Morn are all of good quality. Sweethearts sell fairly well. Sweet peas are of good quality and sell well, prices varying according to quality. Carnations are not so plentiful, but the quality is exceptionally good. Calendulas, forget-me-nots, primulas, pansies and Romans are plentiful and sell fairly well.

Bulbous stock continues to be in fair demand and the quality is good. Lilies are not in large supply, nor will the supply be large for Easter.

The demand for violets is good and stock is in excellent condition. Green goods are arriving in larger quantities and the supply is adequate for the present demand. Potted stock is plentiful and moves easily, the weather conditions being most suitable for it.

H. J. H.

Washington, D. C.—Experts of the Department of Agriculture believe there is a good chance for the development of an all-American Easter lily within a few years at the Arlington experimental farm, near here.

Foley Iron Frame Houses erected for French Lick Springs Hotel, French Lick, Ind.

WITH the minimum price of steel materially reduced and fixed for the balance of the year, growers who need additional space should not hesitate going ahead with the erection of their contemplated greenhouses.

Many far-sighted growers are now readily seeing the advantage in building additional glass this season. This is evident from the number of inquiries we are receiving daily.

If you need additional houses to take care of your increasing trade, and have been "on the fence" as to whether or not to build, we believe you are making a mistake in not "going through" with your plans RIGHT NOW.

Think it over—and when ready to talk building, let us submit sketches and estimate of just what it will cost you. Our price is always right, consistent with first-class material and proper design.

This 200-Foot Line Waters 10,000 Square Feet

Think of it, 10,000 square feet! That's 5 000 square feet on both sides of the line. Every line added, adds another 10,000.

Think what hose enough would cost to water this 50,000 square feet. And the cost of the men to hold the hose.

Yet what is 50,000 square feet when it comes to growing things outdoors? The beauty of the Skinner System is, you can water as little or as much as you want. Water feet or acres, equally well.

But best of all, your Skinner System won't cost you a cent after the first year. In nine cases out of ten, the increased crop pays for it the first season.

So you see, there is absolutely no reason why you can't Skinnerize your whole place. Send for further facts and costs.

THE STORY OF CHRISTMAS GOLD.

The most unique novelty pompon ever offered to the trade. Originated by Herbert Bate, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., in 1915. A seedling of Baby. Has all the tough, lasting qualities peculiar to its parent, with a free growing habit similar to Lucille Knoble, Golden Climax, etc. The color is much darker than in the old Baby, almost a Golden Wedding yellow. Size, about one inch in diameter, of solid button type. Can be cut tight for Thanksgiving, is at its best from December 10 to 30, and holds on for weeks. We cut the last batch this season January 12, 1919.

Certified by and scored 90 points before the Chrysanthemum Society of America committee of Chicago, December 14, 1917.

From 2-in. pots, 20c each;
$17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

GLADIOLI

GLADIOLUS MRS. WATT.
The measure of success of any variety of gladiolus is its earning power to the grower and to the florist, based on the satisfaction it gives to the public.
Gladiolus Mrs. Watt has made good on this practical end of the proposition. One florist writes: "I could have sold double the quantity of Mrs. Watt, had I owned the stock."
Testimonials from growers affirm that owing to its distinctive color, its strong upright growth and the excellent keeping qualities of the bloom of this variety, it is a paying proposition to both grower and florist.
One color; brilliant deep rose shade. Only the following size bulbs unsold:

THRIPS IN ASPARAGUS HOUSE.

Please give me some advice on how to rid my greenhouses of thrips. One of my houses, 34½x150, is planted with Asparagus plumosus and A. Sprengeri. The soil in this house was used as carnation soil last year and seems to be covered with thrips. When lime is spread they are plainly seen jumping and crawling in lively fashion. I have fumigated with tobacco stems and sprayed with Nico-fume, but the insects appear to be as numerous as ever.
J. D. B.—Ore.

Regular spraying with Nico-fume solution usually disposes of any ordinary case of thrips, but if this method of treatment does not seem to be effective, I would suggest trying the following preparation: One and one-half ounces of whale-oil soap, one teaspoonful of Black Leaf 40 and one gallon of water. Dissolve the soap in the water by boiling and add the nicotine after the liquid is cool. Make enough of this preparation for a thorough spraying and apply just before sundown, repeating the dose at intervals of five or six days until the insects are disposed of. W. H. T.

The Market.

The cut flower market was not so active the first part of the week, but finished with a rush for stock, many orders not being filled completely.

Carnations and roses are plentiful, but hold up well in price. White carnations, smilax and tulips were in demand the latter part of the week, mostly for churches. Lilies are going to be scarce for Easter—that is, the general outlook for them just now is poor, and unless we have some exceptionally good, bright weather for the next few days there will be few lilies.

Callas have been more plentiful, but clean up well. Peas have found a fairly good market, which also is true of pansies. Daffodils clean up fairly well. Tulips are scarce. Calendulas are arriving in quantity. The quality of these is good and they soon clean up. Narcissi and alyssum move slowly. Daisies clean up well. Violets moved better last week.

The market is well supplied with greens now. Adiantum and asparagus are both available.

The plant situation for Easter looks good, with plenty of rose plants, bulbous stock, some exceptionally good hydrangeas and spiræas, with other novelties. Potted Easter lilies are in doubt. Bright weather is needed to help bring them along and then only a few will make it.

Don't guess—be sure!

Now, there are only forty-eight distinct types of Greenhouses.

And when you have learned these thoroughly, you should be a master greenhouse designer.

These forty-eight basic types are the foundation of all greenhouse construction. You own one of these forty-eight.

Of these forty-eight types, there are only twenty-four worth any consideration at all, for the AGMCO has proved the rest of them wasteful, inefficient and costly. Of the twenty-four, only four may be called up-to-date and thoroughly economical from the standpoint of operation, durability and upkeep. And of the four, AGMCO considers only two as nearing perfection. And it is between these two that you must choose if you build the AGMCO way.

With the AGMCO, greenhouse building is an exact science. Guesswork has been eliminated. AGMCO houses are not designed after the usual custom, for custom is only another name for habit—and habit generally follows the line of least resistance rather than of logic.

The AGMCO sells greenhouses—not just so much material.

When you have your first talk with us and get your first AGMCO house, you know just how much you have been missing.

Let's start the talk now.

Where'll we have it?

Do you want your greenhouses built the new way?

Showing New Steel "Y" Brace Fitting in Use on Greenhouse Just Built for Lombard Floral Co., Lombard, Ill.

GREENHOUSE men used to think that if a greenhouse roof had supports underneath to hold it up that was all that was needed. But they found out mighty soon that the wind had a way of getting inside (especially when the doors were opened), and lifting upwards on the roof like a large balloon.

We then got out our "Bolted-thru-the-pipe" fittings which held all the parts securely together. But still we were not satisfied.

It had been the custom, among ourselves and other greenhouse manufacturers as well, to make all of the structural pipe connections by means of cast iron fittings. We did not like this, as cast iron fittings have a way of cracking under an unusual strain. So we made our fittings of galvanized steel.

Now, indeed, we had a satisfactory connection and our latest improvement the steel "Y" brace fitting as shown above, puts on the finishing touch to a perfectly supported greenhouse.

If you want the most for your money, get your greenhouse from MONINGER.

Why not let us give you an estimate now?

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS PAGES TWO AND THREE

Detail of clamp column cap fitting.

Parts of the truss and rafter included between numbers 1, 2 and 3 are assembled at our factory whenever possible, and shipped to the job ready for quick erection. The cross-tie connecting the truss at "2," and the sag rod extending from the ridge-joining plate, are bolted in place afterwards.

Truss-joining plate, bolting 4 truss members.

Every Fitting in the Steel Frame Work of Every Lord & Burnham House is Forged or Malleable Iron

THAT statement is absolutely true with one possible exception. The roof bar clasp that fastens the bar to the angle iron eave plate is cast iron. There is no twisting strain on them that ever caused them to crack, either when being put up or afterwards. So cast iron fully answers the purpose.

But when it comes to column caps, you know how cast iron fittings will snap in two, when you give the bolt an extra turn to make sure it's surely tight.

You can turn up the bolts until you strip the threads on every one of our malleable column fittings, and they will never crack.

Then consider the gusset plates at the eave; or where they bind together the truss—both are sheared steel. Steel, shear cut and cold punched to fit. You well know there isn't anything better for the purpose.

Take the little angle lug that fastens the rafter cap to the iron rafter; it is not cast. Neither is it a piece of angle iron chopped off. It is a piece of forged steel shaped directly from a flat piece. Pick one up. Look it over carefully and see how perfectly true it is shaped.

Admittedly, we did used to use cast iron fittings, and even chop up angle iron; but just as soon as we found out there was a better way, we promptly did it that way. Which, as you know, is the Lord & Burnham way of doing things.

Most Important Announcement

YOU WILL RECEIVE THIS YEAR

FORT DEARBORN NATIONAL BANK

Chicago, Ill., April 17th, 1919.

American Bulb Co.,
172 N. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—

Enclosed you will find copies of our Commercial Letter of Credit, No. 2113, cabled to the Yokohama Specie Bank, Ltd., Yokohama, Japan, under date of April 15th in favor of ....., for $50,000, covering a shipment of Lily Bulbs, as well as Guarantee, which we would thank you kindly to sign and return to us.

Yours very truly,
Wm. Kemp,
Asst. Manager Foreign Dept.

Lily Bulbs are extremely scarce for this coming Fall's delivery. The planting of Lily Bulbs in Japan has been reduced to less than half of former years. Now that the war is over, the demand is much greater than the supply. Every country will be in search of Lily Bulbs at harvesting time.

THE AMERICAN BULB COMPANY are in direct touch with the Lily Bulb growers of Japan and have advance information that the above is true. To avoid any hitch, the American Bulb Company have placed to their growers' credit on April 15th, 1919, the sum of $50,000.00 to take care of part of their purchase, to assure us of our supply. We are now booking orders for Lily Bulbs in the different varieties of

Giganteum, Formosum, Rubrum, Album, Auratum

BERNARD, JUDAE & COMPANY
Ocean Freight Brokers

Chicago, Ill., April 19th, 1919.

American Bulb Co.,
172 N. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Attention Mr. Miller.

Gentlemen:—

Confirming conversation of yesterday, we are today cabling our Paris office, advising them that the letter of credit which you have established with them, amounting to 100,000 francs, is to apply upon shipments of French Bulbs and shippers are to be paid by our Paris office immediately upon presentation of bill of lading after shipment has been made.

It is our understanding that this arrangement is made by you to secure the best discount for Cash from the shippers and that no portion of this credit will be used in payment of freight charges, insurance or any other item except the actual cost of the goods.

If there is any further instructions which you desire to give, please let us hear from you by return mail.

Yours very truly,
Bernard, Judae & Company,
By W. B. Kuehn,
WBK:GW Import Department.

We invite all prospective buyers to immediately get in touch with us for their supply. The days of placing orders carelessly for Lily Bulbs, as well as French and Dutch Bulbs, are past. To assure yourself of your stock it is necessary for you to know what preparation the firm you are doing business with has made to assure its ability to supply your needs.

The Dutch Bulb situation last Fall proved that it is necessary for you to place your order with a reliable concern. The American Bulb Company last Fall filled every order that was placed with them up to August, in full. We also took care of hundreds of disappointed Florists from the surplus stock that we always provide for late buyers.

The French Bulb situation is about the same as the Japanese—scarce and a large demand for them. We have also made the same preparations to secure us our full delivery by sending 100,000 francs to France on April 16th to take care of our order.

We can ship F. O. B. New York, Dutch, French and Lily Bulbs, and can also make the same shipments F. O. B. Chicago. Write us immediately and place your order with us—

OUR HISTORY

It would be an inexcusable vanity on our part if we told you about ourselves without a real motive for doing so. Our object in telling you that we have grown from a small-room concern to one of the largest manufacturers of Florists' Supplies in the country, is to point out to you that in less than 4 years we have made hundreds of satisfied customers. We could not have grown unless we were a safe concern to deal with.

OUR PRICES

One of the many reasons for our rapid growth lies, we believe, in the fact that we are aiming for a large volume of business with small profits rather than the reverse. In this connection we will say that should you find that we have ever overcharged you, even long after you have purchased from us, we shall be glad to have you call the matter to our attention and we can assure you of a prompt adjustment. We have constantly felt that we cannot hope for more than ordinary success unless there is established a real confidence between our customers and ourselves.

The Story of Christmas Gold

Originated by Herbert Bate, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., in 1915. A seedling of Baby. The most unique novelty pompon ever offered to the trade. Has all the tough, lasting qualities peculiar to its parent, with a free growing habit similar to Lucille Knoble, Golden Climax, etc. The color is much darker than in the old Baby, almost a Golden Wedding yellow. Size, about one inch in diameter, of solid button type. Can be cut tight for Thanksgiving, is at its best from December 10 to 30, and holds on for weeks. We cut the last batch this season January 12, 1919.

Certificated by and scored 90 points before the Chrysanthemum Society of America committee of Chicago, December 14, 1917.

What good judges say of it:

The box of flowers of Christmas Gold pompon came safely and I would be glad to get 500 rooted cuttings of this variety, and would be willing to pay $30.00 per hundred for same. Should you decide to put Christmas Gold on the market this spring, please advise whether you can let me have the number mentioned, payment to be made before shipment of cuttings.—Charles M. Weaver, Ronks, Pa., December 19, 1918.

The box of Christmas Gold pompon mum came to hand in good shape. It is a splendid flower and in my opinion a wonderful flower to have through the whole month of December and especially at Christmas. Wish we had had a thousand bunches of it this season at Christmas time. I hope you will see your way to grow a big stock and sell a lot of it to our Detroit growers, so we will have it to sell in our Detroit retail stores next Christmas.—E. A. Fetters, Detroit, Mich., January 3, 1919.

The yellow pompon chrysanthemum, Christmas Gold, reached us December 19 in perfect condition. To our mind the sale of this flower at Christmas would be limited only by the supply to be had. It has remarkable keeping qualities and at this date, January 4, it is still in a fairly good condition. We feel that you have a good thing.—Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., January 4, 1919.

Your late blooming pompon, Christmas Gold, was received December 19. Half the bunch we kept in our icebox and the other half I took home with me. Those I took home remained in good condition until December 26, and those in the icebox until December 28, when the flowers were still good, but the foliage had shriveled. The variety, in my opinion, is a very good one for working up, not only for Christmas, but all through December, when there is a scarcity of the smaller yellow flowers. Christmas Gold seems to be a good shipper; it reached us in perfect condition.—Max Schling, New York, December 10, 1919.

Young stock will be in great demand after next season, when its merit has become known to the growers.

SIM'S HYBRID YELLOW POLYANTHUS

This is one of my houses, 20x300 feet, of National Flower Show Gold Medal Polyanthus. These had been in bloom constantly since November.

These beautiful Primroses are still very scarce everywhere and good returns are awaiting those who will grow them. They find a ready sale when bunched like violets. The house may be utilized for other crops from May to November 1, as they are grown outdoors in summer.

Polyanthus this season have averaged 50 cents a small bunch and each plant will, when grown well, produce from two to three bunches.

They are planted 8x8 apart. Does any crop you grow give better returns? Strong divisions in May.

Travels 212,000 Miles For Cleveland Florist

T. J. Kirchner, Cleveland Florist, operates five White Trucks. The oldest of these has been in service seven years and has covered more than 212,000 miles. It is still in efficient operation.

"Our experience with White Trucks has been so satisfactory and such an important factor in the development of our business that we consider them the most dependable and economical truck we have ever operated," says Mr. Kirchner.

"Before investing in Whites, we spent a lot of money in purchasing cheaper trucks and after they were placed in service we continued to spend a lot of money keeping them in repair. We are thoroughly convinced that cheaper trucks are not built to insure steady service. Delivery is the corner stone of our business and our White Trucks can always be depended upon to reach their destination on time."

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

PLANTING, PATRIOTISM AND PROFITS

Last season it was the fortune of florists to be hailed as patriots when they preached planting kitchen gardens. This year it is another story; we must make our appeal to pleasure and profit, not patriotism, in urging the purchase of our vegetable plants. It is time to make plans to push plants.

IT will not be many days before the spring planting season is on us and it behooves us to do some heavy thinking right away, because there are a good many million vegetable plants in the greenhouses of this country which will, quite soon, be entered on the profit or loss side of the ledger, depending, which side, on the way we handle the situation.

Up to within the last month the trade has worked early and late, growing vegetable seedlings in every spare corner, with the utmost confidence that every plant represented just so many pennies. But recently assurance has been shaken.

Will People Plant Gardens?

The question has arisen, "Will there be anything like last year's enthusiasm for kitchen gardens?" The doubt has come about through the quite general report of the big mail-order seed houses that the number and size of their orders this season has not come up to their expectations. It may mean much or little to the man who has put in weeks growing vegetable plants, but it is disquieting.

Last year planting a garden was the patriotic thing to do; to be without a "patch" was to be almost as unpopular as to be without the latest Liberty loan poster in one's window. Florists sold vegetable plants like the proverbial hot cakes.

Thus far the urge of patriotism is missing this year, although the government is making an attempt to revive interest in school gardens and other community undertakings of like character. It is to this most mail-order seedsmen ascribe the recession in their business, but it is possible they are mistaken and that the effects they note are due to two other causes: the increased number of places at which seeds are sold and the home saving of seeds following last year's higher prices.

At any rate, it looks as though the florists who have big lots of vegetable plants would do well to get busy.

For Pleasure and Profit.

There is ample reason for planting a garden. If we can no longer urge planting as a patriotic act, a means by which to "help win the war," we can in all sincerity urge gardening as a source of profit. Everybody knows vegetables, fresh or canned, are costing more right now than at any time while the war was on. There always is pleasure in a home garden; this season there will be a saving in it greater than ever before.

We can advertise strongly along those lines.

You never can tell about the call for vegetable plants. It may be light at the start and extremely strong at the close; a big shortage may develop after everybody has made up his mind there is a surplus. Or it may be there is a shortage in certain localities and an abundance in others. It often happens so because of local late frosts. If a frost nips the first planting, then the call for started plants is several times as large as before. It has happened that way many times, more frequently with tomato plants than with others.

But we cannot chance the late frosts; they are almost certain to strike one or another locality, but there is no certainty and if we do not sell our vegetable plants early we may not sell them at all.

Growers should arrange their retail outlets at once, large outlets, as numerous as possible. Every flower store which sells bedding plants can sell vegetable plants; even flower stores that do not sell bedding stock can turn an easy extra penny with a simple sign, "Orders for tomato plants, etc., taken here."

Profit for Retail Florists.

There is a nice bit of extra profit for everybody who pushes vegetable plants during May and a part of June. It will pay the favorably located florists to make a show of them and to advertise. It can be done at retail stores as well as at greenhouses.

There are indications that the planting of flower beds is to be restricted somewhat by the higher prices that are being asked for geraniums and other bedding stock. These prices are due as much to anticipated short supply as to the extra cost of production and may be justified, but it would be a mistake to ask too much money for vegetable seedlings at the opening of the season. The supply is too large. A lot of greenhouses which were shut down during the winter have produced vegetable plants as a catch crop this spring. The safe way is to start the stock moving as early as the weather will permit. We can lose nothing by beginning at the earliest possible moment to get these vegetable plants into the hands of the public.

The sooner the stock starts moving the better for us all. It is an old saying in seed stores that sales lost at the start of the season can not be recovered.

Make Prices Right.

It is a common practice with florists to ask what they would like to get and, if the stock does not move, to reduce the price. Only sometimes they do not wake up soon enough; the season is so far advanced that the cut price does not effect a clearance.

One of the most astute of the larger wholesalers frequently makes his play just the other way: Knowing what quantity he has to sell, he makes a price low enough to start a brisk movement at the opening of the season and, getting a large number of people interested at the start, he advances his prices as he sees his supply diminishing.

Such a plan is to be recommended for the vegetable plants. The gardening fever is infectious. Get a lot of people planting and their neighbors will come to you for plants. Watch your market and raise the prices as soon as it begins to look like a sell-out. Then, if a late frost comes, it will give a chance at a piece of extra profit instead of merely affording the opportunity to avoid a loss.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

ATTRACTIVE ACCESSORIES.

Vases and Similar Wares.

On first glancing at the vases shown in the two accompanying illustrations, it might seem more appropriate to call the wares a side line, rather than accessories. Ah! but therein lies the root of the matter, the vital point of the whole subject. The vases serve their purpose better if treated, not as a side line, but as an integral part of the regular stock, a close accompaniment of the flowers.

The word "accessories," as applied to persons, has acquired a bad significance, usually meaning people who, in a subordinate way, have aided in committing a crime. But the inanimate objects generally spoken of as florists' accessories—baskets, vases and all the rest—have no such evil reputation. They assist, silently but most successfully, in the commendable undertaking of selling flowers. Accessories form an indispensable part of the fine arts, and most florists will agree in insisting that their vocation is a fine art as well as a trade. "In the fine arts, such as the painting of pictures," say the dictionaries, "accessories are introduced to balance the composition or in some way enhance its artistic effectiveness."

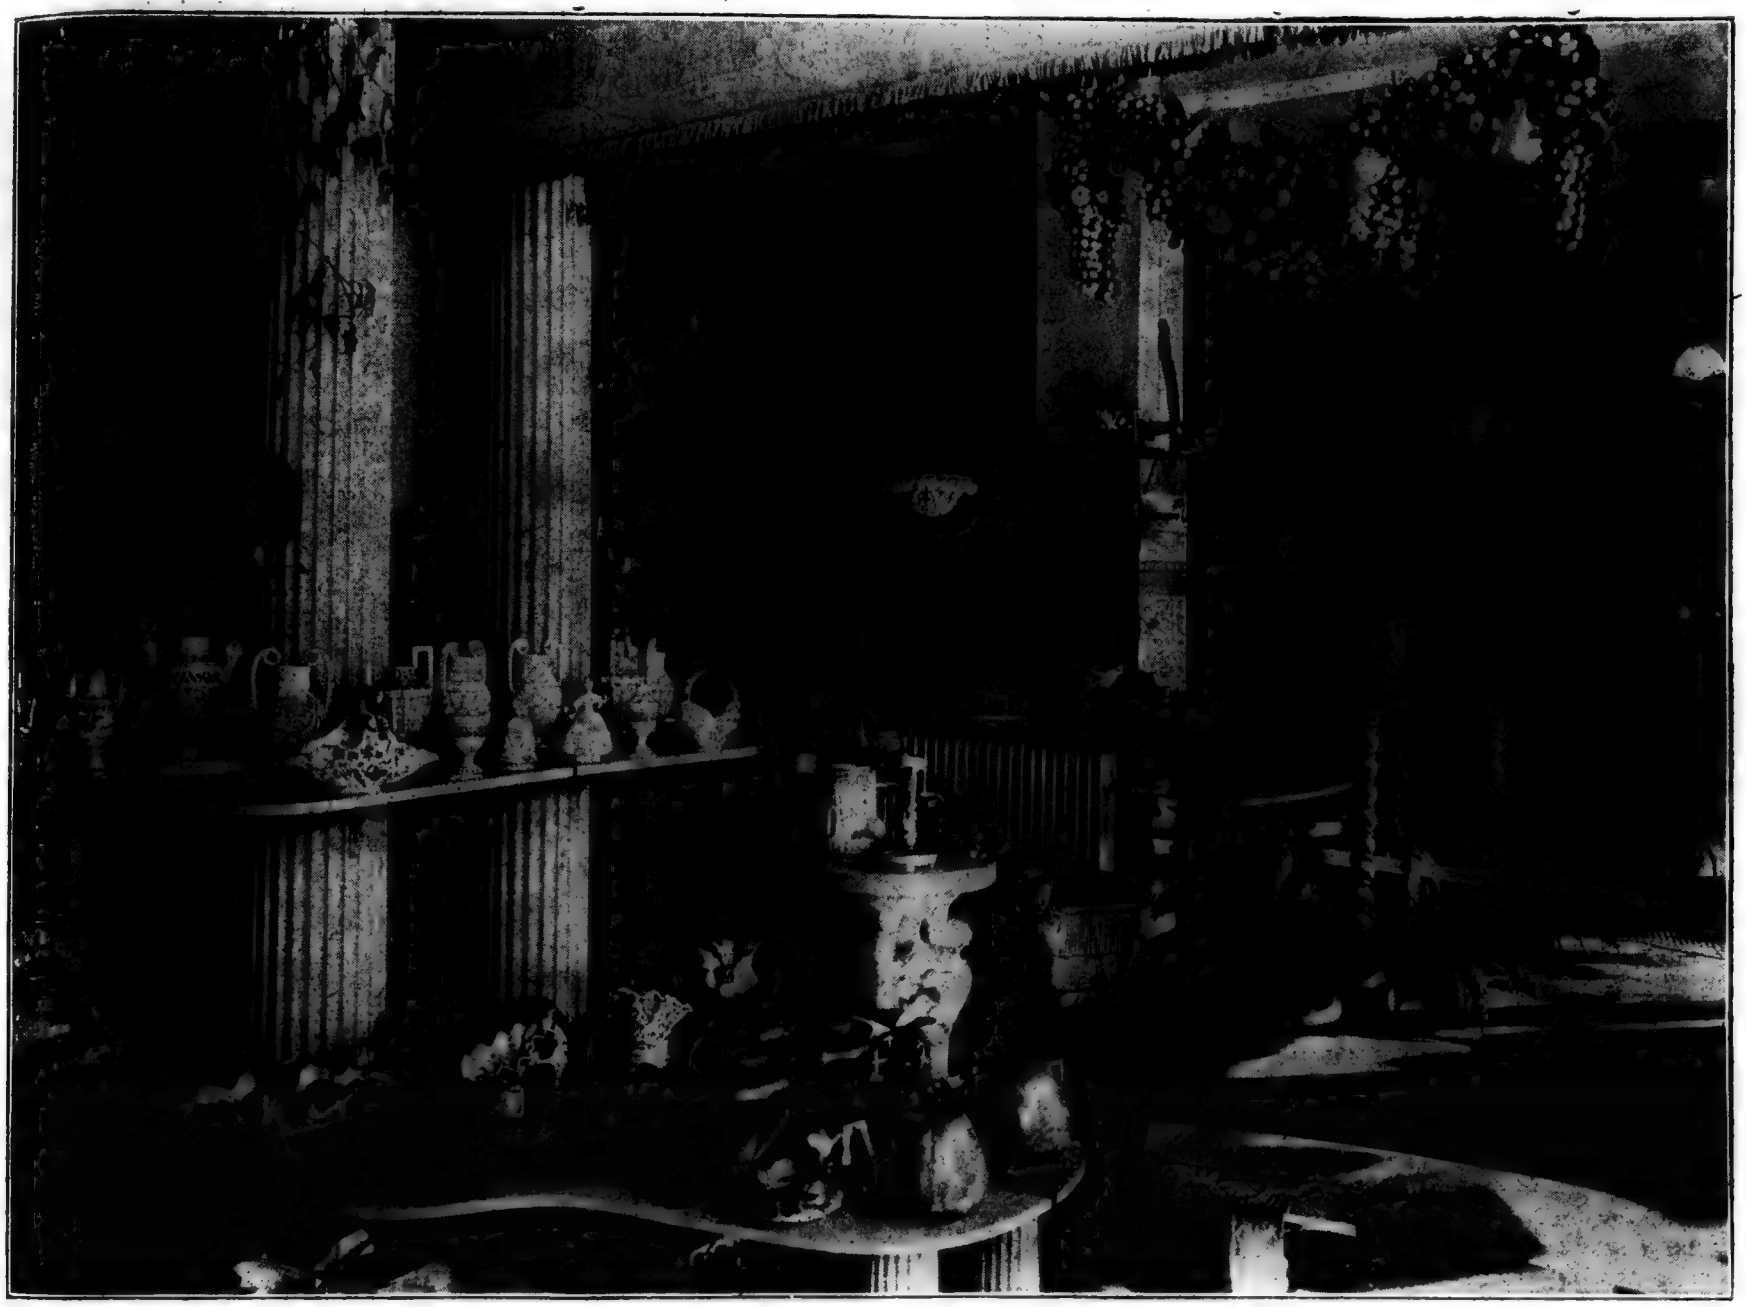
Unrealized Possibilities.

Yet, efficient and blameless as accessories of this nature are, a few florists appear to shun them almost as completely as if they regarded them as evil associates—accessories of the criminal sort. Perhaps only a comparatively small number of florists fully appreciate the possibilities that inhere in these artistic wares.

The Review has spoken often, and will have frequent occasion to speak again, of the great value of the more generally used accessories, such as baskets and ribbons. This time, just for the nonce, the subject is porcelain vases and similar decorative wares, which comprise earthenware, stoneware and terra cotta and are learnedly called ceramics.

There is no intention here to try to induce any florist to turn his store into a pottery shop or a museum of art. A florist is a florist, and his accessories, even the best of them, are contributory to the selling of flowers and plants. It is for each florist to decide, as he is quite capable of doing, just what degree of prominence it will be wise for him to give to these high-class specimens of pottery. Each florist will know what are the right allowances to make, in his own case, for the circumstances that alter cases. But many florists may conclude, after giving due thought to the subject, that they have hitherto failed to derive all possible benefit from these artistic wares. Then, having so concluded, they will begin, cautiously and conservatively at first, to add a few samples of choice pottery to their stock.

Silent Salesmen.



Let us mention—only mention, for argument is unnecessary—a few of the reasons in favor of the liberal use of vases and similar accessories. In the first place, the vases and such articles, if skillfully arranged with relation to the other stock and the furnishings, greatly improve the general appearance of the store. These fine products of art are a fitting part of so artistic a place as a flower store and blend beautifully with nature's own fairest products. Secondly, pretty vases are a strong inducement to buy flowers; they are silent but graceful and persuasive salesmen. They never detract from the flowers, but always add to the flowers' appeal. In the store or in the home, vases are continually working for the florist. Being made as receptacles for flowers, they are noticeably, unquestionably incomplete without flowers and so are a constant reminder of the florists' stock in trade. Thirdly, if an occasional vase is sold, the profit is purely in the line of extra income, so much genuine "velvet."

One Company's Experience.

Baumgarten, Inc., of Milwaukee, Wis., whose assortment of vases is shown in the illustrations, also does a considerable business in renting the vases, as well as selling them. Indeed, in the case of this company the renting or lending seems to have been the main part of the vase business, with the actual sale of the vases largely incidental.

Interior of the Store of Baumgarten, Inc., Milwaukee, Showing the Display of Accessories.

Since the members of Baumgarten, Inc., have had several years of experience in the handling of vases as accessories, their ideas on the matter should be of value to the trade. Their verdict on the subject is both encouraging and discouraging—highly encouraging in a general way, but somewhat discouraging with reference to the recent abnormal conditions created by the war, and it would be difficult to foretell when entirely normal conditions will return. The Baumgarten people have been in the trade for forty-five years and have just pride in ranking as exclusive florists. They have been in business at their present address, 130 Mason street, for five years, but, as the facilities at that location no longer suffice, they are looking for more suitable quarters.

"In reference to the pottery that you see in the pictures," says Baumgarten, Inc., "the vase and pottery line has been not far from a standstill during the last two years, on account of the lack of importations. However, our entire experience has proved that great benefit can be derived from carrying a line of pottery in connection with flowers. By lending the pottery and making a fair charge for the loan, we received a satisfactory return from the investment, besides enhancing the value of the flowers themselves by using our best taste in selecting the proper receptacles for them. In many cases, also, the customers purchased the vases. Moreover, the handling of this line of goods improved the tone and character of the whole establishment."

HOUSTON FLOWER SHOW.

A Successful Affair.

An exceptionally successful spring flower show was held in Houston, Tex., April 12, at which not only local florists, but amateur growers, were represented. In addition to the exhibits of these growers, many wild flowers were in evidence. The show was the first of its kind held in Houston and attracted thousands of persons.

Meritorious mentions were awarded to several Houston florists by the judges.

The display of the Kuhlmann Floral Co., Inc., consisted of baskets of carnations, ferns, Baby Rambler roses in pots, sweet peas and geraniums.

Paul M. Carroll showed his specialty, home-grown hydrangeas. There were six excellent varieties of these, besides Spanish and Japanese iris, sweet peas in variety, ferns and palms.

The Brazos Greenhouses, R. G. Hewitt, manager, had as a feature of their exhibit a collection of amaryllis of assorted colors. Besides these, the Brazos concern showed snapdragons, dracæna canes, Spanish iris and ferns.

Pansies Featured.

Home-grown pansies were the chief attraction in the exhibit of the Oaks Floral Co., of which R. F. Lawson is the proprietor. There was an extremely handsome purple bougainvillea. Other flowers included in this exhibit were fine calla lilies, petunias and several beautiful specimens of Whitmanii ferns.

Roses of many varieties were shown by the Robert C. Kerr Co., Inc. These were considered by the judges to be equal to roses shipped from the north, if not superior. A tasteful arrangement of the Kerr exhibit, which was in charge of E. W. Eichling, added to the attractiveness of this display. Columbia, Mr. Kerr's specialty, was the most noteworthy in the collection. Other varieties of roses shown were Red Radiance, Pink Radiance, Hoosier Beauty, Mrs. Charles Russell, White Killarney, Sunburst, Ophelia, Mrs. George Shawyer, Killarney Brilliant, Richmond and Cecile Brunner. In addition to roses, there were geraniums, pelargoniums and sweet peas.

Muncie, Ind.—Adam Shideler is opening a modern retail store here, in a good location, installing equipment obtained from the store fixtures department of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

Chariton, Ia.—The Fairview Greenhouses, owned by Theodore W. Rosa, have been purchased by the Kemble Floral Co., which operates greenhouses and flower stores in several Iowa towns. Additions will be built to the greenhouses, and an office and store will be opened in the business district of Chariton, according to plans announced by the new owners.

THE DECENNIAL CENSUS

TO ASK FEW QUESTIONS OF US.

Enumeration Next January.

In taking the decennial census, in January, 1920, the Census Bureau will devote little attention to florists, nurserymen or seedsmen. The three branches of our trade are included in the general census of agriculture. Only two questions are to be asked specially of the greenhouse trade: Area covered by glass and value of products in 1919, the latter divided into flowers and plants and vegetables. Of nurserymen, acreage and value of products are the only two points to be covered. Statistics are to be gathered as to field seeds of many kinds, but the production of vegetable seeds, sugar beet seeds and flower seeds is grouped as one item, only the number of acres harvested being asked. It is a "tentative schedule" which has been placed in the hands of the correspondent of The Review and probably can be changed by prompt action on the part of the recognized trade bodies.

All "Farms" for Census.

The schedule formally states that "all market, truck and fruit gardens, nurseries, greenhouses, poultry yards, places for keeping bees, and all dairies, in and near cities, villages and incorporated towns, even though little land is employed, are, for census purposes, farms, provided they produced in 1919 agricultural products to the value of at least $250 or required the continuous services of at least one person.

The information called for on the schedule will be treated as strictly confidential under all circumstances. The information will not be used as a basis for taxation, nor communicated to any assessor.

All questions are to be answered in order. Inability to obtain exact data does not justify failure to answer a question. The most accurate returns that the circumstances permit must be obtained. If farm records or accounts are kept, take data from them. If such records are not available, careful estimates should in all cases be obtained or made.

The census will be taken in January, next, and must be completed before February 1. The schedule covers four pages 9x12 and contains sixty-three main questions and subquestions of from one to ten under each of the sixty-three. Questions 62 and 63, of direct interest to Review readers, are as follows:

62. Nursery products, 1919:
1. Number of acres used for growing trees, plants, vines, etc.
2. Amount received from sales of nursery products during 1919.

63. Greenhouse and hothouse establishments, 1919:
1. Total square feet under glass (include area covered by greenhouses, sashes and frames).
2. Amount received from sale of flowers, plants, etc., during 1919.
3. Amount received from sale of vegetables during 1919.

The questions preceding these call for information relative to farm tenure, farm acreage, farm values, farm incumbrances, farm expenses, reclamation, farm woodlot, forest products, pasture, farm facilities, coöperation in marketing, domestic animals, animal products, honey and beeswax, chickens and eggs, crops grown on this farm in 1919, hay and forage, grains and seeds, other field crops, farm garden, orchard products, subtropical fruits, nuts, small fruits; grape and grape products. MONTGOMERY, ALA.

Easter Business Excellent.

In 1918, Rosemont Gardens had for Easter week some 20,000 lily blooms. This Easter they had only 200 blooms of their own growing and brought in from Chicago 2,000 blooms. Easter week, 1918, the business was split up as follows: Fourteen per cent wholesale, ten per cent F. T. D. orders, seventy-six per cent general retail business. This year's wholesale was only half of last year's wholesale, on account of not having lilies. F. T. D. business was only twenty per cent of last year's F. T. D. business, because of the closing up of Camp Sheridan. However, in the wind-up of this Easter's business they find that there is a gross decrease in business of only seven per cent. This is remarkable because Easter came so late that in the south it was impossible to hold some classes of plants. For instance, there were no bulbous plants offered for sale, as they had already bloomed out. Hydrangeas, spiræas and pelargoniums took the lead in plants sold.

Carnations, roses, peas, valley and orchids sold best in the order named. The carnation is always the leader. Of course, there was a demand for lilies, but the customers were willing in most cases to buy something else when they found there were no lilies to be had. As far as the lilies that came from Chicago were concerned, it would have been as well to have left them in Chicago, as they did not move fast on account of the price asked for them.

Prices this Easter were just a little bit up from last year on plants and the prices of cut flowers were the same as last Easter.

As a whole, Easter business was most excellent and was far better than had been hoped for last fall, when the astounding news came that no lily bulbs would come to this country. It simply shows that no flower is essential to any big day, but that any well grown cut flowers or plants can be sold.

Now for Mothers' day. Prices should not be placed too high. The demand will be great, but be satisfied with a reasonable profit and do not kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

SPECIAL IMPORT PERMITS

HOW TO GET PLANTS IMPORTED.

After Quarantine Goes In.

The Federal Horticultural Board is busy with preparations for the quarantine to go into effect June 1. Explanations have been issued with regard to the new regulation which provides for the importation, under a special permit from the Secretary of Agriculture, of limited quantities of otherwise prohibited stock, for the purpose of keeping the country supplied with new varieties of plants and stock for propagation purposes, not available in the United States.

The following statement has been issued by Chairman Marlatt to indicate the limitations under this regulation and the procedure to be followed in making importations of the two classes of plants specified, namely, new varieties and necessary propagating stock:

"The expression, 'new varieties,' is understood to mean plant novelties; that is, new horticultural or floricultural creations or new discoveries. 'Necessary propagating stock' is understood to mean stock of old or standard varieties imported for the multiplication of the plants in question as a nursery or florist enterprise, as distinguished from importations for immediate or ultimate sale of the stocks actually imported, and such importations will be restricted to stocks which are not available in this country in adequate quantities.

"The expression, 'limited quantities,' used in Regulation No. 14, is understood to mean, with respect both to new varieties and to standard stocks, such quantities as will supply reasonable needs for the establishment of reproduction plantings, which may be thereafter independent of foreign supplies.

No Limit on Permits.

"There is no limitation as to the number of permits for different plants, or classes of plants, under Regulation No. 14, which an individual may request, but the applications will all be passed upon, both as to necessity for the particular importation, and as to the quantity adequate for the purpose intended, by experts of the department, for the information of the board prior to the issuance of the permits.

"All importations under Regulation No. 14 must be made under special permits, through the Office of Foreign Seed and Plant Introduction, of the Department of Agriculture, but for the use of the individual importer. The importer will be required to meet all entry, transportation and freight handling charges. The department will make no charge for inspection and supervision. The necessary procedure for making such importations is as follows:

The Proper Procedure.

"1. The Federal Horticultural Board will supply, on request, an application blank upon which request may be made for a special permit to import. This application embodies an agreement on the part of the importer that if the imported material is found, on examination by an inspector of the Department of Agriculture, to be so infested or infected with insects or disease that it cannot be adequately safeguarded, it may be destroyed, and such destruction will not be made the basis of a claim against the Department of Agriculture for damages. The application must be accompanied by a statement certifying that the plants to be imported are novelties, or, if standard varieties of foreign plants, that stocks in adequate quantities for their propagation are not available in this country, and that in either case they are to be imported for the establishment of reproduction plantings and not for immediate or ultimate sale of the stocks actually imported. In exceptional cases, the importation of novelties may be made for personal use, but not for sale. The application must also give the name and address of the exporter, country and locality where the stock was grown, the name and address of the importer and the name and address of the nursery or other establishment in which the plants are to be reproduced on release.

"2. If the permit is issued, the applicant will be furnished shipping instructions and shipping tags, to be forwarded with his order to the exporter. The plants will, in consequence, be addressed in bond to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C., United States of America, and indorsed, 'Foreign Seed and Plant Introduction, for (insert name of importer),' and arrangements must be made with some responsible agency in Washington for the clearance of the plants when received through the customhouse at Georgetown, D. C., together with the payment of all charges involved.

"3. Upon clearance through the Georgetown customhouse, the material will be turned over to the Office of Foreign Seed and Plant Introduction by the authorized agent of the importer, and in the specially equipped inspection houses, and under expert care as to the welfare of the plants, be carefully examined by inspectors of the Federal Horticultural Board. If found free from dangerous insects or diseases, the shipment will be immediately and carefully repacked and forwarded by express, charges collect, to the importer.

"4. Cleaning and disinfection will occur for slight infestation, but should the material be found to be so infected or infested with either disease or insects that it cannot be so adequately safeguarded, it will either be destroyed, or, when possible and desirable, returned to the point of origin."

It will be a condition, not a theory, the trade will have to contend with in about a month.

HOW TO STERILIZE SOIL.

Amendment No. 1 to the regulations supplemental to Notice of Quarantine No. 37 provides that the requirement of Regulation 3 as to freedom from sand, soil, or earth of nursery stock and other plants and seeds permitted entry under that regulation, shall not apply to sand, soil, or earth used for packing the articles enumerated in Item No. 1 when such sand, soil, or earth has been previously sterilized in accordance with methods prescribed by the Federal Horticultural Board under the supervision of a duly authorized inspector of the country of origin.

The requirement as to sterilization may be met by heating the sand, soil, or earth to a temperature of 100 degrees Centigrade (212 degrees Fahrenheit) and maintaining that temperature for a period of one hour. Such sterilization is accomplished at one of the field stations of this department by the use of a large iron receptacle holding about a cubic yard of soil. A fire is built under the receptacle and in a short period the contained earth is heated sufficiently to kill all larvæ, nematodes, etc. It is necessary to keep the soil stirred while heating. Any device which will maintain the heat at the required temperature for one hour will be satisfactory to the board.

The invoice covering importations of bulbs packed in such sterilized sand, soil, or earth must be accompanied by a certificate of a duly authorized inspector of the country of origin to the effect that the required sterilization has been accomplished under his direction. The certificate should indicate the marks and numbers on the cases and should contain such other information as may be necessary to identify the cases which it covers. C. L. Marlatt, Chairman.

INVESTIGATING SHIPS' BALLAST.

Objectors to the plant quarantine have insisted that there is as much danger of the introduction of insect pests in the earth used as ballast by ships returning from Europe, as in the earth around foreign plants imported in balls, pots or tubs. The earth around balled, potted or tubbed plants cannot be disinfected or cleaned, says a recent statement from Washington, and involves a large and known risk. In view of the argument that earth ballast is equally dangerous, the Federal Horticultural Board, during the last two months, has undertaken a thorough investigation of such ships' ballast. This investigation has had special relation to the ports of New York and Boston, but is being extended to cover New Orleans, San Francisco and other principal ports of the United States.

The material employed for ballast would seem to involve little risk of being the means of the introduction of dangerous plant enemies, according to statements made by the investigators of the Department of Agriculture. The bulk of it consists of sand, gravel, broken rock, and even ashes. Soil is occasionally employed, but in the main this soil seems to have been derived from river banks or from excavations for construction purposes; in other words, such primeval soil as has had probably little or no touch with cultivated land.

It is perfectly apparent that there is little danger from such material, and it can not be considered in the same sense at all as the highly cultivated soil coming with plants grown in greenhouses or in gardens or fields, and should any insect life get into such ballast material, it would be accidental and exceptional. This investigation, however, will be continued to determine whether there is any danger in connection with such ballast which should be guarded against.

LILIES FROM BERMUDA.

This was an Easter of many unusual features, but probably the most unique stunt pulled off was that of B. A. Snyder & Co., Boston, who obtained large quantities of Harrisii lilies from Bermuda. Julius Snyder went to Bermuda to make the arrangements, spending two weeks on his trip. While Harrisii bulbs are not grown in Bermuda in anything like the extent of a few years ago, there still are large fields which are in good bloom the first half of April. Each year small quantities of these flowers come to New York. One customhouse brokerage firm has handled these shipments for many years, distributing them over the eastern half of the United States. At one time a quantity of the flowers found their way into the trade, but recently florists have not been handling them.

With the undoubted shortage of giganteums in view, Julius Snyder arranged for a large shipment of the Bermuda Harrisii flowers. They were cut in bud, the stems wrapped in damp moss and packed in wooden crates. The first shipment reached Boston April 12 and the accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph made that day in the basement sorting room of Snyder & Co. The flowers were graded, given a drink and repacked for shipment, going to every state in the eastern half of the country and a few of them far west.

Bostonians never had seen so many Easter lilies in one place before. The price asked was considerably below the price of greenhouse giganteums, but it is said to have turned a profitable speculation for the enterprising promoters.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The Easter cut flower business was eminently satisfacory to growers and to the wholesale trade, in all but one thing, that being lilies. For many days before Easter growers and commission men proclaimed a shortage of lilies for Easter and predicted that, in consequence, the price of these flowers would be high, probably as much as 35 cents to 40 cents or more. A few early sales were recorded at approximately these figures, but general buying was held up and little pre-Easter buying was done, except where a price of 25 cents was obtained. The latter quotation was anything but common. As a result, retailers turned their efforts toward the selling of other flowers and shortly after noon on the day before Easter the unloading of accumulated stocks commenced. Prices dropped quickly to 25 cents, then to 20 cents, and finally to 15 cents. However, a huge supply was left over. This miscalculation has proved that there is a limit to the price of lilies, even at Easter.

Carnations were in somewhat limited supply, a condition which kept prices at the top line, 10 cents to 12 cents for ordinary stock, with specials bringing as much as 15 cents. The clean-up of arrivals was good, few flowers being left over, excepting those of inferior grade.

Roses were fairly plentiful and in good demand, prices not advancing to a higher point than has been reached once or twice since the beginning of the year. American Beauties were in fair supply, with special grades moving easily at $1.25 to $1.50 per flower, while a few extra specials sold at a slightly higher figure.

Orchids were in excellent demand, with a supply not altogether sufficient. The best cattleyas brought $1.50 each; others sold down to 75 cents. Spray orchids, such as phalænopsis and odontoglossums, shared in the general demand, but were rather limited in supply. An unusually heavy shipping business was done. This cut into the supply for local consumption.

Bulbous stock was not available in a quantity to meet the great demand for it. Tulips of good quality sold for $1 to $1.25 per bunch. Some heavy supplies of well grown Emperor narcissi came in the day before Easter and cleaned up easily at $1 to $1.25 per bunch of twelve flowers. A few late freesias, some Lilium candidum, Spanish irises, hyacinths and a plentiful supply of callas made up the rest of the bulbous material. A limited supply of lily of the valley moved at $2 to $15 per hundred.

Pansies, daisies, primroses, sweet peas, lilacs, mignonette, myosotis, wallflowers, calendulas and peach blossoms moved well at substantial prices. Gardenias sold well at $1 to $9 per dozen.

At this writing the supply and the demand are both short, a condition always to be found immediately following Easter. Prices, generally speaking, have gone back to figures more nearly normal.

Retail florists appear to be well satisfied with the holiday trade, a complete sell-out being the experience of most of them. One had only to watch the Fifth avenue crowds after church on Easter Sunday to get an idea of what the cut flower business must have been. Never on a similar occasion were so many corsage bouquets in evidence. Their use was as common this year as in other years it has been rare.

A new bouquet, worn as a girdle, was strongly in evidence. Many of these were seen composed of cattleyas, gardenias, sweet peas and roses. Violets were not conspicuous. It was also pleasing to note a much greater use of boutonnieres by men.

Various Notes.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

From reports that were gathered Easter Sunday it is certain that this year's Easter business was large. Everybody was surprised at the volume of business done in all parts of the city.

The weather was fine all the week, with clear skies, especially on Holy Thursday and Good Friday, when plants were much in demand for church decorations.

Easter is recognized as the one holiday when plants easily lead cut flowers in popularity and this year was no exception to this rule.

Lily plants were much in demand and only a few were to be had. Hydrangeas took the lead in demand in the absence of azaleas. Ramblers, Tausendschoen and Perkins roses came next in favor.

Dutch bulbs in pots and pans were scarce this year, owing to the lateness of Easter. There were fine spiræas and the supply of these was large. White and yellow marguerites and lilacs came in for a big demand.

As to cut flowers, there was a large supply in almost everything seasonable, while the demand was much better than in any of the previous years, but prices were not so high as usual for Easter. Roses, in all varieties, were of fine quality and the demand favored Russell, Ophelia, Stanley and Sunburst. There were many Killarneys among the consignments. Carnations were as popular as ever and the supply was quite large all through the week. During the first part of the week these flowers were priced at 2 cents, but by the end of the week they were up to 6 cents and 8 cents for choice.

Sweet peas had the greatest demand in years and the big crop came in just right. The large supply early in the week was jobbed off after morning sales at $1 per thousand, in 10,000 and 20,000 lots. During the last few days they went up to 50 cents to 60 cents for choice and all cleaned up fairly well at those prices.

Bulbous stock had a remarkably large demand, with hardly enough to go around, as it was nearly all cut out, owing to the lateness of the season.

Cut lilies, as usual, came in for a large demand and there were enough to go around at prices ranging from 35 cents to 50 cents per bloom.

Among the other flowers that sold well were calendulas, Spanish irises, snapdragons, daisies, valley and orchids. Asparagus plumosus sold better than any other green. Smilax and Sprengeri moved well.

It is safe to say that, everything considered, including the weather, the supply of plants and cut flowers, and the demand, this year's Easter business was ahead of any in previous years.

Retailers' Association.

The Retail Florists' Association held a meeting April 14. The attendance was poor. According to President Weber, considerable important business had to be laid aside until the next meeting. The few who did attend discussed Easter prospects and publicity. It was decided that strong efforts will be made to obtain a large attendance at the next meeting, which will be held April 28. At the next meeting all the postponed business will be given attention and a review of the Easter business will be a subject for discussion. It is hoped that the full membership will be in attendance and help to dispose of the business that will come before the association.

County Growers.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association's monthly meeting will be held May 7, at the Eleven Mile House, at which meeting Easter business, from a grower's standpoint, will be discussed, as well as publicity. The trustees of the association are perfecting arrangements for the big "get-together" meeting April 30, at the W. A. Rowe greenhouse establishment.

Association of Gardeners.

The St. Louis Association of Gardeners will meet May 7, at the Forest park greenhouses. Secretary Hugo Schaff has announced that an interesting discussion on "Outdoor Bedding" will be led by Mr. Giebel and Mr. Baumann. A large attendance is expected.

Ladies' Florists' Club.

The Ladies' Florists' Club will meet at the Y. W. C. A. rooms, Fourteenth and Locust streets, May 6. Mrs. Berning, secretary of the club, says all ladies in the trade are invited to attend.

Various Notes.

F. C. Weber, Sr., spent a few days in Chicago, visiting his son, Herman, and buying for the Easter rush. Rudolph Nickel, until recently with Keller, of Rochester, N. Y., has taken a position with Mr. Weber as designer.

The St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower

Co. contemplates erecting a new building on the fifty feet of ground just east of the present quarters. This will be known as 1406 and 1408 Pine street. The old building will be wrecked. It is expected to have the new building completed early in the fall.

The Diemer Floral Co., on South Broadway, furnished a large banquet at the Hotel Statler last week. There were fifty tables, all handsomely decorated. Mrs. Diemer personally did the work.

The inauguration of the newly elected city aldermen, April 17, created considerable business for the local florists, as the desks of the new members of the board were covered with large bouquets from friends.

At the funeral last week of Henry Becker, known all over the country in sporting circles as "Kid" Becker, there were many telegraph orders filled by local florists. Orders came from many of the large cities throughout the country.

William Schray & Sons, John Held, Charles Beyer, F. J. Fillmore & Son and George B. Windler are fully prepared for the planting out season, with plenty of excellent bedding stock and many advance orders.

Carr & Richardson report a large Holy Week plant trade. This firm also had a large cut flower trade.

Otto Sander was well pleased with his first Easter at his new Seventh street store. His pretty window displays are big drawing cards. Transient trade this season is better than ever.

The officers of the Florists' Club will meet this week, at which time a meeting place will be selected for the next club meeting, which is scheduled to be held May 8.

Easter business was extremely good this year, according to Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly. Everything in cut flowers cleaned up and plants of all kinds had a large demand, he states.

Lily plants were extremely scarce this year, but Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney had a few thousand, the bulk of them in green bud. According to Julius Schaffer, they sold just the same.

The retailers who advertise in the pink pages of The Review say that they handled more telegraph orders for Easter than ever before. Orders came from all parts of the United States. The dealers give The Review credit for this business. Plant orders, especially, were large.

According to the wholesalers, the new plan of raising funds for publicity, as requested by all the local florists' organizations, is working well, as only a few of the retailers object to the addition of one per cent to their bills. The same may be said of the growers, who contribute one-half of one per cent of their sales. J. J. B.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Easter, 1919, has passed into history, but it will long be remembered as being unique in many respects. Everybody had a good clean-up. Good prices prevailed and weather conditions at the end of the week were the best. The florists and growers are now counting the profits, while they take a breathing spell before girding their loins for Memorial day, less than six weeks away.

The florists of this city and vicinity were confronted by the most difficult combination of conditions and circumstances imaginable. High prices and curtailed supply of potted plants and cut flowers, on one hand, and inclement weather and a big telephone tie-up, on the other, badly handicapped them. The entire telephone system throughout New England was put out of commission April 15 by a strike of the operators. The following day it began to rain and continued to rain two days. With the last two days preceding Easter warm, bright and spring-like, business took a boom that rapidly cleaned up everything in sight.

Prices almost reached record figures. Carnations were 10 cents to 15 cents; roses $6 to $20, with Columbia, Russell, Ophelia, Shawyer and Hearst commanding the top prices. Daffodils were $4 to $6; lilies and callas, $35, and sweet peas, $2 to $4. This resulted in retailers getting from 50 cents to 80 cents a bud for lilies; $2 to $12 a dozen for roses; carnations, $2 to $3.50 a dozen; lilies, $4 to $10 a pot.

Various Notes.

Lawrence Hay sold several hundred fine ramblers in pots for Easter.

Timothy O'Connor had the largest stock of lilies and azaleas in town Easter. They came from his own houses.

Charles Smith kept three extra delivery trucks busy and had several additional clerks because of the Easter rush.

Ed Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., said he was tired but satisfied because of the Easter business. He had several large auto truck loads of potted plants that he had brought from various parts of New England. He had a big stock, but it was too small for the demand.

T. Peterson, Benefit street, did an enormous Easter business, mostly with high-priced stock.

Cohen Bros., who recently took over the greenhouses of E. Carl, did a good Easter business.

Macnair was so busy at both stores on Broad street that he had to call in several extra clerks.

Johnston Bros., Dorrance street, were overwhelmed with Easter orders and did not get the last of the deliveries out until nearly midnight of the day before.

William Bowers reported that he could have sold several times his Easter stock if he could have obtained a supply.

Miss Ellen O'Connor said Easter was the biggest day ever.

Philip Lavery, for many years with James Canning and later with T. O'Connor, but now in charge of the greenhouses at Wallum Lake, was in the city last week.

The Newport Nursery Co. has added a large two-ton automobile truck to its delivery department.

Alexander H. Johnston, with George Johnson & Son, is one of the principals in the formation of a state branch of the American Legion, an organization of veterans of the world war.

C. Warburton, of Fall River, Mass., was a business visitor in this city last week. W. H. M.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Adgate & Son, of Warren, O., express satisfaction with the progress of business. The death of several prominent citizens has called for much floral work of the highest order. Prospects for Easter, both in stock and inquiry, augur well.

* * * *

E. R. Fry, of Rochester, N. Y., reports that business is excellent and prospects for the spring business are most encouraging. His store is well filled with a large variety of blooming plants, which have been selling well during the last few weeks.

* * * *

"The Posey Shop of G. W. Haas & Son" is the sign upon the recently acquired store at Meadville, Pa., which is the converted lower front of a residence, in an ideal location next the post-office. A double-fronted window was put in, allowing for good display. A mantel in the parlor is utilized for decorations and even mock weddings among the collegians are among the possibilities to boost the business. "I fully agree with Henry Penn," said Mr. Haas, "in maintaining that our slogan, 'Say It with Flowers,' should be protected and not burlesqued, as, for instance, per this newspaper clipping, headed Milwaukee, which says that the suggestion, 'Say It with Flowers,' wrecked the marital life of Joseph and Barbara Murarik. The former averred, in his divorce petition, that Barbara had hurled flower pots at him. Possibly the flowers were artificial, but someone in Milwaukee should 'get' that smart reporter."

"We were never so busy on funeral work as of late," observed Henry J. Krueger, of Meadville, Pa. The Krueger family has the deep sympathy of the trade in the loss of Mrs. Stanton, known to her host of friends as "Minnie."

Manager George M. Geraghty, of Dunlop's, Toronto, Can., returned from an eastern trip in time to join in welcoming home a large body of Canadian heroes. Mr. Dunlop prolonged his stay to accompany Mrs. Dunlop on a visit to her old home, in Nashua, N. H. The recognition given by the New York Florists' Club to the new rose, Frank M. Dunlop, named in honor of the junior Dunlop, the aviator, and the entertainment of Mr. Dunlop and Mr. Geraghty, were much enjoyed. J. A. Simmers is importing in almost unlimited quantity this season, anticipating a banner business. As evidence of geographical extent, shipments of garden seed are made to James Bay, situated 640 miles north of Toronto. Manager A. W. Annandale of the Steele-Briggs Seed Co., Ltd., observed that whichever direction the needle of the barometer points, both countries are almost equally affected, so closely are they associated. John Purvis, manager of the William Rennie Co., Ltd., excused himself for a few moments to give personal attention to some important matters, handing me a copy of The Review that had just arrived, with the remark that "it is religiously perused and highly valued by us, as representing the pulse of the trade." MOTHERS' day next.

WITH the scarcity of Manetti stocks, Ophelia is in extra demand, as it is known as one of the roses which do nicely on their own roots.

MONTREAL reports that the telegraph orders double up every holiday. Quite a few in prospect, then, for Mothers' day.

THERE are, perhaps, more calls for Laddie carnation than for any other item of young stock. If it roots well for all who try it next season, there will be something doing after that.

COLUMBIA has done so well for some of the good growers that there is a strong demand for young stock. It will, perhaps, be more widely distributed in its second season, and at better prices, than any other new rose ever has been.

AT the moment there is a big shortage of geraniums, but that is no reason why stock should not come up to the description of it. Growers who have an eye to the future will not send out plants that are not ready.

A POSTER in the window of a flower store, announcing that the proprietor has purchased Victory loan bonds, recommends that establishment to patriotic flower buyers, besides telling them that the florist is a man of forethought and wisdom.

IN a certain large city a department store, in a display advertisement, announced that the usual supply of Easter lilies was not to be had, but expressed the hope that next year would see the concern able to supply customers. Florists have somewhat different ideas on this subject.

THERE always is more or less complaint over the quality of stock, especially at this time of the year, whether it was as described, or was worth the money. But this spring the disputes are far more numerous than usual, because the demand is greater than the supply. The shortage and high prices tempt growers to send out plants which they well know are not what they should be, excusing themselves with the statement, "They're as good as I got from So and So." Such growers will be the first to feel the slump in demand when the country fills up again with stock.

THE cold storage giganteum bulbs appear to have made good.

NEBRASKA carnation is getting belated recognition. There are not many varieties in stronger demand this season.

FLORISTS are not groping in the dark passage of reconstruction, as those in many other lines appear to be doing.

THE sale possibilities in advertising are unlimited and the florist who has not tried it is not the one to condemn it.

CASTING sentiment aside, there is one excellent, though wholly mercenary, reason why florists should buy Victory loan bonds. That reason is summed up in the word "safety."

CHRISTMAS has become the big holiday in the flower business, but this year Easter nearly came back into the premier position. Probably the trade never had cause for greater satisfaction.

IF your Easter business was not up to expectations, which is unlikely, bear in mind that opportunity is only pausing between knocks at your door—Mothers' day and Memorial day are not far in the future.

IT may be true that florists who refused to contribute to community Easter advertisements profited thereby as greatly as those who did contribute, but that would not be considering the worth of the feeling that one had done his part.

THERE is one plantsman who scarcely ever has any stock not spoken for before it is ready. He makes it his rule to destroy all young stock that does not come up to his standard of quality; nothing is grown on and shipped which will not pass critical inspection. Some growers who find more or less cause for complaint with the state of their own profits wonder why this man is so continually prosperous!

IT has been said that under the modern conception of business ethics the old doctrine of caveat emptor will have to go by the board. "Let the buyer beware" was the code of ethics of the old-time horse trader and the vendor of Indian medicines at the county fairs. It has survived too long. Legitimate business is built upon confidence, and confidence cannot exist where the buyer has continually to assume an attitude of suspicion toward the seller.

A RECORD EASTER.

The country over, Easter has made a new record for the trade.

The reports are unanimous; everyone is pleased with the business done. There was a general shortage of stock, but the better prices obtained in nearly all cases compensated for the reduced supply, and then some.

There were more Easter lilies than was thought possible. It appears that the cold storage giganteums, which were regarded as a doubtful speculation in certain quarters, turned out rather better than even the growers hoped. Then there were importations from Canada, which had been more favored in the matter of bringing in bulbs, and cut flowers came from Bermuda. On the whole it seems that more people were deterred by the price than by any difficulty in getting cut lilies. There were not many in pots. Pot roses were never so plentiful and never better. Taking it by and large, there were great quantities of pot plants of one kind or another and they all sold well.

Not in many years have cut flowers sold out so clean and few in the trade can look back to an Easter when prices were so good.

VOICES FROM THE EAST.

The florists in the extreme eastern part of the country, if they have stock they would like to move quickly, would do well to think over this proposition: Possibly the best outlet may be found westward, because all the florists in a locality are pretty sure to be stocked up about the same, so there's less chance to sell to the home folks; indeed, the home folks may all have surpluses and let the stuff spoil while they make fruitless efforts to sell it to each other. They could move it if they looked westward, away from home. Like this:

We are sold up; our ad in The Review did it; it pulls like a mustard plaster.—Hopkins & Hopkins, Chepachet, R. I., April 14, 1919.

Why wouldn't it do the same for you? This much you can be sure of: When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

OUR BUSIEST MONTH.

Unless all signs fail, and they should not, because the dry time does not begin just yet, May will be the busiest month in the history of the florists' business.

A large number of florists do more work in May than in any other month in the year. It is in the sale and planting of bedding stock. It is apparent that the demand this year would far exceed that of any previous season if it were not for the shortage of stock and the higher prices necessarily asked.

With the cut flower people May will be a big month. As soon as we have caught our breath after the Easter rush it is necessary to begin preparations for Mothers' day. No later than the passing of Mothers' day, preparations for Memorial day must be begun.

There is every indication that Mothers' day and Memorial day each will make new records for the trade this year. All the conditions are right for an increase in business.

COSTS STILL GOING UP.

Wage increases averaging about $15 a month for approximately 69,000 employees of the American Railway Express were announced last week by Director General Hines. The increase represents an advance of $25 a month above the wage scale in effect January 1, 1918.

This and other simultaneously announced minor wage orders for railroad employees, which were included in the estimate of $67,500,000 in increases announced in connection with the wage order affecting the four trainmen's and enginemen's brotherhoods several days ago, complete finally the "war cycle" of wage advances, it is said. Future applications for higher pay will be considered in the light of peace time conditions, but will be dealt with by the same agency which threshed out the past wage questions.

It seems certain that further advances in freight, express and passenger rates must be made or else the government will have to make up by taxation a large deficit in its operation of the utilities.

OBITUARY

W. T. League.

A prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., died April 6 in the person of W. T. League, a member of the florists' trade all of his life. The end came suddenly, while Mr. League was working in the office of his establishment on a design for a funeral.

Mr. League was 61 years old, having been born in Hannibal, October 20, 1857. He spent his entire life in the city of his birth and begun his career as a florist when only a boy, by growing flowers in a small greenhouse in the rear of his parents' home.

The deceased's first business venture was made in 1872, when he opened a flower store. In 1885 or 1886 he enlarged this business and at the time of his death was one of the best known florists in northeastern Missouri.

Great interest was taken by Mr. League in church work. He was a member of the Park Methodist Episcopal church, of Hannibal, and for more than twenty-two years was superintendent of the Sunday school of that church. He served on the board of directors of the Hannibal Y. M. C. A.; on the board of directors of the Hannibal Chamber of Commerce from 1911 to 1913, and was on the civic improvement committee. He took an active part in chautauquas which were held at Hannibal and it was he who designed the street illuminations for various outdoor festivals.

Surviving Mr. League are the following: His mother, Mrs. J. H. League; two sisters, Mrs. James E. King and Miss Nettie League; two nieces, Mrs. W. J. Hilland, Miss Virginia Hixson, the latter of Chicago, and a nephew, Kenneth L. King, now in the American army of occupation in Germany. All the relatives reside in Hannibal, with the exception of Miss Hixson.

The funeral was held at the Park Methodist Episcopal church, Hannibal, April 8, and burial was made in Mount Olivet cemetery. A memorial service was held at the Park Methodist church April 13, at which many glowing tributes were paid to the dead florist.

Harlow N. Higinbotham.

It was Harlow N. Higinbotham who financed the Chicago Carnation Co., at Joliet, Ill., and, although the management now is in other hands, the establishment stands on land once part of the Higinbotham country place, still the property of Mr. Higinbotham's children.

In the days when the Higinbotham place was one of the famous ones of the Chicago region, J. D. Thompson was the farm superintendent. It was perhaps twenty years ago that Mr. Thompson induced his employer to build a large, modern range of greenhouses for the growing of carnations under the practical charge of the late James Hartshorne. In the course of time the parties agreed to disagree and Mr. Thompson withdrew and started a carnation growing business under his own name, but which later passed out of his hands and now is being wound up by the bankruptcy court.

With advancing years, Mr. Higinbotham turned the Chicago Carnation Co., including the Chicago wholesale store which had been established under the management of Aaron T. Pyfer, over to his children, of whom there were four. When the greenhouses reached a stage calling for considerable repair, the Higinbotham family, rather than make a necessary additional investment, rented the place to Peterson and associates, who are conducting it under the name of the Chicago Carnation Co. The Chicago store was turned over to A. T. Pyfer & Co., a corporation in which Mr. Pyfer and Miss Nettie Parker, both former Higinbotham employees, hold the chief interests.

For many years Mr. Higinbotham was in close touch with trade affairs, not only in Chicago but through the carnation world. He was a liberal supporter of flower shows during the days when he was active in all the larger affairs of Chicago, where he was at one time counted among the wealthiest citizens.

Mr. Higinbotham was struck by an army automobile on the streets of New York April 18, and died in the United States hospital, which now occupies the Grand Central Palace. He was 81 years of age, born October 10, 1838, on the farm on which the greenhouses stand near Joliet.

Joseph C. Craig.

Joseph C. Craig, a native Chicagoan and engaged in the retail florists' business there since 1874, died April 17, at his home at 738 South Oakley boulevard.

Mr. Craig was 62 years of age. He was only a boy when he began selling flowers in downtown Chicago, having been engaged in that business longer than anyone else now identified with it. He was a member of the Chicago Florists' Club and the Chicago Retail Florists' Association.

Mr. Craig leaves three sons, Joseph A. and Arthur A., who have been associated with their father in the business since boyhood, and Raymond G., who is in France with our army. A daughter, Irene, also survives. Mrs. Craig predeceased him by some years.

The funeral was held April 19, from the residence to the Church of Precious Blood, thence to Mount Carmel cemetery.

The sons will continue the business, now and for some years located at 120 South Wabash avenue.

James M. Buist.

James M. Buist, for nearly forty years a florist in New York, died April 18 at Milford, Pa., in his ninety-fifth year. Mr. Buist was born in Scotland, where he studied for the ministry. He married Miss Euphemia Paterson and, when 25 years old, came to America with his wife. His first and only employment was with Andrew Reid, a florist, who had a shop on Fourteenth street. Upon Mr. Reid's death Mr. Buist bought the business. Successively he owned flower stores at 807 Broadway, 429 Broadway, 691 Broadway and at Broadway and Thirtieth street. He retired several years ago. Mr. Buist's wife died about fifty years ago. His second wife was Miss Catherine Lacey, who died several years ago. He leaves three sons, James M. Buist, Jr.; A. R. Buist and Olyphant Buist, and one daughter, Miss Annie Buist. For several years he had made his home at Milford, Pa.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Business seems to be booming in all parts of the country if one may judge by the mail coming to The Review. Here are extracts from some of this week's letters received in the Classified ad department:

Stop the feverfew ad. The Review can sell anything.—Ernst Manthey, Jr., St. Bernard, O.

Coleus is sold out; the little liners certainly do the work.—J. A. Farnworth & Son, Galion, O.

The ad sold the pansies.—Beaver Avenue Floral Co., Des Moines, Ia.

Please stop my rose geranium advertisement, as I am all sold out.—George B. Morrell, Forrestdale, Pa.

Have sold 86,000 2½-inch roses from our Classified advertisement in the last five weeks; please discontinue ad.—G. M. Reburn & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Please discontinue my advertisement of petunias, as I have sold out for the present.—E. V. Myers, St. Joseph, Mo.

We are sold out of Easter Greeting; please discontinue our Classified ad.—William S. Lohr, Ottawa, Ill.

Please cancel our asparagus advertisement, as it has done its work well.—Berno Floral Co., Orlando, Fla.

Cut out our geranium ad.; also Sprengeri ad. All sold.—Daut Bros., Decatur, Ill.

We are all sold out of snapdragons, verbenas and pelargoniums. Please discontinue our Classified advertisement.—Addems, Morgan & Co., Paxton, Ill.

Entirely sold out of fuchsias; please take out the Classified ad.—Truitt's Greenhouses, Chanute, Kan.

There seems to be a demand for everything that anyone ever grew in a greenhouse.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The Easter business in the Chicago wholesale flower market did not in all cases produce the results which had been expected, but the failure to materialize the record business in individual cases seems to have been due solely to the shortage of stock. It is, of course, a question how much more stock could have been sold without affecting the values, but the general opinion is that large additional quantities might have been sold at the prices asked and that the Easter business fell short of breaking all previous records only because the flowers to beat Christmas were not here. It certainly was the biggest Easter ever known.

In a market as large as the Chicago market has become, with the sales of individual houses running up to $50,000 for the week, it is impossible that every flower should be sold. The market rarely, and certainly not in recent years, has cleaned up so thoroughly as it did last week. The demand was so strong that prices stiffened as the week progressed and the late buyers on Saturday paid higher rates than were charged at any other time during the week. There was not one item on which the market weakened. The shortage was general; it included all the big staple items. While the sales of individual houses in practically every case exceeded the record of last year, they fell slightly below the total for Christmas.

The shortage of lilies and bulbous stock represented a huge hole. The supply of lilies proved to be larger than had been expected. In addition to one or two large and several smaller local lots, considerable quantities of lilies came in from the east and from Canada. But the demand took all those that were not absolutely green, though one or two shipments arrived in the market on Monday. The price of lilies started at $25 per hundred; it was $35 Saturday night. The results for the growers probably were more favorable than

Beauties

THESE are really wonderful Beauties, the finest this market has seen in several years. We have a large and continuous cut in sight, assurance of a supply of these very desirable Beauties for the next two months. We recommend the long and medium grades—the shorts are neither so plentiful nor so good.

While the supply is large, these Beauties sell so fast it is desirable to make your wants known as much in advance as possible. We can fill all orders received early, but not always those received after the day's cut has been apportioned. This is specially the case with the medium lengths.

There was little bulbous stock this Easter and its absence was felt by many. Violets, too, were a minus quantity.

The shipping orders called for many thousands of roses more than it was possible to supply. Naturally the prices advanced; either a higher rate was charged or a shorter grade was sent, but it was impossible to fill all the orders; the late out-of-town buyers got nothing and the city buyers, unless they had placed orders in advance, had trouble locating the flowers they needed. Beauties probably never sold better for Easter. Russell was first in popularity of other roses, but Columbia would have disputed for first place had the supply been larger.

Of the principal flowers, the carnation fared best for Easter. It had been the general opinion that the supply was going to be short, but it proved even shorter, in proportion to the demand, than had been expected. Not that there were no carnations, because there were many, many thousands, but the demand was so strong that it carried the prices above what the wholesalers had figured carnations would be worth. Practically throughout the week carnations were selling above the prices quoted in advance.

Sweet peas may be classed as the most abundant item, in proportion to normal supplies. Huge quantities came in and went out as rapidly as they arrived. The prices were the best ever obtained at Easter. The stock was fine.

In view of the shortage of other flowers, all the miscellaneous items sold well and some of the wholesalers closed Saturday night without a flower in the place. A sharp shortage in orchids developed and one house reports selling a considerable number of Cattleya Mossiæ at $1.25, $1.50 and even $2 apiece. Three houses only were open Sunday morning, which constitutes another record for Easter.

The current week opened with light supplies and a big run of shipping orders; also, all the city buyers were back in the market. The evidence was that everybody had cleaned out thoroughly for Easter and had to buy stock to go on doing business. Receipts were light and prices had receded scarcely any from the Easter level. Probably the market never was in better shape the day after Easter. Of course some recession in prices is expected as soon as cuts get under way again.

Easter With the Retailers.

There is some difference in the Easter stories told by the retailers, accounted for, apparently, by the character of their everyday trade. It seems that the stores which cater to well-to-do people never had a better Easter business, the higher prices fully compensating for some reduction in the quantity of stock handled, while stores which normally do the bulk of their Easter business on 50-cent and dollar plants had little to sell this time and were hard put to it to make the usual total and profit. The stores never sold out closer and on the whole the Easter business may be classed as excellent.

Some stores had a few lilies in pots, others none at all. Retail prices varied from 50 cents to $1 per bud. The shortage of lilies did not handicap the better class of stores even a little. Mrs. Walter Adams voiced the general report when she said, "We sell them something else instead; perhaps a rose plant at $5 to $10 instead of the usual lily at $2 to $5." The roses were never better and never constituted so large a part of the stock. The best and most numerous were Dorothy Perkins, although many other varieties were seen. Roses were to be had at from $2 up and it was a common report that the larger plants sold out first. The prices, which usually included a pot cover and a bit of ribbon, usually were two or two and one-half, occasionally three times what the grower received. Second in line was the French hydrangea. Blue was striking, but did not seem to be a popular Easter color. The larger rhododendrons sold quickly in the better stores, but of course there were not many. What bulbous stock there was sold quickly at excellent prices and all the miscellaneous pot plants went well. It was commented on in several large stores that the call came earlier than usual and that earlier deliveries were wanted; large numbers of plants were delivered on Good Friday.

Saturday, April 19, because of warm, bright weather following a week of cold rain, was perhaps the biggest day Chicago flower stores ever have experienced. They were thronged from early morning until late at night. After the last plants were sold, cut flowers were pushed and a big business done. The retail prices of cut flowers, because of the limited variety, were considerably above those of recent years; it usually amounted to the customer spending a little more than usual and getting a little less than at other Easters.

The Sunday morning corsage business was large in the outlying stores and on the whole the retailers are well satisfied with the results obtained.

The Victory Loan.

L. R. Bohannon, chairman of the Florists' Trade Committee, and A. R. Merrick, secretary, opened headquarters at the store of the A. L. Randall Co., April 21, for the Victory loan drive. The corner display room was set aside for the purpose, affording excellent accommodations.

The prospects are not at all encouraging. If the members of the trade do not get back of the committee with good subscriptions, the florists' trade will fall down most disgracefully on this loan. One of the greatest difficulties encountered is the disposition of the suburban florists to make their subscriptions through their town organizations instead of through the florists' committee. This cuts off a large number of growers, some of those best able to take up this loan. It puts a tripled burden on the city florists, the average size of the retailer's abilities being below the average grower's abilities to subscribe at this time.

James Hancock is giving his time to the work of the committee and is calling on members of the trade who have not been heard from at headquarters.

It is earnestly hoped that everyone in the trade will support the committee with subscriptions, because it will not be to the trade's credit to fail to take up its quota.

Various Notes.

The passing of "Joe" Craig, which occurred during the Easter rush, removes another oldest florist. It is said he had been selling flowers in downtown Chicago for forty-five years, a longer time than any other man now in the trade. The business will be continued by the sons.

E. Wienhoeber missed the Easter rush for the first time in his many years in the business. He had been suffering with a severe cold for some time and had been worrying over Mrs. Wienhoeber's continued illness, with the result that he became worn out and did not come to the store after April 14. In addition to an unusually good Easter business, the younger men were called on to handle a large funeral order for the McCormick family, and worked April 17 until 2 a. m., as a starter for the three days' rush. With its advantage of a range of glass at the rear, this store flowered its own bulbous stock with much success, having probably the largest supply in town.

Farmer Samuelson arrived home April 12, spent the Easter week at the store and has gone back to Idaho. He says he never knew the big conservatoryful of plants, principally roses, to sell out so early or at such good prices and that the business was excellent in every way, but he likes farming better, after thirty years of Michigan boulevard. Ninety acres of the Snake river farms under his management were in apples, but late frosts hit them season after season and he is pulling the orchards out, planting wheat and oats. Only about thirty-five acres of apples remain. He looks as though the open air life agrees with him. He is able to enjoy it, with the store in the capable hands of Mrs. Samuelson and Ed. Enders.

To assist in the Easter rush, Edward Mallinson, of the Fleischman Floral Co., had the assistance of two expert salesmen, I. Rosnosky, loaned by the W. W. Barnard Co., and H. A. Woolf, loaned by the Chicago Flower Growers' Association. There were some excellent pot lilies here, Frank Oechslin's stock, but Dorothy Perkins and Tausendschoen roses and French hydrangeas constituted the bulk of the stock. These were unusually good. The cut flower business exceeded all since-the-war records.

J. Wall, who has been in the business on North Springfield avenue since 1889, several years ago ran across a red geranium different from any of the standard varieties and, he thinks, better. He has worked up a stock of about 2,000 plants, which he expects to distribute this summer.

Hotel La Salle has a not large but most attractive flower store. The La Salle was the first Chicago hotel to go into the florists' business, without a show room, and now is the first to open a sure-enough flower store. Edward Boyar, the director, is not a florist, but employs professional help. With the hotel's own work as a starter and the certainty of a fine corsage trade, the store should prove a good investment for the company.

The carnation growers are starting one of their heavy tasks, that of planting the young stock in the field. Peter J. Schumer, who is one of the oldest growers in the Evanston district, says he always undertakes to start his field planting April 20, but this year it was April 22 before he got at it, Easter coming so unusually late.

Eric Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., says that to him the best feature of the Easter business was the way the buyers came back April 21. In the fact that there was an unusually heavy shipping trade, and that all the local buyers were heard from, he sees evidence that all the retailers sold out on their Easter purchases.

A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., feels that the conditions are turning strongly in favor of the American importing houses which take advantage of the opportunity now presented. He says that his concern is doing much the largest business in its history and has a big bulb season ahead.

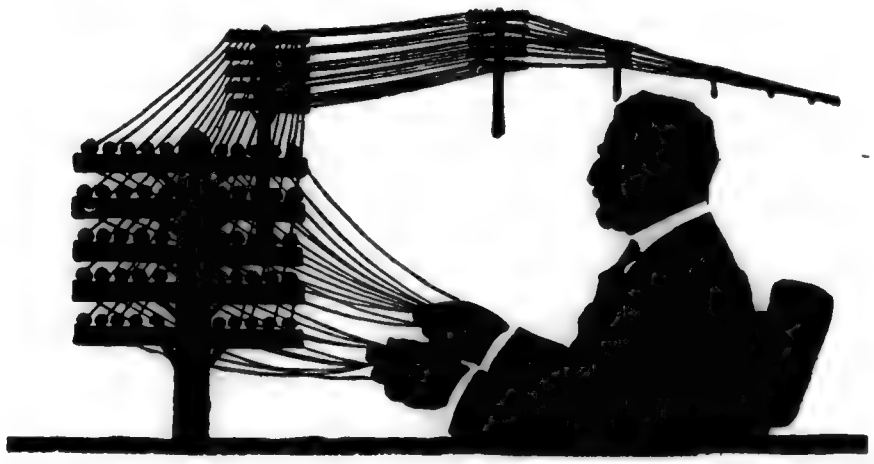
Last week afforded the largest total of sales of any week in the history of the E. C. Amling Co., exceeding not only all previous Easters, but Christmas as well. It was Sam Pearce's lilies which did it.

In the early hours of Easter morning the police arrested four men on Paul Klingsporn's Moline-Knight, stolen from his garage eight days previously. It was at Forty-eighth and Halsted streets, with the tires flat, badly cut and the whole new car showing the effects of hard usage. Mr. Klingsporn was fully insured, but regrets the abuse of a machine which was giving perfect service.

The A. L. Randall Co., holding a lease on the third floor of the Lemoyne building, has sublet the south half to a tenant outside the trade and is fitting up the north half, a room 115x170, as a display room for the willow furniture, fountain, artificial flower and other departments not exclusively for florists. A private stairway is being put in to connect the third floor with the second, making the new show room seem much closer than when the public stairway or elevators were relied on. The change will provide space on the second floor for the enlargement of the departments catering only to florists, also for the steadily growing office force.



In a few days there probably will be large quantities of indoor gladioli on the market, as dozens of growers planted them in empty spaces, but Weiland-Risch Co., at the Evanston greenhouses, were the first to begin cutting, so far as heard from. They had a nice lot for Easter and did well with them.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association got its big new basement shipping room into operation in time to be of great service in handling the Easter trade, which is reported to have doubled last year's record. There is a fine new storage refrigerator, 9x20, in the shipping department and it is planned to make the place a model of its kind. The room doubles the floor space the association used.

Some of the best lilies that came to this market were from the Dale Estate, Brampton. They appeared to be from the 1918 crop of giganteum bulbs, which were refused admission to this country but not to Canada.

It must be that Frank Oechslin had his best Easter. His stock seemed to be in every good store in town, indicating that he had a large supply, and the roses were so near perfect that it will be difficult ever to have better. It is intimated that he did not fail to appreciate their value and the light competition.

Since the last holiday, Christmas, the Jegen store has moved from the middle of the block on North State street to the next corner south at Elm street. The better show windows and the generally improved facilities were reflected in the best business on record. One block north is Walter Adams, who made a fine show, especially of roses, and half a block east is Wienhoeber's, so that this fine neighborhood is well supplied with flowers.

John T. Muir had Joe Beaver as an extra hand for the Easter rush and will hold him through May, which is expected to be a busier month than has yet been experienced at the Grand boulevard store. Mr. Muir sent east for some of his Easter plants and obtained fine stock. There was no trouble in selling good pot lilies at prices that averaged close to $1 per flower.

The Easter shipping rush at Bassett & Washburn's was an increase of twenty-five to thirty-three per cent over last year. Russells were the largest sellers, but everything went well.

Peter Reinberg, Democrat, is one of two vice-presidents of the Roosevelt Memorial Association, which will raise $250,000 for the purpose of erecting a portrait statue of the ex-president in front of the new Field Museum. The association also will urge the city to rename Twelfth street as Roosevelt road and then try to get other communities to carry it westward from the Chicago city limits.

The Market.

Easter, 1919, is now a thing of the past, but will long be remembered by the florists here as the greatest Easter in the history of the local trade.

The weather, which was rainy and disagreeable Wednesday and Thursday, cleared Friday and Saturday, and the flower stores were crowded with buyers. There were several showers on Easter Sunday, but the sun came out enough to stimulate the sale of flowers for corsages.

Cut flowers and plants had an equally heavy demand, but this was probably because of the shortage in the supply of blooming plants. Easter lily plants were entirely sold out Saturday. These sold for 50 cents per bloom. Cut lilies were extremely scarce, but callas were plentiful.

Hydrangeas and rambler roses took the lead in plants. Some handsome hydrangeas were on the market and retailed for $3 to $6 each. Dwarf rambler roses brought $3 to $5 each and climbing ramblers sold for $6 to $10 each. Spiræas and deutzias sold for $3.50 to $5 each. Fine calceolarias, cinerarias, begonias, marguerites, yellow daisies, Martha Washington geraniums, Easter Greetings, heather plants and bulbous stock, including tulips and hyacinths, were in the variety of offerings in plants.

In cut flowers, almost every variety was equal to the demand, with the exception of orchids and carnations. Some fine Cattleya Mossiæ were on the market, but the demand was much greater than the supply. Carnations retailed for $2 per dozen. Roses in general ranged from $2 to $6, while Columbia and Russell sold for $5 to $8 per dozen. Snapdragons were leaders on the cut flower market. They were of handsome proportions and retailed for $2 to $4 per dozen. Double violets sold at $3 per hundred. They were rather scarce and of only mediocre quality.

Sweet peas were in excellent demand for corsage work and were the most popular flower for this purpose. Lilies of the valley, tulips, jonquils, forget-me-nots, sweet alyssum, yellow daisies and other small flowers were in good demand for corsages.

Spring flower bunches had a splendid call.

The Fort Wayne Florists' Club used coöperative advertising for Easter and many firms independently advertised in the daily papers. Mothers' day stickers were used on all Easter packages by some of the florists.

A large amount of corsage work is booked for this week for the various dances and other social affairs, and decorations are causing a good demand for flowers.

Various Notes.

Miss Margaret Vesey, who has conducted the Hostess House at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., during the last year, will leave soon for overseas, to take up Y. M. C. A. work in France. Miss Vesey spent Easter in this city with her father, Judge W. J. Vesey, and family.

A fine lot of Cattleya Mossiæ was cut at the Vesey greenhouses for Easter, but not nearly enough, by thousands, to supply the demand. Calceolaria plants also were specialized in by this firm, as well as several varieties of roses.

George W. Doswell & Son report the biggest Easter in their history. They were sold out to the last plant, but had plenty of cut flowers. This firm advertised special Easter corsages and had a good business in this branch of the trade.

E. C. Wenninghoff reports Easter trade unusually good. His lilies were sold out Saturday. Hydrangeas and rambler roses took the lead at Wenninghoff's and there was a heavy demand for corsage and Easter novelties.

Marguerites and the larger plants went well at the store of the Flick Floral Co. This firm had some handsome hydrangeas and Baby Rambler roses.

A. J. Lanternier & Sons report that they were all sold out Easter.

The Freese Floral Co. sold everything in sight for Easter. The call for cut flowers and blooming plants was about equal here.

Mrs. Clara Shoaff, recently one of the force of the Freese Floral Co., is leaving this week for Washington, D. C., where she will reside permanently with her daughter, Miss Kate Shoaff, who has a government position in that city.

Sweet peas were picked by the thousands at the greenhouses of the New Haven Floral Co. for the Easter trade. Carnations and roses were in fine supply for the holidays. R. F. B.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The weather during the first half of the week was decidedly discouraging. First there was a scorching sun, then heavy clouds and rain, followed by a period of cold. This was not at all helpful to the many Easter plants, including a fair quantity of Easter lilies that were almost ready to open. However, practically everything that was in bloom was sold, no matter in what condition it was. In some greenhouses the fierce, hot sun burned many of the hydrangeas. According to several of the large growers, there never has been such a general clearance at Easter as this year.

The cut flower trade was up to its usual standard, good stock being offered. Violets were the poorest flowers seen, but they sold well and in most cases brought $1.50 per hundred. Sweet peas were in splendid shape and in fair supply. Many more could have been sold if they could have been obtained.

There was an excellent supply of roses in all grades and varieties, each bringing holiday prices.

On account of the lateness of Easter, the bulbous stock was not in good shape, this being especially true of hyacinths, which were extremely tall and soft.

Callas are fairly plentiful and are being used in funeral sprays and church decorations. Extra good snapdragon is seen and is found useful for basket work and sprays.

A quantity of bulbous stock continues to arrive. This includes Paper Whites, tulips, Romans, narcissi, jonquils, daffodils and freesias, all of which move well. There also are daisies, pansies, forget-me-nots, mignonette, anemones, wallflowers, stocks, deutzias and primulas.

The stores were well filled before Easter with a large assortment of potted plants, which included bulbous stock, hydrangeas, rambler roses, genistas, rhododendrons, azaleas, pelargoniums, marguerites, cinerarias and calceolarias. An enormous number of baskets, filled with blooming plants, were sold by all florists.

Various Notes.

J. B. Keller Sons had an advanced showing of nearly all sizes of Easter baskets and novelties during the first part of the week. These were well arranged in a window and undoubtedly brought considerable business.

A miniature Victory garden is seen in the window of Hart & Vick, Inc., in which many different kinds of seeds are planted. Small shrubs and stone walks help to make the display more realistic. They report good sales this season.

Several returned soldiers who have knowledge of the florists' business were given employment during the holiday rush.

H. E. Wilson had a fine lot of highly colored calceolarias in bloom for Easter. These proved to be quite popular. Mr. Wilson had a good stock of blooming plants on hand, all of which were sold, leaving the greenhouses looking rather empty. The bedding stock, which is large, is also in good shape.

Visitors this week included Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Baker, of Warsaw, N. Y., and Walter L. Wright, of Shortsville, N. Y.

Now that Easter is over, the greenhouse men will at once begin to prepare for the next big rush—that of supplying bedding stock for the spring. It is the general opinion that this stock will be scarce here. H. J. H.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Those who had confidence in their profession and went ahead have reason to feel satisfied with Easter, 1919. It was a wonderful Easter, this first post-war Easter, an Easter when the demand at advanced prices greatly exceeded the supply. The advance in prices was more marked in plants than in cut flowers. Those who felt that plants were worth what was asked for them obtained the higher prices without much difficulty. The chief obstacle lay in the sellers themselves; they have become so accustomed to the lower price scale that it is hard for them to realize that self-preservation demands this change.

Despite every effort on the part of the growers, there were fully one-third less blooming plants than last season and not much over one-half the quantity of cut flowers. This reduction, principally due to government restrictions on account of the war, was greater in the case of cut flowers because of the week of cold, stormy weather that preceded Easter, which nobody expected. For plants this weather was a godsend; for cut flowers it certainly was not.

The retailers bought with freedom, confident that people's hearts were warm; that there was good fellowship in the air. Most of them have no reason for regret. Mistakes were made; mistakes always will be made. Those who invested in overripe blooming plants, or in blooming plants that were too green, wish they had not. The great majority, however, tell you that they have not a plant left and could have sold more, or that they are anxious to show you their empty showrooms and conservatories. They could not get enough cut flowers.

The hydrangea and the rose vied with each other for the honor of Easter plant leadership. As one of them must be considered before the other, it is probable that the hydrangea would have the most votes. France has placed the hydrangea where it stands today. Some half dozen of the French varieties are so fine that they all have many admirers. They have grown wonderfully well, giving a wealth of bloom which, with their compact, symmetrical form, make them appear to be especially good value. Their colors are exquisitely soft and delicate. Taking a 6-inch pot as the basis of prices, they range from $1 to $2.50 each, according to the number of blooms. There were sales in quantity at lower prices.

There were many varieties of roses flowered for Easter. They were much more difficult to time than were the hydrangeas. There were instances of overripeness and even of greenness, though the latter were rare. The Wichuraiana type still leads. Tausendschoen is the favorite. The Baby Rambler class comes next, then the hybrids and the hybrid teas. There was a good assortment of sizes. Well grown and well flowered 6-inch stock ranged from $1.50 to $3.50 each.

With the hydrangea and the rose as mainstays, the other Easter blooming plants were usually in smaller quantities, to lend variety. There was a surprisingly large number of lilies. They had their friends, though the public generally thought them pretty high in price. The lilies of the giganteum type, from the islands of the Azores, were the best. The wholesale price was from 25 cents to 35 cents for each bloom or bud, each about as long as your forefinger. Astilbe japonica and spiræas, the latter mostly Gladstone, 6-inch, were $1 to $1.50 each. Chrysanthemum frutescens and Paris daisies were 50 cents, 75 cents and $1 each, in 6-inch pots, at wholesale. There were decidedly more cinerarias than ordinarily seen at Easter. Good plants in 6-inch pots brought 75 cents to $1 each.

Without the Japanese variety, Hinodigiri, the azalea would not have amounted to much. Well grown plants of this bright-colored variety brought from $2 to $3 apiece, in 6-inch pots.

The lovely blue novelty, Delphinium Belladonna, brought from $1 to $2 for 6-inch. Genistas, callas, deutzias, bougainvilleas, rhododendrons, primulas, amaryllis and ericas were offered, generally in smaller numbers.

There were fewer bulbs forced, or, it would be more accurate to say, retarded, than in former years. Hyacinths were the mainstays. Usually the retailer grew these, so that the trading in them was light at wholesale. A well grown Dutch hyacinth in a pot retailed at 50 cents—a big advance over former years.

The weather upset all calculations on cut flowers. The week opened with lowering clouds, continued with heavy rain, and closed beautifully clear. It was unseasonably cold throughout. The effect was startling. Prices were weak at the opening. They grew steadily stronger as the days passed and closed, after all the shipping was over, stronger than at any time. There was excellent business. With only a light supply, carnations started at 6 cents for the best. They advanced to 8, 10, 12 cents and even higher for a few extra choice. Sweet peas brought 60 cents a hundred for the shorts up to $3 per hundred, and even a point more, for show stock.

Lindley Florist Box Co. "Quality Box Makers" Marion, Ind.

The peas that were $2 to $3 were most in demand. Easter lilies brought from $25 to $35 per hundred, with callas about the same. The market held well on the top figures for good stock. A few cattleyas brought $1 each; many more sold for $1.20 each. The market certainly needs an Easter blooming orchid. Valley at $10 to $12 per hundred gave out early. Lilac was all ordered in advance. Emperor daffodils brought $8 a hundred and were soon gone. Gardenias experienced their first real popularity of the season, thanks to the Easter corsage bouquet. They brought $6 to $7.50 per dozen, when good.

There were a few double violets at $1.50 per hundred. The miscellaneous flowers were notable for their scarcity. Snapdragons were the only exception to this rule. Roses were a big help to the cut flower market. The shorts, particularly, were most useful in making up the ever popular corsage bunch that every fellow sends his best girl at Easter. There were not many roses, as was confidently predicted, but there were enough of them to save many an order that might have been lost without them. There was a fair supply of Asparagus plumosus sprays. Smilax was scarce.

The Easter market report is incomplete without a few lines about baskets. The handle basket is simply invaluable at this time. It affords opportunity for endless variety in color combination, in which every florist delights. The small basket of hyacinths or tulips with ferns that the cash buyer can carry away, the medium-sized or large basket or hamper, elaborately filled, that may be sent as a gift with a card to some fastidious friend, all have their field of usefulness. The basket for cut flowers, too, is popular. The use of baskets increased enormously this season.

Over the Top.

Robert A. Craig snatched a few moments just before Easter to talk of the plant business. The Robert Craig Co. is the largest grower of Easter plants near Philadelphia. "Our Easter," Mr. Craig said, "has exceeded our expectations. It is the best Easter we have ever had. We have gone over the top. I would like you to look at the way the potters have followed up the packers this season. With Easter so late, it is important to lose no time in getting our spring stock potted. Already we have three houses of geraniums potted up. Some of them will be ready in another week."

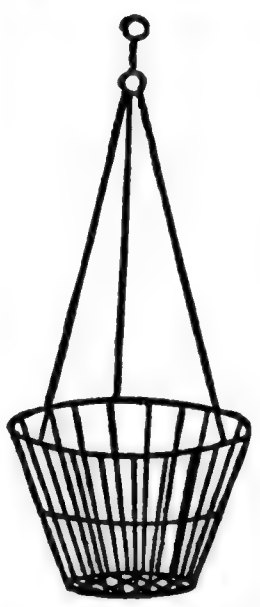
The Big Plunge.

The street has shown keen interest in the result of the 100,000 lily venture of Alfred M. Campbell at the Strafford Flower Farm. Inquiry at Mr. Campbell's city salesroom elicited the information from Martin Gannon that it had come out all right. Mr. Gannon added that most of the lilies had flowered in time and that the orders from out of town and in town had kept the cut moving satisfactorily.

Basket Orders.

H. Bayersdorfer wishes to call attention to the changed conditions in the filling of basket orders. When the stock was all imported it was only necessary to go to the stock room, pick out and pack an order. Now that baskets are made in the factory, it is often necessary to make the baskets especially for an order. At times the demand gets ahead of the supply on certain styles and sizes, and this causes delay.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer calls attention to a novelty of three weeks ago. It consists of a tiny cut flower vase, basket-covered, fastened on the end of a stake. One or two of these basket-covered vases, stuck in a pot of fern or in a hamper of plants, make possible the addition of a few flowers for effect.



Various Notes.

William Berger has sold his property in the rear of the store occupied by William Berger's Sons. The greenhouses thereon have been purchased by Victor Groshens, presumably for erection on his place at Glenside. This sale does not affect the flower store and conservatory of William Berger's Sons, the greenhouses and store being separate enterprises.

George Burton considers Mrs. Charles Russell one of the best roses in commerce today.

George F. Christie, the well-known grower, of Clifton, Pa., died recently, William Berger's Sons had an immense stock of Easter plants that were all sold.

Club members wonder whether the new rose, Hugonis, is named after the hard-working chairman of their club room committee.

William Donaghy, manager of the West Laurel Hill cemetery greenhouses, had a splendidly flowered lot of Azores lilies. These were tall, but required no staking.

Mrs. H. J. Claus had her pavement filled with hyacinths on Easter eve. They were Henry Claus' especial pride. That night they were all gone. No, they were not stolen.

Harry Fritz was the champion member-getter for the Florists' Club at the recent meeting.

Harry S. Betz had sold every Easter plant in his stock April 18. Phil.

The Market.

Stock is in fair supply, even though cyclonic Easter has just passed through, sweeping everything available away.

At this time of the year there always seems to be a greater variance in quality than at other seasons. There are those who planted early and those who planted later, so some crops are giving out, while others are in their prime. Stock runs all the way from poor to good and prices range accordingly.

Carnations range from $3 to $6 per hundred. Roses are ample at $3 and up per hundred. Good, bad and indifferent sweet peas have prices in accordance with grade. Blooms from old plants are not bringing much, while long-stemmed younger stock is in good demand at higher prices.

Snapdragons are conspicuous and are of good quality. These are in pink, yellow and white. A limited number of Spanish irises are available. Small flowers are greatly in evidence and include sweet peas, pansies, calendulas, centaureas, daisies, mignonette and marguerites.

Bulbous stock is practically at an end. Hydrangeas, begonias, pansies, rose bushes and a few genistas are practically the only available potted plants now.

As was anticipated, Easter business was overwhelming. Stock was a little more plentiful than had been expected, but was not adequate to the demand.

Easter lilies were scarce and the public clamored for them. When substitutes were suggested, the reply was usually the same, an outburst of disappointment. There were some, however, who preferred the other potted bulbous stock and that was sold out early. Hyacinths, jonquils, tulips and daffodils were available, but only in limited supply. Hydrangeas, rose bushes, begonias, genistas and pots of pansies also were greatly in favor.

Cut flowers were more ample than had been expected, but were insufficient. Corsage bouquets were made by scores and every available bloom was used. Roses, peas, daisies, pansies, calendulas, centaureas, irises, snapdragons, etc., were sought for this work. The carnation, as usual, had a place of its own and the fact that none was left describes its popularity.

Prices everywhere were high. Easter lilies were bringing 35 cents each, wholesale, for bud or bloom, the highest price ever obtained. Sweet peas were retailing at $2.50 per hundred. Carnations and roses were correspondingly high.

Various Notes.

Easter busines. was so rushing that the Circle Flower Store was forced to close from noon to 5 o'clock the day before Easter, being completely covered up with business. After 5 o'clock the store was reopened and was completely sold out Sunday. The store had an attractive Easter decoration for the Circle theater.

Baur & Steinkamp have excellent carnations and snapdragons. These will be in full crop Mothers' day.

Arthur S. Pett, of Crawfordsville, Ind., was a visitor here last week.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. says this Easter's business set a record for the firm. An unusual quantity of stock was sold out clean by this firm.

The A. Wiegand's Sons Co. had a maximum business the day before Easter, doing over $2,000 worth of business in less than eight hours. This firm has an entirely new delivery outfit, consisting of six new trucks.

Clarence R. Greene's flower store was sold out and Mr. Greene was compelled to close down late in the afternoon of the day preceding Easter. E. E. T.

After Easter, what? Easter needs exceptionally little advertising, as so much is done for nothing. Some may be anxious to know how much the florists would have paid for the front page of the Saturday Evening Post of April 19, had the opportunity been offered them. Our promotion bureau is inclined to take this page as a courtesy, for it surely speaks volumes. Some of us may remember that this same journal refused our application for a page in one of its spring issues, for the reason that the pressure upon its productive capacity was so great that it could not increase its bookings without overrunning its capacity for production. We considered this to be rather unfortunate. But who shall say that the cover page we have referred to does not convey the message of our slogan, "Say It with Flowers"?

Now, after Easter, will come our main spring effort to put flowers in the public mind. A magazine circulation of many millions will carry our messages. The public will see our color page in seven leading magazines, featuring "Flowers Make a Brighter Business Day." Other magazines will feature, in large space, "How Flowers Beautify the Table" and "Just As a Sign That You Haven't Forgot," advertisements which make an appeal and carry a punch such as is out at them from their favorite magazines, from the florists' windows—that is to say, from the windows of live florists—from the columns of local papers, and stares at them from the sides of the delivery cars of all progressive florists. We will see to it that this slogan intrudes still further, but more money is required to accomplish this.

Now, Mr. Nonsubscriber, are you seriously considering what all this means to you? Are you content to stand apart from your brother florists and say: "This does not apply to me; I am well known, and business will come to me just the same"? In our minds' eye we can see you just that way. But who creates the business for which you lie in wait? Do you create anything yourself? Do you not think it is up to you to do a little creating? Can you do it better than by contributing to our national publicity campaign fund?

If you have followed the little articles which we have written, and which your trade paper has published for so many months, you surely must have seen the wisdom of creating business. To increase the demand for flowers is the sole object of this campaign. It is being attained and it is fair to suppose that your business is being benefited in the attainment. Come now, put on your glasses and take a man's broad view of the situation. If you will do this, we are sure you will support the campaign to the extent you think proper, and we are waiting to hear from you.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

The Easter trade was taken care of comfortably. Roses of all varieties and grades were fairly plentiful and sold at wholesale all the way from $8 to $25 and $30 per hundred. This rate, of course, did not apply to Columbias and Russells, which were priced at $40. Easter lilies were just $5 less, being rated at $35. Carnations and orchids were the only two really weak spots in the market and no retailer could get enough of either. Carnations were $10 per hundred, while orchids ranged from $12 to $15 per dozen. Yellow daisies were $3 and $4. Tulips were $4 and $5, while daffodils were about $4 straight.

Violets seem to be more popular, their wholesale price being $1.50 per bunch.

With the exception of smilax, there seem to be plenty of greens, which retain their customary price. While the smilax is only 25 cents, the strings are extremely scant.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore P. Langhans have returned from a three weeks' sojourn at Atlantic City, where they went to recover from serious attacks of Spanish influenza. Both returned feeling greatly improved.

Thomas Silverblatt, proprietor of the William Penn hotel flower store, had his Easter headquarters on Smithfield street, and his brother, Harold Silverblatt, was in charge.

The Liberty Nursery Co., which was started about three months ago by Joseph Jones to supplement his Penn avenue establishment, expects to close the place in the near future. E. E. Freeland, who has been in charge, will return to the permanent quarters.

Henry L. Blind is in Pittsburgh, having completed an exceptionally successful two months' trip for the McCallum Co. through the Great Lakes district. The McCallum Co. recently purchased a two-ton truck for coal. It was driven from the factory in Akron, O., by J. C. Walley. This firm has added a telephone exchange to its office equipment. Some exceptionally fine pansies were seen there a few days ago.

William A. Clarke and James J. Higgins have purchased pleasure automobiles.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, as usual, had a charming Easter window display this year. The basis of the floor decoration was gilded and plain oblong baskets of exquisite blooms. Cibotium ferns of enormous growth formed an attractive background for a table and standards of blossoming plants. Seemingly dominating the ensemble from above were pink and red roses.

Randolph & McClements, it goes without saying, were up to their usual standard of fine window decorating. Their window of cut flowers was perhaps more conservative than usual, the background of cibotium ferns, with beautiful baskets on pedestals, giving an impression of real elegance, subdued to the artistic. The whole was screened from the store proper by flowering dogwood and bamboo, the latter also appearing on the sides of the glass, as if on guard duty

The Market.

Stock was as plentiful during the week preceding Easter as could be expected in a market that is compelled to depend largely for its supply on distant shippers, already taxed to meet the demands of buyers more fortunately situated in this respect. The demand for flowers this Easter has seldom, if ever, been equaled and retail prices, of course, were all the dealers could ask. The growers here who could contribute anything of importance, either for their own retail business or for other retailers, reaped a correspondingly substantial reward.

The Easter market this year was a fair sample of conditions prevailing in New Orleans whenever there is a special demand for flowers. The blooms relied on for the occasion, with the exception of sweet peas, were largely stock shipped from northern and eastern markets. There has been a good production of lilies, callas, roses, daisies and asparagus, yet these, with the peas, constituted probably not over ten per cent of the stock that was disposed of to retail buyers.

will supply the budding stock for the propagation of its species. The owners of the tree have placed a steel cage around it, this being equipped with a burglar alarm system, and the former owner has been employed to give it full protection. E. E. S.

Sweet peas, grown in open ground, were fairly satisfactory in quantity and high in quality. White, lavender and pink were the shades in demand and an unusually fine standard was obtained. Wholesale prices ranged from $1 to $1.50 per hundred, with retail prices from $1.50 to $2.

The supply of lilies was extremely limited and the output of the Creole lilies unsatisfactory, in part because of the shortage of bulbs and the lateness of Easter this year. The conviction is growing, however, that in the future the lily market here must depend more on the Creole lily, which brought $6 per dozen this year.

The local lily crop this season is about a third of normal. Of the total stock on the market, probably half is from northern growers. Wholesale prices are $25 to $30 per hundred, practically double what has been obtained in former seasons.

Stocks of asparagus were adequate. About eighty per cent of the requirements are supplied from Florida. The general experience with this popular decorative plant is that it may be grown profitably in the open, preferably under slats, from the end of February to the beginning of December, but the extra greenhouse space and expense for the remainder of the year would not be justified by the returns that would be obtained.

Aside from the specific requirements of the Easter buyers, there is a brisk demand for almost any showy flower. Pansies, cinerarias, tulips, irises and spiræas, cut or in pots, are especially popular for the less formal social occasions and the less pretentious decorative effects.

Non-flowering pot plants for dinners, receptions, etc., are scarcely less in demand than during the height of the winter social season. Asparagus, arecas and other small palms, rubber plants, aspidistras and Boston ferns are important features of the trade.

The stress of work in most of the stores and greenhouses during the week preceding Easter showed plainly the impetus imparted to regular business by the approaching holiday. Orders for funerals, house decorations, show rooms, hotels, restaurants and club houses, and for churches on Easter day, were of record character. Selections were made from some of the most beautiful stock of callas, tulips, roses, sweet peas and lilies ever seen in New Orleans.

Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was held April 17. The most important matter considered at this meeting was a request from the New Orleans Academy of Sciences that its campaign for the eradication of the Argentine ant be endorsed by the society. The society endorsed the campaign and promised active cooperation with the academy. It is estimated that damage amounting to $4,000,000 has been done by the ant in and near New Orleans.

The poison recommended by the government for the eradication of the ant is one that acts slowly, proving attractive to them at first and causing them to distribute it in effective quantities. E. R. Barber, in charge of the local work of the U. S. Bureau of Entomology, says ants that consumed the poison and died were found systematically piled in "cemeteries." Most important of all, the queens were found dead in such nests.

The Growing Problem.

The preponderance of imported stock on the New Orleans market at Easter time revives the perennial question: "Why cannot New Orleans grow its own flowers?" Here is the view of one of the oldest and most thoroughgoing florists in the city:

ture to reach that firmness and clearness of surface characteristic of flowers more slowly developed in a temperate latitude. If they approximate these qualities, they do not retain them for a sufficient length of time to make them marketable. In other words, what I might term the somewhat artificial perfection obtainable in the higher latitudes, through perfect and systematic cultivation, need not be expected in our southern flowers.

"Of course, we may grow wonderfully beautiful garden flowers in New Orleans, but, needless to say, these have little, if any, commercial value. Greenhouse production might solve the problem, if it were not for the double necessity of providing both artificial heat and artificial cold. Ordinarily, there is no great difficulty or expense in obtaining whatever heat may be necessary in greenhouses, but if to this must be added the refrigeration to prevent too rapid growth, the expense becomes prohibitive."

Various Notes.

Charles Eble is recovering from a serious operation, but is able to supervise in person the handling of his greenhouse problems and the output of his

Fred Ziegler, Jr., is planning an enlargement of his business, especially with reference to the growing of asparagus, rubber plants, aspidistras and arecas for the retail trade, both here and at distant points. In addition he has been particularly successful with his sweet peas and is working out some plans in this respect that may prove a surprise for next winter's holiday season.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; thirty-seventh annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 24, 25, 26, 1919.

It is the general report that flower seeds are selling better than in the last two or three seasons.

In the comments made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, on the alleged failure of the seed trade generally to live up to its war service pledge in the matter of fully labeling agricultural seeds, a thoughtful seedsman may see coming events casting shadows before.

Joseph J. Budlong, Chicago banker, pickle packer and onion set dealer, has been appointed by Governor Lowden, of Illinois, as a member of the reception committee to welcome the Prairie Division, composed of Illinois National Guardsmen, home from France.

SOUTHERN SEEDSMEN.

The meeting of the Southern Seedsmen's Association, to have been held May 19 and 20, at Montgomery, Ala., has been postponed until May 26 and 27.

It was necessary to do this on account of another convention which is to be held in Montgomery on the dates first selected by the seedsmen.

F. S. Love, Sec.-Treas.

"LOOK FOR THE LABEL."

Government Advises Seed Buyers.

"Buy labeled seeds," is urgent advice to farmers from the Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

"No farmer can afford to sow field seeds unless he knows their quality. If he buys clover seed, he should know how much of it will grow and how many weed seeds it contains. If he buys orchard grass seed, he should know how much chaff it contains and how much of the seed is dead. If he buys seed corn, he should know whether it is adapted to his climatic conditions and how much of it may be expected to make plants in the field in a favorable season. If he buys a mixture of alsike clover seed worth $20 per hundred pounds, and timothy seed worth $10 per hundred pounds, he should know what proportion of each the mixture contains, and how much of each kind will grow. If the farmer does not have this kind of information he is not sure of getting a crop, even in the best of soil and with the best of weather conditions. It is not good business to pay the expenses incident to farming operations, including interest, taxes and labor, and run the risk of not getting a stand in the field.

"Many states have laws regulating the sale of farm seeds, restricting the sale of low-grade seed and requiring the seller to make certain statements as to their quality. Many farm seeds are sold by dealers in one state to farmers in nearby states, thus becoming interstate trade and therefore not subject to state law.

What Trade Promised.

"With a view to bringing about some means by which all agricultural seeds passing in commerce might be properly labeled, the Secretary of Agriculture, in the summer of 1917, asked representatives of the seed trade to meet in Washington. It was proposed at this meeting that seedsmen should label all farm seeds sold in lots of ten pounds or more with the percentage of pure seed and the percentage of germination, together with the date of the germination test. The majority of the seed trade agreed to comply with this suggestion, but an investigation by the United States Department of Agriculture shows that it was not generally lived up to. This failure on the part of the seed trade has been called to their attention and the greater number of seedsmen have again announced that they will fully label all agricultural seeds they sell.

"Practically all the large seed houses now have facilities for testing seeds and know the quality of each lot they buy and sell. The seed trade has the information which the farmer needs, and the farmer should insist on being given this information when he buys seeds. Almost invariably the seedsmen make their largest profit on the lowest-grade seed they sell, and the farmer who buys such low-grade seed gets correspondingly poor results in the field. Few farmers are willing to buy low-grade seed containing large proportions of chaff, dirt, weed seeds and dead seeds if it is truthfully labeled showing how poor it is. The farmer's protection lies in buying labeled seeds."

DICKINSON, OF THE AERO SQUAD.

A great many seedsmen have been "up in the air" this season, but Charles Dickinson, of the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, is the only one of them who made his ascension by means of a biplane. Mr. Dickinson, who is 61 years old, made his first flight October 31, 1910. He is president of the Aero Club of Illinois and, although he keeps in close touch with the big seed business of which he is the head, he is more likely to be found at the aviation field than at his desk these spring mornings.

stop flight from Chicago to New York, April 19, Mr. Dickinson was one of the few to see him off on his record-breaking journey. Mr. Dickinson likes to talk things over and was impressed with White's taciturnity. "I was with him all the time he was here," he said, "and I know no more about him than if I hadn't seen him. He's queer. He doesn't talk. He doesn't eat either. He's starting to New York on a bowl of oyster stew and a couple of crackers, and expects to go three times as fast as the Twentieth Century, the fastest train in the United States."

named Nicholson's Notes and is, in the words of the publisher, "a little magazine for seed dealers."

The cover of the publication is in two colors and, in the case of the April issue, carries a bit of philosophy by Berton Braley, entitled, "You'll Get It."

Clever and humorous short stories, interspersed with pithy modern sayings, share with sales talks the body of the pamphlet. The stories are new—not of the almanac variety—and the sales talks are to the point and written in an interesting style.

In the back of the publication is a seed price list, occupying ten pages. This portion is considerably condensed and contains a great deal of information in a limited space. Garden seeds, field seeds and supplies are listed.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Lawrance's Greenhouses, Ogdensburg, N. Y.—A 16-page catalogue of seeds, bulbs, plants, vines and shrubs. As this catalogue is in condensed form, customers are referred to previous issues for fuller descriptions of the stock.

Clarke Bros., Portland, Ore.—"Oregon Roses and Other Beautiful Flowers," an illustrated 64-page catalogue, in a distinctive and tasteful cover, the colors of which are a fine blending of green, black and white. Roses, being the leader, monopolize the first twenty-two pages. Then follow gladioli, shrubs, perennials and other hardy plants, greenhouse plants and flower seeds.

J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C.—Two well designed, accurate, attractive and persuasive books. One of them is a 72-page general catalogue of nursery stock; the other is entitled "Southern Plantings, Home and Orchard," and is a really helpful treatise on how to make the grounds "both fruitful and beautiful." Among the illustrations in the catalogue are several colored plates. The prices do not appear in the body of the catalogue, but are quoted in a 16-page blue insert at the end.

Charles D. Ball, Philadelphia, Pa.—"Wholesale List of Palms and Decorative Plants." Mr. Ball draws attention to the prospect of "a great shortage in the stocks of palms for near-future needs and possibly for a long period."

L. J. Farmer, Pulaski, N. Y.—"Berry Plants and Fruit Growers' Supplies," an illustrated 48-page catalogue. Though berry plants and other fruit-bearing stock seem to be the specialty, the book also offers ornamental nursery stock, roses, perennials, seeds, tools and sundries.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Just before Easter I made a round of the commission houses and retail stores of the city. As I went from place to place, I remembered that on this day, two years ago, while I was on the same errand, I could hear the newsboys crying their "extras," shouting, "War has been declared." During the last two years I have been in close touch with every florist in the city and no one knows better than myself the adversity the members of the trade have been through. However, if one visits these stores today, as I have done, little trace will be found of the effects of war, except in some places where there is a scarcity of familiar stock.

I first stopped at the Florists' Exchange, where I found Mr. Smyth in charge. Mr. Smyth is a thoroughly trained business man, and while flowers are a new venture with him, he is one of the most optimistic men I have ever met. He has no doubt that business methods, applied to the business, will bring results. With associates who are young and hustling, there seems to be no good reason why this should not be the case.

From the Florists' Exchange I went to the establishment of the S. S. Pennock Co., where I found J. J. Perry, who has been through many an Easter rush, directing a corps of clerks. To my question as to cut stock, he replied: "We shall be short on everything except roses. Carnations are especially short and sweet peas none too plentiful." I have never seen a finer lot of valley than the Pennock people had. This was frame-grown by Fred Bauer and he certainly grew it just right. Mr. Perry told me he was getting $8, $10 and $12 per hundred for it.

My next stop was at the store of Samuel Feast & Sons, but it was a day out of the ordinary at this establishment. It was simply impossible to interview any of the heads of the house. For a moment I caught Mrs. Hill's eye, but a shake of the head was the best I could do. This firm had a few of every variety of flower except lilies. Made-up baskets seemed to be the thing depended on for the more expensive sales. These range in price from $15 to $25. I got a chance to ask Mr. Daily about cut stock and he replied that he thought the firm would fare all right in this respect.

I then went over to John Cook's. Never in my life have I seen a finer lot of hydrangeas than was on sale there. This house had some especially fine made-up baskets. One that struck my fancy was filled with cowslips. As is usually done by this firm, a vacant store in the neighborhood had been rented, and as fast as plants were sold they were sent to this store, which was used as a shipping department.

Over at William J. Halliday's there were many fine orchids to be seen. Mr. Halliday said the cut stock was adequate, but that the firm was short on all plants.

Seidewitz Bros. had a fine stock of everything. The made-up maskets were especially fine. This firm makes a specialty of these and never have I seen them arranged in better taste than this year. To an old-timer like the writer, going about these stores, there was little that looked like Easter. The only thing that recalled Easters of the past was the fact that everyone was so busy. When it is all over, in spite of the scarcity of stock, this is going to be one of the greatest Easters in the history of the business.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held April 14. The new officers were all in their places. Professor Auchter, of the Maryland State Agricultural College, delivered an address on the new department of horticulture established by the college. Professor Auchter is a graduate of Cornell and a most practical man—in fact, he made such an impression upon the florists that, at the end of his address, which was more in the nature of a heart-to-heart talk, with many interruptions, he was elected an honorary member of the club. PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

NOVEL ADVERTISING IDEA.

A novel advertising idea was carried out recently by the Minot-Mills Co., of Wenatchee, Wash., by the publication of a four-page supplement to a local newspaper. The supplement was a price list and catalogue.

The Minot-Mills Co. specializes in flowers, but deals in seeds also. The concern has been established seven years, starting with a small greenhouse. It is now operating 45,000 square feet of glass, besides a retail store, the latter in the business section of Wenatchee. The firm is known as one of the most progressive in the northwest.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A look around the retail stores a few days before Easter shows one thing plainly, and that is that the big interest in Easter business has always been the Easter lily and probably always will be. Retailers have done well by buying stock of every kind that they could get, plants or cut flowers, but the fact remains that, without Easter lilies, the Easter enthusiasm cannot be worked up.

Wholesalers shipping out of town have more or less made good on callas, in place of the cut lilies, but, locally, callas are not good sellers and never will be. They are so well known in gardens and yards that the average customer does not see the difference between these flowers and the carefully grown lath-house stock that alone is suitable for shipping. One customer of a well known wholesale house here writes from a southern city that he "was in Los Angeles some years ago and saw callas growing 'wild' and cannot understand why I am charged 8 cents each for Easter." But if some of these "wild" flowers were shipped, the howl that would go up would be heard from coast to coast.

The salvation of the day, from a cut flower point of view, will be roses. Our local growers have never had finer stock, and if cut tight and held just long enough, the flowers will give satisfaction everywhere. Tulips have been scarce and not of as good quality as usual. Dutch and Spanish irises are good and fairly plentiful, being about the most satisfactory of the bulbous stock this year.

Sweet peas are good, but white is scarce. Field carnations, owing to fogs, succeeded by a few hot days, are not up to form, but the greenhouse-grown are better. Orchids have been on the scarce side. Rhododendrons and Ghent azaleas are fairly plentiful, but at present it looks as though the demand would be small at the high price asked.

Ferns are extremely scarce. Greens about equal the demand.

Various Notes.

Alois P. Frey, the well known grower of Crown Point, Ind., left for home April 15. Mr. Frey has purchased ten acres of choice frostless land in the northern part of the San Fernando valley, where he intends to grow freesias. He expects to pay California another visit in August.

Frank Lichtenberg's store, a day or two before Easter, was superbly decorated with roses. Both pot plants and cut flowers were well represented and the pot ramblers were particularly beautiful. Mr. Lichtenberg has just returned from a northern trip.

Purdie & Co. are keeping up their reputation for attractive windows.

Wright's Flower Shop has long had the name of showing fine stock and plenty of it, and the display a few days before Easter well maintains the reputation.

John Gordon, manager of Darling's Flower Shop, looks much better, though as yet he has not regained that rotund appearance about the waist line that he displayed before the "flu" epidemic. The store is one of the most attractive in town and customers appear to be plentiful.

It is a little early to say just how the shipping business will be, but all the wholesalers seem busy, with extra help.

H. R. Richards.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

A more or less hurried trip through the park with John Morley, the well known superintendent here, was certainly a surprise. It is astonishing, even in such a fine climate, how rapidly everything has grown here, and the place has the appearance of an old established planting, rather than one only a few years old. It would take far too long to give even a short notice of all the interesting things to be seen and it is no wonder that eastern visitors are so enthusiastic in their praises. One of the finest features is the rose garden. It is not at its best yet—in fact, only a few flowers are open—but the splendid growth and healthy appearance of the plants give promise of a rich feast of blooms later. Many novelties are being tried out, but in the main Mr. Morley has stuck to well tried varieties of merit. In a long experience, the writer has never seen so promising looking a rose garden, and when the thousands of plants come into bloom, it will be magnificent. The acacias are also beautiful now, just masses of golden yellow, fine to examine closely, but even finer when viewed from a little distance. The canyon, spanned by the big bridge that leads to the Administration building, is one of the big scenic features. The artificial planting so blends in with the natural that one cannot say where the dividing line is—in fact, there is no line. These scenic features of this fine park will be a monument to the skill and farsightedness of John Morley long after our genial friend has been gathered to his fathers. Even now it must be a source of gratification to him to see the thousands of visitors taking pleasure in his work. The pansy garden is another beautiful feature. Here are thousands of plants in all the best colors, perhaps the most striking of all being Steele's Panama-Pacific strain. The yellows especially in this are truly magnificent. In the greenhouses are some extremely fine specimen palms and a large quantity of Schizanthus Wisetonensis. A number of Easter lilies coming into bloom also was a surprise, but Mr. Morley said these were from bulbs locally grown.

A magnificent location is that of the Bridges mansion, on Point Loma, and while the garden is as yet to some extent in the transition stage, there is no doubt that before long it will be one of the famous places of the neighborhood. In the first place, Mrs. Bridges takes the greatest kind of personal interest in the garden, and when her likes and wishes are carried out by such an excellent gardener and landscape man as Robert Armstrong, there need be no fear as to the result. Mr. Armstrong has a hard row to hoe, in that some mistakes have been made in planting that have to be rectified. But difficulties only stir the right kind of man to further efforts and that is so in this case. In the new rose garden a pergola effect has been carried out that is quite different from the tunnel-like pergolas so frequently seen, and when well covered with climbers and the standards also come into flower, it will be a fine feature. Acacias are particularly beautiful here and one plant appears to baffle local plantsmen as to its name. It is a dwarf grower, with short leaves, and simply covered with small bell-like flowers. Mr. Armstrong says there are only three known plants of it in San Diego and it is surely a beautiful thing. Azalea saligna is now in flower, showing it to be one of the finest. For a long way around the estate, the land belongs to Mr. Bridges, and when the present alterations are finished, doubtless more of this will be planted in accordance with natural conditions. Grand views of the ocean and surrounding country are to be had on all sides, and the place is unique in that no one else can look over it. Personally the writer was greatly surprised with the possibilities of this fine estate and will be much disappointed if it does not become the leading place in the country.

The Market.

A few days before Easter found the local florists, both wholesale and retail, in the midst of what promised to be a banner holiday rush. The shippers were just finishing up on their long-distance orders and the retailers were assembling their stock in more or less elaborate displays. The demand for cut flowers for shipping was unusually heavy, causing prices to stiffen on certain items. With the exception of lilies, the stock situation leaves nothing to be desired, there being an ample supply of other plants and cut flowers for all requirements.

In flowering plants, roses head the list, and old-timers in the business here say they never saw finer specimens, on the whole, than are available this year, the later date of Easter having made it possible to have these splendidly flowered. Many varieties go to make up the assortment, but probably no one variety is as largely represented as the Dorothy Perkins. Tausendschoen and Hiawatha are plentiful also, together with many fine Baby Ramblers. French hydrangeas are outclassed by the roses, as far as quantity is concerned, but not in quality. These plants are especially fine, as are the rhododendrons. Azaleas are not in heavy supply, but some firms are featuring them extensively. With plenty of plants of such excellent quality, it is hardly expected that the absence of lilies will cut down the volume of Easter business to any great extent.

Never was there a finer cut of roses for Easter, according to all reports. American Beauties are in their prime and the same may be said of Russell, Ophelia, Columbia, Hadley, Ward and the Killarneys. The demand for shipping purposes early in the week was sufficiently heavy to double prices by the middle of the week. Local requirements were expected to effect a close clean-up at the end of the week, but a decided shortage of roses did not seem likely, in view of the wide assortment of seasonable flowers, including a fine cut of gorgeous tree peonies, heavy offerings of lilac, quantities of tulips, and a nice supply of snapdragons and sweet peas.

Carnations are still a little off crop, but considerable good stock is arriving. Violets have managed to stay for Easter, but this week will practically finish them.

With calla lilies in great demand in some other sections of the country, mention should be made of them, perhaps, but the less said the better, is the way most of the florists seem to feel about this particular flower. It is generally regarded as a common flower in this state and there is little inclination on the part of the buying public to give it more than a passing glance when it is displayed in conjunction with other flowers at a florist's store. Even the absence of other lilies does not seem to quicken interest in callas here to any extent. Consequently, 4 cents each is considered rather a high price for them.

Orchids are plentiful and up to standard, and there is a heavy cut of gardenias. All greens are ample and good in quality.

Various Notes.

The funeral of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, coming only a few days before Easter, caused a rush at some of the flower stores. Because of the large number of more or less expensive floral pieces and bouquets, this was one of the most notable funerals ever held in this city. Truck loads of flowers were delivered to the home in Pleasanton. Grace cathedral in this city, where the public services were held, was a mass of flowers. Practically every design known to florists was represented. Many substantial telegraph orders were received from all over the country and the work was well distributed among the different local firms.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. participated in a novel advertising scheme, arranged by one of the local newspapers, in which a "mysterious bride" made the rounds of various stores, a prize being offered to the person revealing her identity. At the company's establishment she was presented with a handsome shower bouquet of sweet peas, valley and orchids, and congratulated by A. J. Rossi, in person. Moving pictures were taken of the bride and the procession of curious persons who followed her about town and these were shown the same evening at one of the local theaters. In commenting upon the affair, Mr. Rossi pointed out that it was only an instance of trying to satisfy the craving of the present age for something novel. This concern took extra space for its Easter display of plants and business was reported starting off briskly. For the Hearst funeral a number of handsome floral pieces were made up by this firm, several ranging in price from $50 to $150.

The Francis Floral Co. obtained a near-by store to accommodate the overflow of Easter stock from its establishment, at the corner of Sutter and Powell streets, and made a fine display in both places. Several fine specimens of the Japanese paper plant, the bougainvillea, were offered by Mr. Francis, together with a fine showing of rambler rose plants, hydrangeas, Japanese azaleas and quite a nice showing of Easter lilies, considering the general shortage.

Before Easter deliveries started, Podesta & Baldocchi's store on Grant avenue was a gorgeous sight, with a wonderful array of rambler roses, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, etc. One of the finest rose arches, standing some ten feet high, was sold within ten minutes after reaching the store.

The Art Floral Co. made several large Easter church decorations, which, in addition to the store rush occasioned by the Hearst funeral and the holiday trade, made one of the busiest weeks in the history of the firm's business.

B. M. Joseph did considerable work for the Hearst funeral, including a $500 piece of roses, orchids, etc., on a telegraphic order from New York. Here extensive preparations were made for Easter and the rush was reported starting in earlier than usual.

Albert O. Stein's store on Sutter street, which is particularly adapted to elaborate displays, never made a finer showing than for this Easter, the stock including a number of large novelty rose plants. For April 27 Mr. Stein has an outdoor wedding decoration for one of the country estates in Menlo Park, which, it is expected, will keep a force of men busy for three days. Another nice order for the week after Easter is for bouquets for a wedding in Berkeley. The bouquet of the bride-to-be will consist of gardenias, phalænopsis, etc.; that of the maid of honor, of peonies; those of the four bridesmaids will be bracelet bouquets of Columbia roses, while the flower girl will carry a staff of Dorothy Perkins roses and snapdragons.

Mrs. Bartlett, formerly with Fred C. Jaeger & Son, has accepted a position with Julius Eppstein at the St. Francis hotel. It is understood Miss Rene Crosthwaite, who has been at the hotel stand for some time, and who for several years before was at the Palace hotel, is leaving shortly to be married.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee is well satisfied with Easter shipping business. Early in the week she started on long-distance orders and barely had them out of the way when a rush of work came in for the Hearst funeral. This was followed by shorter-distance shipping orders and the Easter retail demand.

W. C. Murray, cousin of Miss Recardie Lee Murray, and associated with her in business, has resumed his duties after an illness which kept him away from the store most of the time for several months.

Mrs. Coleman, whose store on Sutter street is always in perfect condition, as far as the arrangement of stock and cleanliness is concerned, made a wonderful Easter display and was rewarded by having business start out with a rush.

At the J. B. Boland establishment, Mrs. Roberts was gratified to have stock so fine and conditions generally favorable for a banner Easter trade.

Adolph Winters, of Richmond, Cal., is preparing to erect a new business block at the corner of Macdonald and Eleventh streets, a portion of which he will occupy with his flower business. He also is engaged in the music business and in the new location will have increased facilities for both lines. M. M.

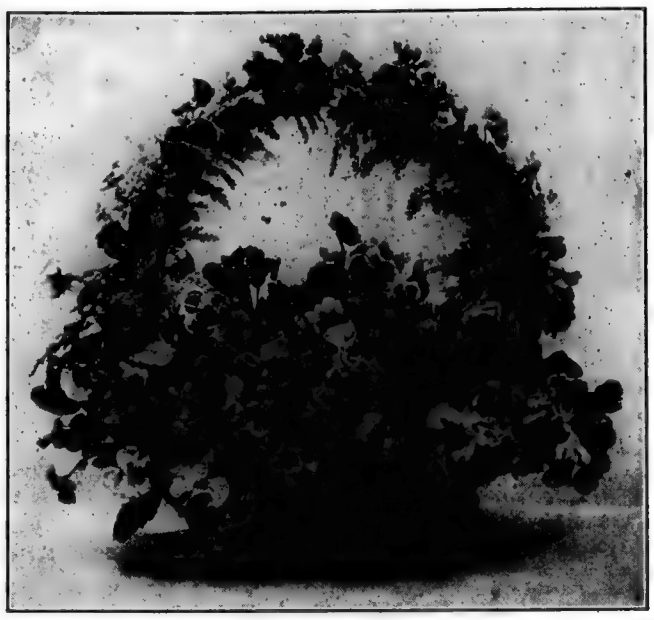
KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Just how the dearth of lilies would affect the Easter business was a question that the growers and dealers seriously pondered over. Apparently it did not make any difference, as there was a steadily increasing flow of orders all last week, but the reports are not yet all in. Such a condition as the present has never before confronted the florists, but, while Easter and lilies are always associated, the public has had to adapt itself to so many changes in the last few years, on account of the war, that such plants and cut flowers as were on display were cheerfully accepted as substitutes for lilies. There were some lilies, but not nearly enough to supply the demand. According to present indications, the supply of cut flowers is sufficient to fill all orders.

There was a slight advance in prices for the holiday. Roses were from 8 to 20 cents; carnations, 6 cents; tulips, 4 to 6 cents; jonquils, 8 cents; sweet peas, 75 cents to $1.50 per hundred. After much cloudy weather, the steady sunshine of the last two days has helped to bring carnations to perfection and a heavy cut of these is arriving.

Various Notes.



The W. L. Rock Flower Co. recently cut about 10,000 carnations, which were a big help in supplying Easter trade. The company added about thirty people to the regular force for Easter.

Miss Hayden, of Samuel Murray's, has returned from a short visit in Chicago.

More than 200 elm trees were planted in Wichita, Kan., April 13, by the Boy Scouts as a memorial to Theodore Roosevelt. The trees, which were furnished by the city park authorities, were planted along both sides of the boulevard leading to Sims park. The boys will care for the trees and replace any that die.

The Kansas City Garden Association, a committee under the direction of the Council of National Defense, will carry on the community garden work organized and developed last year by the Kansas City Real Estate Board. Through the efforts of the board, tracts of unused ground were lent free of charge to applicants, who utilized the space for war gardens. An executive secretary has been appointed by the association to distribute seeds, superintend the planting and cultivation of the gardens and offer advice on all cultural matters. J. E. K.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; secretary, Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Mo.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; forty-fourth annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1919.

CARUSBROOK FARM is the name of a nursery recently started at Glenview, Ill. Frank Kari is manager.

THE Rhinelander Nursery Co., of Rhinelander, Wis., has discontinued business. An auction was held recently to sell the property of the concern.

A RECENT sale by the Jerseyville Nursery Co., of Jerseyville, Ill., was 9,000 apple trees. These will be planted by the purchaser in an orchard near Jerseyville.

NURSERYMEN are human. They agree, practically unanimously, that business is good, but, in the same way, they are formulating plans to make conditions even better. Human nature is to strive for perfection.

EVERY section of the recently enacted nursery fraud act will be rigidly enforced by the state plant board of Arkansas, it has been announced. The measure was opposed by the nursery trade. J. Lee Hewitt has resigned his position as secretary and chief inspector of the plant board.

LABOR GOVERNS FUTURE.

Upon labor conditions depends the future of the nursery trade, according to W. H. Wyman, of the Bay State Nurseries, North Abington, Mass.

"The future of the nursery trade is a subject on which one man's guess is as good as another's," says Mr. Wyman. "In these troublous times labor conditions may throw everything out of balance.

"At present the nursery business is extremely good; was never better. If labor conditions do not interfere, it is my conviction that there is a future for the business. The country is not overloaded with nursery stock and there is a great demand for it. What conditions may be in the labor market, no one can predict."

QUARANTINES THE BARBERRY.

The fact has been determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, and notice is hereby given, that the common barberry (Berberis vulgaris) and its horticultural varieties, as well as other species of berberis and mahonia, are capable of harboring the black stem rust of wheat, oats, barley, rye, and many wild and cultivated grasses. Through the coöperation of the Department of Agriculture with state officials, local organizations and individuals, susceptible species of barberry and mahonia have been very largely eradicated from the states of Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Montana, Wisconsin, Michigan, Wyoming and Colorado.

Now, therefore, I, David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, under the authority conferred by Section 8 of the Plant Quarantine Act of August 20, 1912 (37 Stat., 315), as amended by the Act of Congress approved March 4, 1917 (39 Stat., 1134, 1165), do hereby quarantine, effective May 1, 1919, the states of Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Ver-

200,000 NORWAY SPRUCE for NURSERY PLANTING

Thrifty, Well Rooted Plants; Twice Transplanted; 10 to 15 Inches

Prices: $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000; $220.00 per 10,000

We lately bought a large lot of the above which were being grown by a paper-pulp company for a projected forestry planting. On account of a change in their plans we were able to secure these at a "right" figure and we are offering them the same way. They are extra good value at the prices quoted above. We have made a personal inspection of the stock and it is exceptionally fine. Will be available for shipment early in May.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Everybody seems abundantly satisfied with the business done for Easter. There were some serious handicaps. Commencing at 7 a. m., April 16, all telephone operators in New England, except Connecticut, went on strike and this continued until after Easter. This proved to be a serious handicap and, had telephoning been possible, both wholesalers and retailers would have been virtually swamped. Another drawback was the fact that April 19 is a state legal holiday. Efforts to postpone its celebration until April 21 failed and florists were among the few professions keeping open doors. In spite of these drawbacks, however, the volume of business was astonishing. Wonderful weather April 18 and 19 greatly favored the retailers, and Easter day itself was perfect.

Plants, as usual, were the great feature. The late date of the holiday permitted growers to get in a splendid assortment of stock and the writer never saw it of finer quality. Easter lilies were a small feature and inferior in quality, compared with former years. Practically all were from cold storage bulbs, but small lots came in from St. Johns, N. B., of good quality. Wholesale prices were 35 cents to 40 cents per bud and the large retail stores charged 75 cents per bud.

Roses were in the greatest abundance of any plants and in a wide variety. Tausendschoen seemed to remain the favorite rambler and Magna Charta the most largely grown hybrid perpetual. There were some excellent hybrid teas and polyanthus. Standard ramblers were fine. French hydrangeas met with a heavy sale, from specimens in tubs to plants in 5-inch and 6-inch pots. Bougainvilleas were of unusually fine quality and quite abundant. They sold well. Azaleas were scarce, but both these and rhododendrons cleaned up easily. There were fewer spiræas than usual, but those seen were of extra quality. Genistas were abundant and there was a fine assortment of ericas. Some large melantheras and caffra densa were noted.

Bulbous stock had a fine sale. It was much less abundant than usual. Some good lilacs, Azalea mollis and Kæmpferi, Spiræa Vanhouttei, deutzias, laburnums and other shrubs were seen, in addition to cinerarias, calceolarias, primroses, pansies, schizanthus and other less expensive stock. The call for palms, ferns and colored-leaved plants was not large.

Coming to cut flowers, the clean-up was excellent. Roses made from $6 to $60 per hundred, the highest prices being for fancy Russell and Hadley. American Beauties sold up to $100 for the best. Varieties like Ophelia, Hadley, Russell, Miller, Francis Scott Key, Hoosier Beauty and Maryland sold at $9 to $15 per hundred upward. The Killarneys, as usual, realized the lowest prices. Carnations were not overabundant. The bulk sold at $8 to $12 per hundred, with Laddie fifty per cent higher. A few poor single violets realized $3. A good number of Rhinebeck doubles sold at half these prices. Sweet peas were eagerly bought at $1 to $4 per hundred; pansies went at $1 to $3. Bunches of English primroses sold well at an average price of $1.50 to $2 per hundred blooms.

Cut lilies sold at $35 to $40 per hundred and callas at similar prices. Snapdragon was in big supply. The bulk was of pink varieties. These wholesaled at $15 to $25 per hundred for the best, but the demand was not equal to the supply at these prices. Cattleya Mossiæ realized from $18 to $24 per dozen. Daffodils and tulips were practically unchanged, at an average of $6 per hundred. Spanish iris went readily at $12 to $25 per hundred. Calendulas of good quality sold well. Delphinium

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

VOLUNTEER

A golden Anemone that will be a welcome addition to your Thanksgiving Day crop.

THE List of Chrysanthemums we are offering for the season of 1919 shows many changes from last season and these are, we believe, a great benefit to us and no injury to our trade. We have discarded many varieties and have kept only such as have shown themselves really needed to maintain a balance of color and season. This selection has eliminated many, for which we may have calls during the planting season, but in the list presented we have the superior of the discarded variety. Our aim is to grow in quantity those varieties which we, ourselves, would grow for the cut flower trade, regardless of the fact that we have limited the list of offerings. There is no break in the Mum crop from the start to the finish of the Mum season if planted from an intelligent selection of varieties from this list, commercial cut flower production governing this selection.

NEW CHRYSANTHEMUMS FOR THE COMMERCIAL GROWER.

BETSY ROSS. (Smith.) An incurved flower borne on good strong stems. It is absolutely pure white in color. Matures Nov. 10.

Rooted Cuttings, $1.25 per doz.; $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1,000.

GOLDEN MISTLETOE. (A. N. Pierson, Inc.) This variety, as shown by the name, is a sport of Mistletoe. The parent is our latest flowering variety, coming well into December. It is ball-shaped. An excellent companion for the parent. We have grown it in quantity and know that it will be a favorite.

Rooted Cuttings, $1.25 per doz.; $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1,000.

OTHER NEW AND VALUABLE SORTS.

Rooted Cuttings, 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1,000

BARBARA DAVIS. In color, a rich shade of reddish bronze and entirely distinct from any other variety. It was disseminated by us in 1917 and has proved a decided acquisition either as a cut flower or as a pot plant. In habit of growth it is short-jointed and inclined to be dwarf, but makes good stems from early propagation. The flower is reflexed when fully open and is at its best just before maturing.

HELEN LEE. In color a delicate shade of pink. The form of the flower is excellent; incurved type. Strong, sturdy grower, with stem ample to carry the flower. Midseason variety.

MISS ELIZABETH SMITH. An incurved flower, orange-bronze in color. Good stem and foliage. One of the best of the new varieties.

YELLOW CHARLES RAGER. A sport which originated with us. Light yellow, but a strong, healthy grower. The flowers are well-formed and, like its parent, it is an easy variety to grow.

POMPON CHRYSANTHEMUMS NOVELTIES.

2¼-inch pots, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

BECKY McLANE. (Mt. Greenwood.) Another Johnson seedling. Small button type bloom; bronze. Very free flowering, stiff-stemmed variety. Just right to cut for Thanksgiving.

NOVEMBER PEARL. (A. N. Pierson, Inc.) This new Pompon is of our own raising and is a seedling from Western Beauty. In color a very beautiful soft shade of daybreak pink. It grows easily; cuts good sprays on strong stems. It is a fine flower of medium size and is a valuable acquisition to the list of November-flowering varieties.

NEW POMPONS.

Rooted Cuttings, 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100

ADIRONDA. Bronze button. October 10th. Best in its type, color and season.

JULIANA. Large flower; yellow. Strong, heavy grower. October 25th.

LANETA. Rosy cerise. October 15th.

LUCILLE KNOBLE. Very free-flowering yellow; button type. Easy grower.

MIMICO. A very fine seedling of Lillian Doty. Similar to it but better in color. October 20th.

MIRIMAR. Large flower; bronze. October 25th.

WANDA. Large flower; white. October 25th.

A. N. PIERSON, Inc.

Belladonna sold at $4 to $5 per dozen spikes. Other flowers noted were gypsophilas, forget-me-nots, anemones, tritonias, schizanthus and ixias. There was a heavy sale of asparagus.

Following Easter, there has naturally been a considerable drop in prices, but flowers continue to sell well. The Victory loan bond campaign is expected to restrict buying somewhat for the next few weeks, for which growers are prepared.

Club Meeting.

There was an excellent attendance at the Florists' Club's meeting April 15, considering that the date came so near Easter. The principal attraction of the evening was a stereopticon lecture on "Community Improvement," by George N. Smith, of Wellesley, Mass., who kept his hearers well interested for over an hour. Many of his remarks were of a humorous nature.

Three new members were elected. Resolutions on the death of William J. Stewart were presented by a committee consisting of F. E. Palmer, Robert Cameron and William Downs, and adopted by a rising vote. It was unanimously voted, after some discussion, to send $50 to the Societe Nationale d'Horticulture de France, to assist in the rehabilitation of French horticulture, also to purchase $250 worth of the new Victory loan bonds.

Charles Cooper showed a superbly flowered plant of Cattleya Thayeriana, awarded a report of superior merit. R. J. Daly received a report of merit for the beautiful white Brasso-Cattleya Imperatrice de Russie. It was announced that at the May meeting F. E. Palmer would lecture on "Some Fundamentals of Proper Accounting for Florists."

Various Notes.

Carbone's, on Boylston street, presented a most beautiful appearance for Easter. Specially noteworthy among the plants here were Delphinium Bella-

NEW SINGLE VARIETIES.

The (*) before the name indicates good commercial varieties.

ELIZABETH FIRESTONE. (A. N. Pierson, Inc.) This bright pink seedling has appealed to the commercial grower and to the store-man as a valuable and much-needed acquisition. The stems are strong and carry the flowers well. This characteristic must not be overlooked in growing flowers for market. It comes into flower from November 15th to 20th, which is after Mrs. W. E. Buckingham and just before Mrs. E. D. Godfrey is ready to cut.

Rooted Cuttings, $1.00 per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1,000
2¼-inch pots, 1.25 per doz.; 8.00 per 100

MRS. E. M. HORNE. (Horne-A. N. Pierson, Inc.) Light, bronze-yellow shaded old-gold. The flowers, which are flat in form, are produced in good-sized graceful sprays which bunch well. Growth vigorous and erect. Matures Nov. 5th to 10th.

2¼-inch pots, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100

MOLLY WHITMORE. (A. N. Pierson, Inc.) Deep, golden-bronze, effectively suffused with terra-cotta; distinct, deep yellow center. The well-formed flower carries three rays of petals, which incurve slightly. This is a desirable trait where they are subject to shipping conditions or considerable handling. The growth being erect in character, this variety may be planted closer than the more branching kinds.

2¼-inch pots, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100

PEGGY BULKELEY. (A. N. Pierson, Inc.) We consider this new variety one of the prettiest in our entire collection. The color is a soft, yet luminous, pink, changing as the flower matures to a delicate mauve-pink. The blooms are large, averaging four rays of petals, which recurve gracefully from a golden-yellow center. The growth is vigorous and erect, producing large sprays, which show the individual flowers to the best possible advantage. An ideal cut-flower or pot-plant variety. Matures Nov. 10th to 15th.

EARLY-FLOWERING CHRYSANTHEMUMS FOR OUTDOOR GROWING.

The question of hardiness in the Chrysanthemum family is such that to call these hardy, as we have formerly done, is unfair, because so much depends upon the character of the soil and the drainage. Too much covering in winter has ruined more plants than a cover of any kind has saved. Some firms class these as Decorative varieties. Several in the list do well indoors, as among the Pompons and Singles there are those which do well outdoors. The varieties listed have larger blooms than the large-flowered Pompons, unless otherwise described.

donna, standard Tausendschoen roses, laburnums, large specimens of Erica caffra densa, deep blue hydrangeas and large pots of Lilium candidum. Business done at this store beat all previous records.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, Mass., had a large cut of Delphinium Belladonna, which he lifted late last fall and planted in a solid bed in a carnation temperature. Among carnations, he had especially fine Matchless, Ward, Pink Delight and Laddie. Among other flowers, he had excellent Keystone snapdragons—he finds seedlings shorter and cleaner than cuttings—calendulas and sweet peas.

Samuel Wax says that the telephone tie-up did not seem to hurt business with Wax Bros. Customers who usually telephone orders came out and made personal selections, and usually bought more than they would have done in the old way. Wax Bros. did a splendid Easter business.

The B. A. Snyder Co. had no trouble in clearing out its heavy shipments of cut Bermuda lilies. The cellar contained hardly a flower April 18. This concern also did a large business in roses, carnations, orchids and other flowers.

The Waban Rose Conservatories had an excellent lot of roses, including Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Russell, Hadley and Stanley, which realized top market prices.

James J. Casey, a prominent Boston retailer operating The Rosery, at 549 Boylston street, was found guilty in the Central Police court, April 16, of assaulting Miss Mary O'Brien, an employee. Miss O'Brien testified that her employer slapped her face, held her by the throat and threw her against an ice chest, causing bruises which had to be treated by a physician. The case was continued, sentence to be pronounced later.

P. Welch says that his company never did so good an Easter business as this year, in spite of the lack of all telephone communication. The company specialized more than ever in pot plants and sold large numbers of roses, bougainvilleas, rhododendrons, hydrangeas, etc.

One of the finest cuts of pink and yellow snapdragons for the eastern market came from Carrie E. Ball, of Southboro, Mass.

Pierce Bros. hit it right with a big rose crop, the leaders of this being Francis Scott Key, Maryland, Columbia and Ophelia.

At Harry Quint's, on Boylston street, a fine Easter business was done. Noted here were excellent standard geraniums, well flowered blue agapanthus, deutzias, Spiræa Vanhouttei and good azaleas.

John Barr's great trio of carnations this season are Pink Delight, Matchless and Mrs. Ward. He also grows Rosalia, Doris and Albert Roper. The latter has done well. Mr. Barr's carnations are always of the best grade.

Boston will have another holiday April 25, the occasion being the parade of the 26th, Yankee, division, just home from France. Grand stands to seat 300,000 people have been built and the day promises to be a memorable one in the Hub.

Henry M. Robinson & Co., in spite of the lack of telephones, did an enormous Easter business, and if conditions had been normal they do not think they could have supplied their customers.

At Galvin's the writer was impressed by the numerous splendid specimen flowering plants, such as roses, ericas, acacias, rhododendrons, lilacs, bougainvilleas and hydrangeas.

J. K. Chandler & Son had a handsome lot of Spanish iris for Easter, in addition to callas, anemones and calendulas.

At the store of the Boston Cut Flower Co., on Bromfield street, Mr. Rosenthal said that he had a most satisfactory Easter business. Purchasers grumbled but little about paying higher prices.

The plant display at Penn's was a remarkable one and far surpassed anything formerly seen here. A window of the yellow calla, Elliottiana, proved effective.

All the leading plantsmen, including Thomas Roland, the W. W. Edgar Co., A. Leuthy, Wollrath & Sons, W. T. Walke and others, were cleaned out of practically every salable plant. They never had such an Easter rush before.

W. N. C.

LINCOLN, NEB.

Chapin Bros. report the most successful Easter in their experience, having sold everything in sight. In the absence of lilies, every available plant moved at a good profit, the consumer being pleased in every instance.

Eiche Floral Co.: "The tape from the cash register tells our story, one-third better than last year. We had some lilies, but soon cleaned them out."

Enslow Floral Co.: "The most satisfactory Easter yet. When plants got scarce we had a wonderful call for made up baskets, with some large baskets moving at a good price."

C. H. Frey: "We cleaned up; nothing left. In the absence of lilies, roses moved well."

Frey & Frey: "Telegraph orders were so numerous that local trade had to take what was available. Business was never better."

J. K. Hiltner: "It was a corker; could not have been better; anything and everything went at good prices. Lilies were not grown to any extent."

C. B. Keller: "Trade was fine, almost all wholesale, with plenty of potted stock."

It was evident that buyers were more numerous than before, as many small sales were reported by all the stores representing the masses or middle classes.

Dissemination will be in the season of 1919-20.

Of the greatest value in gauging the value of a new variety, next to your confidence in the judgment of the disseminator, is the opinion of your fellow growers.

Certificate of Merit, Chicago Florists' Club, January 2, 1919.

Easter Trade.

All the florists report the biggest Easter in all their experience. We had some price cutting to contend with, but the only damage done was to the people who did the cutting. All the florists except one sold their carnations at $1 per dozen, but one retailed them at 75 cents, advertising strongly in all the papers. Monday all had sold every carnation obtainable and we figure that the one who sold them for 75 cents was the one who lost, when they shipped them in at $8 per hundred and paid for the paper ads. Sweet peas also were advertised at 25 cents per bunch, $1 per hundred, and Easter lilies were sold at $4 per dozen, while the others sold them at $6 and $8. Florists often do these things, but you never see any grocer retailing eggs at fifty per cent less than the others—they get together and make a fair profit. Some florists seem to think they will obtain all the business if their prices are less than the others.

Various Notes.

We have a new flower store here. Mrs. Hubble, who has been a dressmaker here for years, has opened a florists' department in connection with her dressmaking. She reports a fine business for a start.

The Summerfield Floral Co. had a big cut of stock. The snapdragons are the best seen on this market and 5,500 were cut for Easter. Carnations and daisies were also cut in quantity. A large wholesale and retail business is reported.

Lena the Florist reports a big demand. The Stokes Floral Shop had a big trade. The force was on hand at 3:30 a. m. Sunday to fill the orders on file. Deliveries were ready at 7 a. m. and in a short time the three cars had all deliveries out. A big loss of plants is reported, the express company damaging several large crates. J. W. S.

Watervliet, N. Y.—W. W. Hannell mentioned an item of 500 French hydrangeas as among the plants, samples of which were seen, and it is not surprising that such stock sold at sight.

Liberty, N. Y.—Liberty Floral Gardens sold out entirely of Easter stock and had to refuse orders. A fine batch of geraniums and other bedding plants, with large numbers of vegetable plants, will round out a prosperous season.

Greenhouse Heating

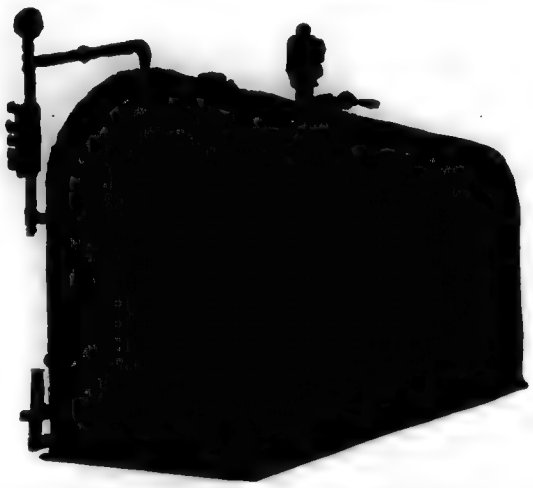
Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

PROPOSED RETURNS TOO SMALL.

You will find enclosed a sketch of four houses which I intend to build this season. Please let me know whether I can heat all of these houses with the boiler I have on hand. It is a 6-section Ideal boiler, No. 22. I am using it now with hot water, but wish to change to steam. Should I add another section to the boiler?

Can I heat house No. 1 with ten ¾-inch single-strength pipes, five of the pipes running lengthwise on each wall and the feed pipe running crosswise through the center of the house? Can I use 3-inch pipe for this feed, since I have this size on hand? In this house I want a temperature of 55 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 to 15 degrees below zero. Perhaps I should use 1-inch returns. No. 2 will be a general plant house; will six ¾-inch pipes, three on each wall, heat this house to 60 degrees? No. 3 will be a rose house; will six ¾-inch pipes, three on each wall, heat it to 60 degrees? No. 4 will be a chrysanthemum house; will six ¾-inch pipes, three on each wall, heat it to 55 degrees?

All of these houses will be connected and they will have 4-foot wooden walls, with thirty-two inches of glass. No. 3 will have an 8-foot wooden wall on the north side. All the houses will be eleven feet high to the ridge and will have glass gables, except where connected to the store. W. A.—Wis.



The sketch shows four houses that run east and west and are of the following description: No. 1, 21x72, is south of the boiler room and is divided at the center by a 4-foot passageway from the boiler. Thus No. 1 is practically two houses, each 21x34. We infer that the south wall is seven feet high, with thirty-two inches of glass. No. 2 is 12x50; it is on the east side of the boiler room and north of house No. 1. One end and about twenty-two feet of the south wall of No. 2 are exposed. Here, too, we understand there are thirty-two inches of glass below the plate. House No. 3 is 12x50; it adjoins No. 2 on the north and has the east end and north wall exposed, the latter being eight feet high and of wood. House No. 4 is on the west side of the boiler house and is 14x30. We infer that this house has thirty-two inches of glass in the north wall.

We have no catalogue of the Ideal boiler at hand and do not recall the exact dimensions or capacity of No. 22-6. We presume it has a grate area of about 750 square inches and a rating of about 800 square feet of steam radiation. This would suffice for the four houses, in localities where zero weather has to be planned for, but for 15 degrees below zero we would add another section, making seven in all, with a grate area of 1,000 square inches—about 22x45½ inches.

While 3-inch pipe, as suggested in the inquiry, may be used for the main leading to house No. 1, a 2-inch main would answer every purpose. For each of the other houses a 1½-inch main will answer, although one main could be used to supply houses 2 and 3. This could be 2-inch, or the 3-inch pipe which is on hand might be used. For each half of house No. 1, and for each of the other

Help Save the "White Coal of Industry"

The boiling hot water resulting from condensation in your steam lines is worth money. You have paid for it in terms of coal. It contains valuable heat units. It is the "White Coal of Industry"—it should not be wasted.

And it need not be wasted. The Morehead Back-to-Boiler System will save it for you by returning it to the boiler at temperatures as high as 400 degrees Fahrenheit. It reduces coal consumption an average of 20%. At the same time your steam will be "drier" and more efficient; your production speeded up and profits increased.

houses, we would use 1¼-inch main return pipes. The returns from the opposite ends of house No. 1, and also those from No. 2 and No. 3, might be united into 1½-inch pipes and all of the returns could be connected with the boiler through a 2-inch main.

We do not like anything smaller than 1-inch pipe for the coils and prefer 1¼-inch for houses over fifty feet in length. The following arrangement of piping is suggested for each house: For each half of house No. 1, 21x34, we would use a 1½-inch main flow, carried about two feet below the ridge, with eleven 1-inch returns, placing six on the south wall. In each of the other houses the temperatures mentioned can be secured by using one 1½-inch flow pipe, as already suggested, and seven 1-inch returns. Of the returns we would use four on the north wall of houses 3 and 4, while in No. 2 we would use the odd return on the south side, where there is a short section of exposed glass wall.

If for any reason the overhead flow pipe is not desired, a 1¼-inch flow may be placed upon each plate.

The Market.

Easter business was excellent and took everything in the market. More stock could have been used if it could have been obtained. Prices were good. When the warm weather is taken into consideration, stock, as a whole, was remarkably good.

The supply of roses is short of actual needs. The same is true of carnations. Easter lilies ran short for Easter, though many thousands of them could have been used if it had been possible to get them. These flowers were cut so closely for the day that they have been somewhat short since. Sweet peas were in good supply and sold well. A limited amount of bulbous stock was available. Snapdragons sold well and are still meeting with a good market. Other offerings are lily of the valley, orchids, callas, rubrum lilies, mignonette, calendulas, pansies and forget-me-nots.

Greens of all kinds are selling well. In decorative material, huckleberry is finding a good market.

Plant growers fared well at Easter. All cleaned out pretty well. Retailers, however, had a few plants left over after the close of the business.

Various Notes.

Eck Bros. managed to get their store in shape in time for Easter and did well for their first holiday since their return from the army.

C. E. Critchell has been having a big call for huckleberry during the last fortnight.

The William Murphy Co. handled 60,000 sweet peas in two days of holiday business last week.

Among recent visitors were Mr. Haverkamp, of Rising Sun, Ind.; G. A. Beckmann, Middletown, O., and Julius Dilloff, New York city. C. H. H.

The Market.

Newark florists generally report good Easter business. Prices were high and some flowers usually sold at Easter were scarce, but other flowers were more plentiful and sold readily. Easter lilies were so scarce and so high that some of the smaller dealers did not handle them at all, while others, who usually have several hundred, were satisfied with a few dozen. Only the larger stores had a good supply and even there it was smaller than usual. Another Easter staple that was missed was the azalea. There were some hardy azaleas but no store had a large number of plants and many had none. There were fine potted hydrangeas, potted roses and spiræas, however, and bulbous spring flowers, which sold readily.

Various Notes.

Charles Luthy, 363 Springfield avenue, reports business good, but prices high. On account of the scarcity of Easter lilies, he did not open an Easter branch store this year.

M. Gahr, 312 Springfield avenue, substituted calla lilies for Easter lilies this Easter, because of the scarcity and high price of the latter.

James Plunkett, of Connolly & Plunkett, 20 Belmont avenue, has been discharged from the army and is now back at his work.

The Victoria Florists, a new concern, have opened a store at 66 Springfield avenue. R. B. M.

GUTHRIE, OKLA.

J. W. Furrow, of Furrow & Co., states that his firm had an extremely good Easter business. A few weeks ago it was reported that Furrow & Co. had sold their store at Oklahoma City to the Foster Floral Co., Lon Foster having been in charge there for the former owners. But the greenhouses and retail store at Guthrie were not affected by the sale of the Oklahoma City store; Furrow & Co. will continue the growing and retailing at Guthrie as heretofore. The spring trade thus far has been the largest ever done at Guthrie.

Easter Trade.

After a cold, rainy week, Saturday turned warm, with prospects for a pleasant Easter Sunday. Business was fine; in fact, in some cases it was much better than ever before. The prices secured for both plants and cut flowers were better than those of last year. The cut flowers were all sold by Saturday night, but a good many plants were still left on Sunday morning. Easter lilies, of course, were scarce. Easter Greeting pelargoniums sold readily at good prices. There were some fine hydrangeas, which brought good returns. Most of the bulbous stock had gone some days before.

Various Notes.

Otto Kuebler, of the Hotel McCreedy Flower Shop, reports he had all he could do and more. He had some good Easter lilies, which sold at 50 cents per bloom. He had a nice cut of carnations from his place at Newburg, but bought his roses from Gullett & Sons, of Lincoln, Ill. Late Sunday morning, he says, orders for corsage bouquets were piling up and he did not know when they would be done.

Niednagel & Sons had an immense cut of carnations and cleaned them up well. They had large numbers of fine hydrangeas and Easter Greeting pelargoniums, which sold well.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. had its usual big holiday trade, selling some Easter lilies, besides a large quantity of plants of other kinds. In cut flowers, carnations were in the largest supply.

The Lockyear Floral Co. reports an immense trade, with a fine stock of plants and cut flowers, which sold at good prices.

O. S. Smith had first-class business both at his market stand and at the greenhouses.

Karl Zeidler reports business much better than last year. He had a big crop of carnations and cut just enough roses to fill his orders. He says roses were not so much in demand as carnations and other stock. He sold all his Easter Greeting pelargoniums that were in bloom and had a lot of white petunias, which were quickly sold. He did not have any lilies or other bulbous stock.

Mrs. J. C. Elspermann sold everything that had a bloom on it and says business was better than ever before. She was among the fortunate ones who had a few hundred pans of hyacinths and tulips, and these were all sold by Friday evening. She also had about 200 hydrangeas and sold all of these.

Theodore Kuebler was kept busy getting stock to his market stands and had better business than ever. E. L. F.

MONTREAL, QUE.

The Market.

Easter is only a memory, but rather a pleasant one for local florists. According to reports, an average of thirty per cent would be a conservative estimate of the increase in business. Typical April weather prevailed during the whole of last week. Quality and quantity were all that could be looked for at this season of the year. Lilies and hydrangeas were plentiful, but the usual Easter variety was sadly missed.

The trade has had an exceptional opportunity in the last year to study the attitude of the public toward flowers. The splendid increase in business under abnormal conditions looks well for the future.

The telegraph business just about doubles each year and it is only a matter of a short time when the telegraph companies will find it necessary to install branches in leading florists' stores during the holiday seasons. This will make the stockbrokers sit up and take notice. Instead of a direct wire to New York, the florists will have a direct wire to a thousand branches in the United States and Canada. J. A. C.

LANCASTER, PA.

With almost a week of dull weather preceding Easter, naturally the cut flower growers had much smaller stocks than they had counted on. On the other hand, the plant and bulb growers were thankful for the dark days, for they were of much value in holding back stock.

B. F. Barr & Co., H. A. Schroyer, The Rosery, Mrs. George Goldbach and W. A. Hammond all had as much business as they could handle.

Thomas R. Fries had a storeroom filled with extra fine stock and his only regret is that he did not have more stock.

Suter & Bowman and Ruof & Sons, located near the cemeteries, were much pleased with this week's business.

In the markets, A. F. Strickler, John R. Shreiner, C. S. Loeffler and others sold out clean.

Charles M. Weaver and Elmer J. Weaver had a fine cut of sweet peas.

Adolph Vogel had a quantity of good bulbous stock.

H. D. Rohrer's pansies were at their best and large quantities in pans made a pleasing addition to the regular Easter stock. H. K. R.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The Easter trade was the largest and best ever. Plants were cleaned up everywhere and everything with a flower on it sold. Some florists reported plants sold out two days before Easter and none left for the late patron. Lily plants were few, on account of the dark weather; most of them were not ready for market. The cut flower market was kept cleaned at all times; everything in sight was picked up. Roses cleaned up and brought from $8 to $25. American Beauties were scarce.

Cut Easter and calla lilies brought 35 cents. Carnations were cleaned up at 8 cents. Violets were extremely poor and many had to be replaced. Peas were cleaned up quickly. Bulbous stock was all cleaned up. Calendulas, freesias, valley, pansies, daisies and other novelties were cleaned up.

Various Notes.

John Bartsch, formerly with Paul C. Hahn, returned recently from overseas duty with the 112th Engineers.

Walter Witthuhn is back at work again after a brief illness. W. F. B.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The demand has been so great that a report on market conditions is unnecessary, beyond saying that stock brought more than reasonable prices. Carnations brought $10 per hundred during the entire week. Sweet peas brought $4 for reasonably good stock. The shortest roses, good for corsage work only, brought $10.

Everybody agrees that the Easter business was greater than the trade has ever experienced. The weather for this record-breaking week commenced with a beautiful, bright day and a brisk demand for extra good stock. This was followed by some cloudy days, which hindered production considerably, affecting carnations most of all. But the demand continued brisk and the trade "was up a tree" for a supply.

Saturday was a clear day and, judging by the appearance of the stores, it seemed that the public had raided the places. In many instances people stood in line, waiting to be given attention. Sunday noon saw the stores practically out of stock. Here and there a plant was left, but it can be said that everybody sold clear. The greenhouses were not excepted. Some of these resorted to geraniums—in fact, anything that showed a flower was placed on sale. A.

THE STORY OF CHRISTMAS GOLD.
The most unique novelty pompon ever offered to the trade. Originated by Herbert Bate, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., in 1915. A seedling of Baby. Has all the tough, lasting qualities peculiar to its parent, with a free growing habit similar to Lucille Knoble, Golden Climax, etc. The color is much darker than in the old Baby, almost a Golden Wedding yellow. Size, about one inch in diameter, of solid button type. Can be cut tight for Thanksgiving, is at its best from December 10 to 30, and holds on for weeks. We cut the last batch this season January 12, 1919.
Certified by and scored 90 points before the Chrysanthemum Society of America committee of Chicago, December 14, 1917.
From 2-in. pots, 20c each;
$17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

Don't forget we were the first to offer Easter Greeting in The Review, in 1914. We were so particular with the stock we shipped and the packing, in three years, that a very large trade comes to us automatically without advertising. We are now in the market with an elegant stock of 4-in. E. G. grown especially for Mothers' Day and later. This stock is vigorous, low down, all branched and well set with bud. Not a flower has yet bloomed out—everything ahead—a very desirable feature, and a condition difficult to secure at this season. We offer this stock at 20c each in any quantity, and we know it will make you quick money. S. C. Templin & Son, Easter Greeting Specialist, Garrettsville, O.

FORCING LILACS.

Please tell me how to force lilacs for winter blooming. We grow a general line of cut flowers and plants. Would it be practical for us to grow lilacs for winter blooms for our own use? We bought some pot-grown plants last fall. Several of the plants had only one bloom, with lots of shoots. Will these shoots be blooming ones for another year? W. S. G.—N. C.

There is nothing impracticable about the retail florist forcing his own lilacs if a sufficiently warm house is available. Perhaps the lack of the necessary heat was the cause of the disappointment mentioned in the inquiry—the failure of many of the buds to develop. A high temperature is required, beginning with 55 to 60 degrees and gradually increasing to 75 to 85 degrees. In these higher temperatures frequent syringing is needed, as well as daily watering, but the syringing should be stopped when the flowers begin to open. When the panicles are fully developed and the flowers are about half opened, the plants should be removed to a cool house for the hardening-off process. The temperatures mentioned have reference, of course, to early forcing. As the natural flowering season draws near, say in March and April, the temperature may be reduced to the neighborhood of 60 degrees at night. The time allowed for the earliest forcing should be about five weeks; later, three or four weeks may suffice. During the summer the plants should be plunged outdoors in their pots, where they should be mulched and well watered until fall, when the quantity of water should be reduced for the purpose of ripening the wood.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The week preceding Easter closed most satisfactorily. Everything in the shape of flowers was disposed of. Lilies were in great demand and, although the prices, 20 cents and 25 cents per bloom, were maintained till the last, there was not a plant left. Some of the growers were carried away by a fit of generosity and dumped their stock on the market at 15 cents per bloom, but those who understood the situation had no difficulty in securing repeat orders from three or four of the larger cities in the United States, whose buyers knew what superior stock was worth.

The Canadian Express employees were out on strike during the entire week, but the Dominion Express people handled the output throughout the country in a way that did them credit. The men back from the front are taking up their old positions, and things are beginning to work smoothly once more in all departments.

The Lord & Burnham Co. was the successful bidder for the contract for the two new greenhouses, 50x480, to be built for the Dale Estate this summer. Chrysanthemum planting has already begun at the estate and carnations are being thrown out to give place to next season's stock. E. Seal has returned from France to his former post as shipper and J. Crook has left for England with his family. W. G. P.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

Water without waiting
Perennial field a gold mine

WHEN plants have all the water they need—when they need it, and delivered in the right way, less cultivating is necessary.

That means lowered labor costs.
A point well worth consideration.

If you can keep your perennials growing all the season through without a pause caused by dry weather, think of the husky clumps you will have for divisions!
Think of the money those divisions mean!

Old Sol Meets His Master

The intense heat from the summer sun has no effect upon GRIP PLASTIC. It is an especially treated plastic oil thoroughly fabricated with asbestos fiber. The result is a glazing material that will not harden or dry out. GRIP PLASTIC will not crack, chip or split off. The short fibered asbestos binds and holds it together—prevents running in the hottest weather.

GRIP PLASTIC forms itself into tough film on the surface, while the material beneath remains plastic. When it becomes necessary to replace a glass there will be no cutting into the sash bar.

GRIP PLASTIC will not puddle.

AGMCO Houses produce 16⅔ per cent more stock

How is it done?

We admit it sounds like a brag statement, but listen!

A method has been developed by us that adds one more plant to every sixth one. It's such a practical, common sense plan that you'll wonder at it yourself — wonder why it is that people have been going along for years without ever discovering the fact. It's simply because most people are content to plod along in the same old rut, without ever lifting their eyes from the ground.

And the best part of it is that in an AGMCO house your upkeep and your operating expense are actually less than in any other type.

Can you get 16⅔ per cent more out of your houses and reduce your expenses at the same time? You can if you let us build your plant for you.

When will it be?

AGMCO

"The Carnations Have Stems On Them As Stiff As Pencils."

The above remark was made recently by a well-known grower. We were speaking of the relative merits of the narrow and wide greenhouses and he pointed to the stock in his wide houses and then showed the Carnations in the narrow houses, which had the same care and attention.

There surely was a difference.

Look over the above cut carefully. It is very wide for a pipe frame house, but with our new style "Bolted-Thru-The-Pipe" steel connections, it is amply strong to stand the winter's snows and storms.

Write for estimate on your greenhouse requirements. Do it quickly, for the season is advancing.

SPECIAL WIDTH HOUSES COST MORE

COST MORE, because they cost more to make, than Standard widths. If they cost us more, they will cost you more. The more they cost, according to that way of figuring, the more we make.

No, you are wrong—dead wrong. You get less for your money in special width houses. We make less on them. It gets right back to the old-fashioned truth, that is rapidly coming into fashion again, that a sale to be a profit producer, must be profitable for both sides.

The war forced us into making Standard width houses—forced us into it, because we saw that the cost of greenhouses, with the price of materials so high, was going to make it hard for some growers to build. What hurt them hurt us. What helped them helped us.

So, based on the opinions of the leading growers of the country, combined with our experts, we decided on 6 widths of houses that work out most economically as to both benching and cost of materials.

You may not think they are the most economical for you, but after we have sat down with you and explained the entire matter, we have a notion things will look very different.

The new Handy Hand Book both shows and tells about all the Standard widths. If you haven't a copy, send for one. If you have one, be sure it's not an old one. The new one says "1918 edition" on the second page.

SIM'S HYBRID YELLOW POLYANTHUS

This is one of my houses, 20x300 feet, of National Flower Show Gold Medal Polyanthus. These had been in bloom constantly since November.

These beautiful Primroses are still very scarce everywhere and good returns are awaiting those who will grow them. They find a ready sale when bunched like violets. The house may be utilized for other crops from May to November 1, as they are grown outdoors in summer.

Polyanthus this season have averaged 50 cents a small bunch and each plant will, when grown well, produce from two to three bunches.

They are planted 8x8 apart. Does any crop you grow give better returns? Strong divisions in May.

ROBERT CRAIG CO., 4900 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Were You Ever Dunned?

Did some mean (?) florist confront you with a bill long past due and demand payment?

Or did some authoritative (?) florist, who had been trying for months to get you to make a settlement, write you one of those "must have the money" letters?

And didn't you feel that his action was just a little drastic when, as a matter of fact, you, no doubt, would have done just as he did—try to collect to protect your business?

Just—stop and think. Put yourself in the other fellow's place. Were you then and are you now justified in letting the other fellow wait, when he tendered you credit on the basis of his confidence in your ability to pay PROMPTLY?

Now, think it over again, and if you have held up that last bill—you had better send a check or draft—right now—and make the other fellow happy. You'll feel much better yourself.

It is really to your advantage.

PAY PROMPTLY and keep paid up.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

GIVING MOTHERS' DAY ANOTHER PUSH

To make Mothers' day business compare favorably with Christmas and Easter, the trade has only to advertise. Now is the time to get busy. Some ideas on Mothers' day advertising are printed here, in the hope that they will inspire others to help in the publicity work.

COLUMBUS performed a great service for the world when he sailed across the Atlantic in 1492 and discovered a new continent. However, he did not realize the importance of his discovery, nor could he see into the future and visualize the great cities, the mammoth industries and the culture of America, which came as a sequence to his perilous crossing of the deep.

Pioneers followed Columbus and developed the New World. It required courage to come to the unexplored country and perseverance was necessary to make from the raw materials things of usefulness and beauty. Progress was slow at first and there were many disappointments, but modern America illustrates on every hand how well worth while were the efforts of those first Americans.

Another discoverer was the Philadelphia woman who conceived the idea of Mothers' day. Like Columbus, she did not realize the significance of the thought she had come upon. It required the commercial instinct of florists to develop the idea and to make it worth while. The enterprising advertisers were the pioneers who followed the discoverer, and in their work of development they have succeeded well, using as their chief tool the sentiment which makes the idea back of Mothers' day one of almost universal appeal.

Advertising Did It.

It is so generally recognized by florists that advertising has made Mothers' day important, that it is needless to dwell upon the fact with the idea of convincing doubters. The question now is not whether Mothers' day advertising is to be recommended, but what sort of advertising is best—which form of advertising will produce the greatest returns for the least outlay of cash and effort.

As Mothers' day is little more than a week away, it behooves florists to begin at once, if they have not already done so, work to make the day memorable and profitable. Plans for advertising should be carefully considered and systematically carried out.

Birth of an Idea.

The Review claims a certain amount of credit for the importance of Mothers' day, for this publication was the first to bring forward the idea of making the occasion rank with Christmas, Easter and Memorial day, and the first to suggest to florists that advertising would accomplish this result. It was in connection with the exploitation of Mothers' day that The Review first suggested the form of coöperative advertising which has been so successful and which has been so generally adopted in the trade.

It is difficult to decide which form of advertising is the best. A certain method will fit the conditions in one community and will apply less well in another. Generally speaking, a combination of the different forms of advertising, using the term in its broadest sense, is to be preferred. Window decorations, newspaper display advertising—coöperative and individual—handbills, articles in newspapers and periodicals, reminder cards in delivered packages and stickers on them, and propaganda in the form of proclamations by public officials, are some of the ways of getting the subject of Mothers' day before the public.

According to all advertising experts, stress should be laid on the sentiment back of Mothers' day. There is no other holiday which holds so universal an appeal as does Mothers' day, for there is not a man, woman or child in the world who has not a mother, living or in memory. Mothers' day does not appeal to any particular class or type—it appeals to all. Therefore, it is to the sentiment in us all that florists should appeal in advertising.

Every florist is familiar with the meaning of Mothers' day, and the only problem is to decide how to bring enlightenment to the general public. Enlightenment and interest, in this case, are practically synonymous, as enlightenment is practically certain to arouse emotion, which is nothing more than heart interest.

Mother Has Her Day in the Florists' Show Window.

Window Displays.

Window displays have proved effective in making business, and this form of advertising allows the use of more originality and skill, perhaps, than any other. It is a simple form of advertising, also, and one every store can use. However, window display alone is hardly adequate to obtain the fullest results from Mothers' day. The window reaches only that part of the public which chances to pass the florist's store; it is not taken to them.

Pioneers followed Columbus and developed the New World. It required courage to come to the unexplored country and perseverance was necessary to make from the raw materials things of usefulness and beauty. Progress was slow at first and there were many disappointments, but modern America illustrates on every hand how well worth while were the efforts of those first Americans.

Another discoverer was the Philadelphia woman who conceived the idea of Mothers' day. Like Columbus, she did not realize the significance of the thought she had come upon. It required the commercial instinct of florists to develop the idea and to make it worth while. The enterprising advertisers were the pioneers who followed the discoverer, and in their work of development they have succeeded well, using as their chief tool the sentiment which makes the idea back of Mothers' day one of almost universal appeal.

Advertising Did It.

It is so generally recognized by florists that advertising has made Mothers' day important, that it is needless to dwell upon the fact with the idea of convincing doubters. The question now is not whether Mothers' day advertising is to be recommended, but what sort of advertising is best—which form of advertising will produce the greatest returns for the least outlay of cash and effort.

As Mothers' day is little more than a week away, it behooves florists to begin at once, if they have not already done so, work to make the day memorable and profitable. Plans for advertising should be carefully considered and systematically carried out.

Birth of an Idea.

The Review claims a certain amount of credit for the importance of Mothers' day, for this publication was the first to bring forward the idea of making the occasion rank with Christmas, Easter and Memorial day, and the first to suggest to florists that advertising would accomplish this result. It was in connection with the exploitation of Mothers' day that The Review first suggested the form of coöperative advertising which has been so successful and which has been so generally adopted in the trade.

It is difficult to decide which form of advertising is the best. A certain method will fit the conditions in one community and will apply less well in another. Generally speaking, a combination of the different forms of advertising, using the term in its broadest sense, is to be preferred. Window decorations, newspaper display advertising coöperative and individual—handbills, articles in newspapers and periodicals, reminder cards in delivered packages and stickers on them, and propaganda in the form of proclamations by public officials, are some of the ways of getting the subject of Mothers' day before the public.

According to all advertising experts, stress should be laid on the sentiment back of Mothers' day. There is no other holiday which holds so universal an appeal as does Mothers' day, for there is not a man, woman or child in the world who has not a mother, living or in memory. Mothers' day does not appeal to any particular class or type—it appeals to all. Therefore, it is to the sentiment in us all that florists should appeal in advertising.

Every florist is familiar with the meaning of Mothers' day, and the only problem is to decide how to bring enlightenment to the general public. Enlightenment and interest, in this case, are practically synonymous, as enlightenment is practically certain to arouse emotion, which is nothing more than heart interest.

Mother Has Her Day in the Florists' Show Window.

Window Displays.

Window displays have proved effective in making business, and this form of advertising allows the use of more originality and skill, perhaps, than any other. It is a simple form of advertising, also, and one every store can use. However, window display alone is hardly adequate to obtain the fullest results from Mothers' day. The window reaches only that part of the public which chances to pass the florist's store; it is not taken to them.

If the most simple window display is all that is considered possible, besides the showing of flowers a neatly lettered card or a picture of "Mother" will serve for a start. The best known picture for the purpose is Whistler's portrait of his mother, but there are other reproductions of the works of the best artists which may be arranged as the foreground for a display of flowers—or they may be arranged in any way which appeals to the individual retailer as being the most effective for his purpose. A display of suitable flowers and plants, with nothing more than a poster announcing the date of Mothers' day and suggesting flowers for the occasion, may suffice if the retailer is disinclined to attempt more elaborate decoration. However, a window display should be one to attract attention because of its unusual features and an out-of-the-ordinary display may pay big dividends.

Whether coöperative or independent newspaper advertising is better is a question upon which a great deal may be said pro and con. The individual florist must decide this for himself in the light of his circumstances. Coöperative advertising probably is to be preferred for the smaller businesses and in the smaller cities and towns. The prominent feature of the display should be a brief explanation of the meaning of Mothers' day, with its appeal to the emotions. While the fact that flowers are for sale should be given a place in the advertisement, and possibly the names of florists' concerns should be used, these should not be allowed to predominate, for the idea is not so much to call attention to where flowers may be purchased—for everybody knows they are the stock in trade of florists—but to create a desire to have flowers for Mothers' day.

In the case of the coöperative advertisement, the reader is nearly certain to patronize the florist with whom he is accustomed to deal, or the florist located in his neighborhood, if no florists' names and addresses are printed.

Coöperative Publicity.

Some coöperative newspaper display advertisements are a combination of the advertisements of several florists, in conjunction with which is printed a general appeal, intended to enlighten the public on the subject of Mothers' day and arouse interest. Others, most commonly used by florists' clubs and other similar organizations, contain an explanation, usually brief, of Mothers' day, and something intended to create interest in flowers and a desire for them on the holiday. It is an unsatisfactorily answered question which of these forms is to be preferred.

Handbills are a rather crude form of advertising, though some florists have used them to advantage. In the smaller towns handbills are more appropriate than in the cities, but they still are used by many small florists catering to localities in big cities. These handbills should carry a message similar to that of newspaper advertisements.

A florist with a trade which he knows to be regular, in which he has many friends and acquaintances, can use reminder cards with good results. If mailed, either as postcards or as the contents of envelopes, they should be planned with the idea of making an appeal which would seem to the recipient to be personal. Cards of an artistic style and make-up, especially if sent to high-class trade, usually prove extremely beneficial. Such cards no doubt would produce results if inserted in flower deliveries for a few days previous to Mothers' day. Stickers fall into almost the same classification, though they naturally will not make an appeal of as personal a nature as cards.

Valuable Proclamations.

There are great possibilities in proclamations by public officials, especially if the officials be popular. Florists, individually or collectively, who can obtain the ear and attention of the governor of a state, or the mayor of a city, and interest such an official in Mothers' day, can obtain considerable advertising of a desirable nature if they can prevail upon the governor or mayor, or both, to issue a Mothers' day proclamation, calling attention to the significance of the day. If flowers are mentioned, so much the better, but if the governor will advertise Mothers' day the florists should be willing to advertise the flowers. Such proclamations would be printed by every newspaper and likely given a prominent position.

Newspaper "readers," properly written, will prove of value to the trade in arousing interest in Mothers' day. If a newspaper writer can be induced to lend his services, either with or without remuneration, a "reader" program can easily be carried out. If these articles are printed each day, or on alternate days, in the few days preceding the date of Mothers' day, they are certain to call the attention of the public to the holiday and arouse an interest which will mean increased sales.

Big Business Probable.

There is no reason why Mothers' day this year should not eclipse those of former years, viewed from the standpoint of the florist. There is a universal feeling of thankfulness and rejoicing because of the cessation of hostilities in Europe, while the men who have returned from service in the army and navy have a deeper and greater appreciation of their families and homes, in which, as a rule, "mother" is the most prominent feature. The trade should use every legitimate means to profit by these conditions and add another record-breaking day to the list of big days of the last year. Mothers' day is May 11.

ALL FLOWERS SELL NOW.

It does not take a long memory to go back to the day when Mothers' day, just beginning to become known, was limited because only white carnations were wanted by the public. It was apparent that the demand must be turned into more general lines or the observance of the day would amount to little, for the simple reason that the supply of white carnations was and always will be strictly limited.

To show a way around this obstacle The Review, which had been the first to call attention to the possibilities which lay in the new flower day, carried this couplet:

For Mothers at home, flowers bright;
For Mother's memory, flowers white.

It was recommended that every florist advertise Mothers' day and use this couplet. For two or three years the lines appeared in one form or another in practically every advertisement florists used—and it did the trick.

The demand has been turned into general lines—today there is no flower of the day. All flowers sell. The result is that Mothers' day affords the trade an opportunity equal to Christmas or Easter and limited only by the limits of our stock of flowers and plants.

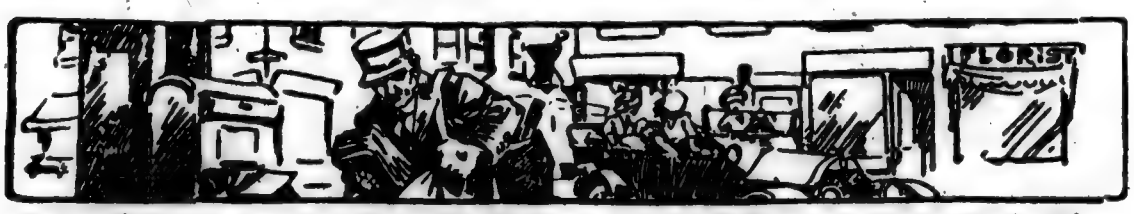
LABOR FOR MOTHERS' DAY.

Organized labor, through the medium of the American Federationist, the official organ of the American Federation of Labor, has endorsed the idea of Mothers' day. While the use of flowers is not recommended for the holiday in the editorial on the subject, the endorsement cannot help but be of value to florists, as is anything which tends to interest the public in Mothers' day.

In part, the editorial of the American Federationist says:

"The service rendered our nation and its people by the mothers of our land has been the greatest source of our country's strength and inspiration. No one suffered more in heart and mind, in body and soul, yet no one more willingly contributed that which is most dear to a mother, her son, his life and blood in order that our nation might live and that our lives might be free. No other class is doing so much for the home, the moral and social uplift of our people, for a better government and a higher and more inspiring civilization as are the mothers of our land.

"Let us therefore honor ourselves by expressing our gratitude and by giving emphasis to the home and to our mothers as the fountainhead of all human advancement and progress, stability of government and the ultimate hope of a better day."



A Commendable Type of Individual Ad.

CAPE JASMINES.

Alvin, Tex.—Carlisle & Son, who are florists, say that they do not recall a season when the cape jasmines have promised finer quality, but the season is one of the latest on record. The weather has been cold and unfavorable for the development of the buds at the usual date. Speaking April 23, they did not expect to make any shipments before May 20 and not heavily until May 25, which will still be in good time for Memorial day. The Alvin shippers are looking forward to a fine season.

Alvin, Tex.—C. W. Benson made a tour of the growers April 26 and says he has never seen the cape jasmines so backward as they are this season. He believes, however, that shipping will begin May 10 and that he will succeed in cutting eighty per cent of his crop by Memorial day. He fears higher prices and higher express rates may have some effect in holding orders down, or he would expect the largest demand on record.

Lincoln, Ill.—L. Copeland, who recently returned from overseas duty in the army, has been placed in charge of a part of the range of Gullett & Sons, of this city.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

MEADER BUYS LILYWHITE.

I want to report to you an item of considerable interest to the trade, the sale of the principal stock of our new early forcing, all-white gladiolus, Lilywhite.

We have been selling Lilywhite for several years and have the best of commendation in reports of its value. Up to date there has been no spotless, all-white gladiolus of the quality required by florists for early forcing purposes. Lilywhite is early, forces perfectly, is of ideal shape and type of spike and individual bloom. It is also a rapid propagator, making an ideal all-white gladiolus of which the florists have long been in need.

Under the arrangements of the sale, four-fifths of all sizes of the bulbs have been purchased by H. E. Meader, of Dover, N. H., who is at present vice-president of the American Gladiolus Society. Mr. Meader is himself a progressive florist and, having tested the variety for several years, is enthusiastic over it from the standpoint of the florist. Lilywhite will probably be offered to the trade, as well as sold at retail the coming season, while Mr. Kunderd, the originator, is allowed to sell only at retail for the first three years from time of the sale. The price which Mr. Meader paid for that portion of the stock which he has secured is $3,000. Considering that the shipment amounted to less than two full barrels, this is perhaps the highest price yet paid for a gladiolus. There have been higher prices paid for gladiolus stocks than in this instance, but the quantity of bulbs was much larger and the purchaser secured practically the entire stock, whereas in this case the variety has already been considerably disseminated, as well as one-fifth of the stock being reserved.

A. E. Kunderd.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS."

The florist has awakened to the fact that it is essential for him to advertise his business and products, as other lines have been doing for years.

The foundation of success can almost invariably be traced to successful advertising. The benefit of advertising "Say It with Flowers" has already been proved to the most skeptical. The S. A. F. publicity committee is trying to raise $100,000. With over 10,000 florists in the United States, all of whom will benefit because of this advertising campaign, the amount needed should come overnight.

Why should this committee beg for subscriptions, when you, Mr. Florist, get such big returns on a small investment?

Get in line with the other fellow, who has already contributed, and do your share. Write now and enclose a check for all you can to Secretary John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York. He will thank you and you will be thankful yourself that your duty has been done.

C. C. Pollworth.

THE BAD CHECK GAME AGAIN.

As a warning to our brothers over the entire country, I wish you would please announce in your paper that there is a young soldier going around from place to place, cashing worthless checks. He claims that he receives these checks from his mother, who has placed her signature on them, and the writing looks very much like the handwriting of an elderly person; he also presents credentials he had while in the army. He has been to a number of people here in St. Louis. He presents a check for $10 or $15 and asks for change back.

FLORISTS TO BANQUET.

Invitations to the sixth annual banquet of the Saginaw-Bay City Floricultural Society, held at the rooms of the Colonial Club, Bay City, Mich., the evening of April 29, were issued by Henry W. F. Goetz, secretary. The society has members from Bay City and Saginaw, Mich. Reservations for the affair were in the hands of Rudolph G. Boehringer, chairman of the banquet committee.

F. T. D. STILL GROWING.

It took some time for the trade to appreciate the value of the F. T. NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Another Benefit Noted.

There are many ardent supporters of our campaign who have followed the work closely enough to assure themselves that our efforts to increase business are yielding a bumper measure of success.

The following letter, from a well-known firm, vouches for a direct benefit resulting from the publicity campaign:

Lincoln, Ill., April 19, 1919.

Mr. John Young, Sec'y, New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Enclosed please find check for $50 in payment of our subscription for 1919 to the Florists' Publicity Fund. We are finding evidence of substantial returns from this advertising from a source we had little thought of, until we began to notice such evidence in the increase of orders from it. This source is the better class of magazine readers in a number of little towns. We can only attribute the increase in the number of accounts from these smaller towns to the attractively planned advertisements placed in the various magazines of wide circulation.

It is our belief that while there will not be the great scarcity of flowers during the next year that has prevailed since the summer of 1918, nevertheless demand will be so largely augmented by the highly intelligent advertising campaign now being prosecuted by our national society that prices will be at least in a considerable measure sustained. Yours truly, Gullett & Sons.

If it were needed, this letter might be taken as a direct endorsement of the policy of our committees to confine our advertising to the national magazines of general circulation. Our subscribers are to be found in practically every section of the country. Therefore our advertising mediums must cover equitably every bit of territory of the United States, in which case they also, necessarily, cover Canada. To every million subscribers to these magazines, it is safe to add at least four million readers, for it is universally admitted that the average of readers for each copy put out is five persons. Small wonder, then, that our publicity is far-reaching.

Watch the Work.

If non-subscribers would give a little thought to these facts, and, as well, make it their business to inspect our advertisements in magazines which surely come to their hands in some way, considerable impetus would be given to the campaign. The "broadside" recently sent out by our promotion bureau, and which is now in the hands of the trade in every section of this country, gives full information as to where our advertisements are to be seen and also describes the various aids for making local connection with them. It is to the interest of every florist to make this connection, either through the newspaper electrotypes provided, or by projection in moving picture theaters of the lantern slides furnished for this purpose. Anyone who has not received a broadside should make immediate application to the secretary for one.

Your secretary is now making a trip through the middle states in the interests of the campaign.

John Young, Sec'y.

IT'S UP TO YOU.

Do You Want to Do Your Share?

Is the average florist a good business man? This is the question I have often heard discussed—and cussed. Well, it is really hard to say, but there is no doubt that the majority who are good business men have made a success of their venture in the florists' business despite poor conditions and lack of proper organization. And then there are some who will have to be classed as successful because they made money "without the foolish expenditure of money for advertising," or the help of the national organization, or any of the large trade organizations. Such a man is in a class that is known the world over as "selfish," feeling that someone else is spending his time and money and that he will share in the results. By comparison, we class him just as an American does the uneducated and, perhaps, unfortunate, of some of the trouble-burdened countries for which America went into the war, with the hope to some day take him by the hand and say, "My friend, my work has not been in vain, for now you see the light."

For the General Welfare.

How few of the craft know of or care for the great work done in their behalf in protecting them from bad legislation, or from fraud through lack of knowledge, or from losses they would have sustained without that knowledge! There are those who do untiring work for the benefit of all in the trade and who ask as their reward only results. So when you are asked for your just share of expense as a contribution toward the national publicity campaign, you are enjoying a distinct privilege.

The slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is given you to use without question. Are you so ungrateful or short-sighted as not to see what it all means to you? The moneys contributed are used mostly in national magazine advertising contracts. In order to secure space in the leading publications, orders must be given two or three months in advance of publication, which means if we are to spend money for the starting of a vigorous campaign when the late summer and fall crops are in, we must have assurance that we can meet our obligations, that's all.

That's the story. Now it is up to the trade, to all concerned in every branch of our industry. Let's hear from you.

George Asmus,
Chairman of Finance Committee,
S. A. F. Publicity Campaign.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Following actual summer heat and a severe electrical storm, the mercury dropped to the freezing point the morning of April 18. It goes without saying that much anxiety is felt regarding the possible results of the frost.

Now that Easter is over and the florists have had time to size the situation up, there seems to exist the unanimous opinion that the holiday trade was, in the words of many florists, "phenomenal—absolutely the best ever experienced." With the exception of carnations, there was a sufficiency of practically all varieties of cut flowers. Contrary to expectations, greens were fairly plentiful. Asparagus plumosus ran from $30 to $50 per hundred bunches; Sprengeri, $40 to $60, and Massachusetts ferns of fine quality $5 per thousand. Roses averaged from $8 to $40 per hundred, with American Beauties from $10 to $75. Lilies were $35 and sweet peas $1 to $2.50, though a few sold wholesale at $3. The season being so late, violets were poor and scarce.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club, scheduled for the evening of May 6, has been postponed to the following evening. The change was made to suit the convenience of Dr. Otto E. Jennings, the principal speaker of the session, who is delivering a series of lectures on agricultural botany at the University of Pittsburgh. Dr. Jennings, who is curator of the Carnegie museum, has chosen for his subject at the florists' club meeting, "How Plants Came to Be on Earth," to be illustrated with stereopticon views. The meeting will be open to the public.

Howard E. Andrews is at Camp Devens, near Ayer, Mass., following his return from overseas, where he served with the Signal Corps in the Twenty-fifth Division. He is expected to resume his work in the landscape department of the A. W. Smith Co. within a short time. Director John B. Strayer, of the Smith company, has just completed a planting for the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co., and has closed a contract to rearrange the old grounds and lay out a new cemetery in Massillon, O.

M. Crest is proprietor and A. Lindenberg is manager of the new Diamond Flower Shop, on Diamond street, next the Harris theater, which operated under the name of C. H. Savage & Co. This is Mr. Crest's first experience in the flower business. Mr. Lindenberg has seen service with both the Victoria Flower Shop and the William Penn hotel flower shop, having been employed at the latter for a time by E. S. James.

Arthur James, a brother of E. S. James, is making a success of his work at Oneco, Fla., where he went into the growing end last fall. His crop includes greens and castor beans, the latter for the government. Recently he sent north a fine consignment of ferns and other plants.

Miss H. Eleanor Sutton and Miss Bessie Hazen have been added to the sales force of the A. W. Smith Co. Miss Elizabeth Curry is a new assistant in the artificial flower department and Mrs. C. Ripple is new in the packing room.

The sales staff of the Alpha Flower Co. has been increased by the addition of Miss Lillian Marchand and Thomas J. Georgitos, both new at the game. Samuel Cinkart, formerly with Harris Bros., is a new chauffeur with the Alpha company.

Isaac Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, was a recent visitor here. E. E. S.

Geraniums

GERANIUM DISEASE.

My experience of thirty-five years growing geraniums has been varied. This spring I had 3,000 plants that turned yellow. I sprayed with Bordeaux mixture. Every leaf came off. Then I began to soak the plants, and kept at it. Now they are as fine plants as one ever saw. What caused the leaves to turn was because they were too dry. I shall never try them dry again, except the tops. I water the pots, not the tops. Try it, and give them plenty of air. You will have plants. J. F. Sked.

GERANIUMS FOR NAMES.

I am sending two specimen leaves and blooms, marked No. 1 and No. 2. These plants were bought for Helen Michell geraniums. I have recently bought two different orders of Helen Michell from different florists. The last two are the same, so I judge they are the true Helen Michell. Can you tell me what No. 1 and No. 2 are?

H. J. P.—O.

I regret that the flowers when received were beyond identification. Geranium flowers are hard to ship long distances and, even when packed in damp moss, seldom arrive in a condition to make naming possible. Trusses or single flowers pressed before shipment are much the best, as the size of the florets and the color are more readily recognizable. C. W.

FOLIAGE BURNED OR DISEASED.

We are sending some geranium leaves with spots on them. Only a few plants are so affected. Can you tell us what is the trouble? We also are sending leaves from pelargoniums and primroses which seem to be affected in the same way, as they become spotted and rot. The primroses were bought last summer and were seemingly healthy. We potted them in 2½-inch pots and placed them in coldframes. Later some of the plants in one of the frames were attacked by this trouble, which kept spreading until it finally ruined the plants. Can you tell us a remedy for this disease?

R. & S.—O.

The geranium leaves had every appearance of having been sun-scalded. This is usually due to defective glass. The sun's rays, focused on the leaves through such glass, are liable to cause scalding, especially when the foliage is damp.

Primula obconica and malacoides, especially the former, are subject to a leaf disease, particularly if kept in a house where the plants get little sunshine and are kept too warm. Both the show pelargoniums and the primulas should be grown in a cool, airy and sunny house, needing only a light shade from direct sunshine in spring and none at all in winter. C. W.

BOSTON

The Market.

We are experiencing the usual after-Easter reaction and values have taken a decided drop. The demand has been somewhat limited and clearances are only made with difficulty. This is the inevitable result of the forcing up of prices for special occasions. Roses are in heavy supply and prices have come down with a crash. Plenty of short-stemmed flowers can now be had at $10 to $15 per thousand; good 12-inch stock, at $2 per hundred. There is a moderate supply of American Beauties, but only a poor call for them. Francis Scott Key is now coming of extra good quality and sells well. Carnations have held up better than roses and are making $3 to $5 per hundred. Continued cold weather keeps their quality good. Violets, except a few doubles, are over. Sweet peas are abundant and the bulk of them sell at $1 and $2 per hundred. Pansies and primroses are less abundant.

Callas and lilies have both taken a decided drop. Narcissi keep up in price and some were sold as high as $10 per hundred a week ago, the highest ever known here. Outdoor daffodils were badly blistered by the cold wave last week. Spanish irises are much more abundant and snapdragons are hard to move. Quite a little Delphinium Belladonna is seen, but it does not sell particularly well. There is a good supply of Cattleya Mossiæ. The call for asparagus is rather light and trade in flowering plants is quiet.

The result of Easter, from latest reports, seems to have been better for wholesalers than for retailers. The lack of telephone service hurt the latter and there were more unsold flowering plants than expected.

Various Notes.

Boston witnessed the greatest military parade in its history April 25, when the 26th, or Yankee Division, marched through five miles of the principal streets, cheered by 1,500,000 spectators. Florists sold large quantities of laurel wreathing for the triumphal arches; but the use of flowers was meager, compared with what it should have been on such an auspicious occasion. The populace bombarded the troops with candy and cigarettes, while in Paris, London, Jerusalem, and other foreign cities, we read that the people strew flowers in the paths of the returning soldiers and have floral bombardments.

Boston and New England experienced a disastrous cold wave April 24, 25 and 26. Temperatures in the city fell to 28 degrees and several degrees lower outside. The ground was frozen hard for two days and the bitter wind, added to the frost, caused much damage to vegetation, which had looked so promising. Tree peonies, magnolias and other early flowers are entirely destroyed. Even larkspurs, phloxes and other hardy perennials are, in most cases, black and withered. A large part of the lilac trusses are ruined, while peach, plum and other fruit blossoms, just about to open, are almost hopeless. Much damage was done to early vegetable seeds. Vegetation was early and it does not pay to have the months of March and April reversed climatically. On the morning of April 27 the writer took ice half an inch thick from a tank of water. How fortunate for florists that they escaped this visitation for Easter!

W. S. Phelps, of Lexington, had a handsome lot of Delphinium Belladonna for Easter. He forces quite a variety of other hardy perennials and finds a good demand for them. He also specializes in irises, anemones and ranunculi.

S. J. Goddard states that he had by far the largest Easter business in his history and that lack of telephone service greatly increased his sales, as customers bought more after seeing plants and flowers than they would have if they used the telephone.

The Boston Sunday Herald for April 27 contained a thrilling full-page, illustrated article on E. H. Wilson's recent trip to Formosa and Korea. The Asiatic redwoods of the Formosan forests, growing at elevations of 6,000 to 8,000 feet, attain a height of 200 or 300 feet, and many are of an estimated age of 3,000 to 4,000 years. Scattered among them were retinisporas, or Asiatic white cedars, 200 feet high, with a circumference of branches of as much as 657 feet.

Maurice H. Hambro, for seven years salesman for H. M. Robinson & Co., has left their employ and now has a position as salesman for N. F. Comley at the Coöperative Market.

Adolph E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, is bringing in a handsome lot of white and yellow marguerites. He obtained as much as $6 per hundred for yellows at Easter.

The Boston Floral Supply Co. had a banner Easter trade. The company is receiving increasing shipments of cut flowers and is preparing roomy ice chests for future use. They are making extended preparations for Memorial day.

Fred E. Palmer, of Brookline, will lecture at the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, May 20. His subject will be "Some Fundamentals of Proper Accounting for Florists."

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

The Market.

The local florists made great preparations for the Easter trade this year. They anticipated a busy time and were not disappointed. The volume of business transacted was far in advance of that of last year. There was never a more beautiful showing than that on hand this year.

Bulbous stock, consisting of hyacinths, daffodils and tulips, was in largest supply. In some cases hyacinths were all sold out by Saturday noon. Many people took these, as they were less expensive than some of the other varieties of plants. Few lilies were to be had and the firms who did have them say that people did not expect to be able to get these flowers, and did not even price them. The few that were displayed had unusually short stems. They brought 50 cents per bud and bloom. The yellow and white callas that were used to replace Easter lilies did not go well.

Outside of bulbous stock, rambler roses were most plentiful and they sold fairly well. The supply of bougainvilleas was a close second. These were extremely popular. Some of the larger plants, which were grown in basket shape and displayed in elaborate baskets, made a splendid showing and were snatched up eagerly. They appealed to people as something new. Spiræas and hydrangeas were good sellers, while rhododendrons, genistas, marguerites, cinerarias, begonias, heather, Martha Washingtons, primroses and pansies went well.

Corsage bouquets were especially popular this year and the trade in them was unprecedentedly heavy. Some members of the trade report that violets were not good this year. They sold at $3 to $4 per hundred. On account of the poor quality of violets, sweet peas were in exceptionally great demand and a shortage resulted. A bunch containing twenty-five stems sold for $2. Roses were plentiful and sold at $3 to $9 per dozen, while American Beauties brought $12 to $24 per dozen. From $1.50 to $3 per dozen was asked for carnations, the supply of which was small.

Considerable funeral work came in with the Easter rush.

Various Notes.

Victor Carwedean reports that his Easter business was splendid. He was completely sold out of everything.

Robert H. Hawkins featured a window containing nothing but bougainvillea. The baskets and pots were covered with lavender and the handles with white crepe paper. It made a beautiful showing. These plants took the place of azaleas and were in such demand that every plant was sold.

Julius Reck had some splendid genistas. His hyacinths and daffodils were in fine shape. He was cleaned out of everything. Mr. Reck says that on account of the late Easter, the work for that holiday crowds on the spring work.

The Park Garden & Flower Shop had a great demand for corsage bouquets. Spiræas and rambler roses were featured in place of lilies. This concern's hyacinths were completely sold out the day before Easter.

John Reck & Son say that business was extremely satisfactory. The bulk of sales ran to flowering plants, as cut flowers were unreasonably high. The firm specialized in plant baskets of various types and combinations. Easter lilies were not missed here, as there were few calls for them. Madonna lilies and yellow and white callas, which were featured to replace the Easter lily, did not sell well. Azaleas were scarce. Rhododendrons, roses, spiræas, hyacinths, daffodils and tulips were in most plentiful supply. This firm reports that violets were so poor as to make it unsatisfactory to handle them. For this reason, sweet peas were in great demand. This brought about a shortage and the prices of these flowers went quite high. Customers did not object to the prices of plants, but they did object to the high prices of cut flowers.

James Horan & Son had a number of lilies, but say that people did not seem to care for them. The public seemed to have an idea that lilies could not be obtained and did not bother to price them. This firm had a number of Azalea mollis, French hydrangeas and several varieties of rhododendrons. There were also a number of cinerarias on hand. There were no spiræas in bloom. These had been held back so that they would not bloom before Easter, and when it was attempted to force them the weather was so cloudy that it was impossible to get them ready in time.

James E. Beach reports a bigger Easter trade this year than ever. He had a number of lilies, short-stemmed but nice plants. Mr. Beach's hyacinths were plentiful. His potted marguerites were splendid. He sold out a few azaleas and rhododendrons, all he had on hand, before Easter.

A letter was received recently by one of the local florists from Edward Ferkins, formerly foreman for James E. Beach. He is still connected with Y. M. C. A. work in London. He mentioned that carnations were a shilling apiece in January and that he has seen some splendid roses, narcissi, stocks, wallflowers, lilies of the valley, rhododendrons, azaleas and hydrangeas. I. L. B.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market during the last week was quiet, with the usual readjustments following an active Easter trade. Arrivals have not been heavy and clearances not particularly difficult.

The weather has been rather detrimental to flower development. Frosts the last few nights have damaged unprotected spring flowers which usually, at this season, are cut outside.

There is considerable speculation as to the peony crop for Memorial day. A few weeks ago there was reason to believe that the crop would be passed by May 30, but now it is feared that it will not be reached, if present conditions continue.

Roses continue in good supply and their movement is satisfactory. Although prices show no great strength, there is no material change to be reported, except in the case of American Beauties, of which a small surplus is moved at concessions conducive to a clearance. The cold weather favors the quality, which is quite good for the season.

Carnations are not plentiful and the color supply is somewhat uneven. The quality is better than usual for this stage of the season. The range of prices has fallen to 4 to 6 cents, with 3 cents for splits and inferiors.

Gardenias are in heavy supply and prices have dropped low. The best flowers are bringing $4 per dozen, the rest moving at any price down to $4 per hundred.

Orchids are not abundant, but there is little demand for them. Cattleyas range from 35 to 75 cents, the higher figure covering the best gigas and hybrids.

There is still a good supply of bulbous flowers, chiefly narcissi and tulips, which bring as much as 75 cents per bunch for the best. Some good lilies of the valley are available at 12 cents, with inferior grades moving at as low as 2 cents. Easter lilies are dragging somewhat in the market, selling at 8 to 12 cents.

There are quantities of other flowers, such as delphiniums, daisies, snapdragons, Spanish irises, calendulas, wallflowers, mignonette, myosotis, lilacs, pansies and stocks, which meet a moderate demand.

Various Notes.

A special meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the club's rooms April 28, called in the interest of the club's activities in the matter of the Victory loan. J. S. Rogers, a well-known Wall street man, made an address which went home to those present, whose number was few, hardly more than twenty, with the result that over $24,000 was subscribed on the floor. Owing to the division of interests experienced by the florists' section, it is going to be no easy matter to attain the quota of $250,000 set by the government. President Philip F. Kessler is giving the greater part of his time to the work, realizing that conditions attaching to the club's efforts are not so favorable as were those in the last loan drive, but he has every hope of attaining the mark set.

The old Brooklyn landmark building, commonly known as the Triangle, at Fulton, Pearl and Willoughby streets, the apex of which has been occupied by Florist Mallon, or, rather, the Mallon family, for over sixty years, is to be torn down and a modern structure for office purposes built on the site, by the United Cigar Stores Co.

Park Commissioner Harman, whose assistance in our flower show projects has always been cheerfully forthcoming, gave evidence of his own ability as a horticultural show man in the recent Easter show at Prospect park, Brooklyn. One of the finest exhibitions ever staged under municipal ownership was produced and the crowds which visited it undoubtedly will eventually come under the influence of the slogan of the publicity campaign, "Say It with Flowers."

The schedule committee having in charge the preparation of the preliminary schedule for the International Flower Show, to be held in the Grand Central Palace next March, met at the headquarters of the New York Florists' Club, 1170 Broadway, April 28. Notwithstanding the fact that the parade of the Rainbow Division was during the meeting in full view from the windows of the room occupied, the committee kept to the work of schedule adjustment, the members being satisfied with an occasional view between schedule sections.

"Billy" Hanft, who has been with Young & Nugent, 42 West Twenty-eighth street, for the last eight years, is now with Adolph Meyer, 1062 Madison avenue, and will have in charge the decorations in the new Hotel Pennsylvania as part of his duties.

The wedding, April 23, of the daughter of the multimillionaire Andrew Carnegie, and Ensign Miller, U. S. N., at the Carnegie home on Fifth avenue, was conspicuous through the wealth of floral decorations—but it is understood they were of the home-made variety.

Secretary Young, of the S. A. F., is making a trip through the middle west.

James McLaughlin, manager of the wholesale department of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, was in the city April 25 and called on several of our wholesalers. Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., was a visitor April 28, to attend the meeting of the schedule committee of the International Flower Show.

Lewis & Valentine, the nurserymen of Roslyn, L. I., have leased the vacant lot at 1010 Fifth avenue, corner of Eighty-second street, and will plant it as an exhibition garden. J. H. P.

A little daughter was born in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James McHutchison March 29. Mother and daughter are doing well.

An exhibition of plants and flowers will be held by the Horticultural Society May 10 and 11, in the Museum building, New York Botanical Garden. Schedules are now ready for distribution and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

The Queen City Seed & Nursery Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., reports excellent business. Quoting President Henry H. Elbers, who has charge of th› outdoor department, the concern has already much business in hand for spring planting and will be taxed to full capacity. The store is 60x80 feet, with double window frontage, facing Washington market, and supplied with the latest in furnishings and equipment. Evidently it was a happy conception of the organizers, both as to time and location.

Sunnyside Greenhouses, at Dover, N. J., contain, among other fine things, the finest lot of geraniums one could wish to see. Harry Payne, the veteran proprietor, observed that "there is no great secret in growing good stock," and mentioned that their method of culture was to place the rooted cuttings in flats—keeping the plants dry, in fact. The stock was watered but three times during the winter. By so doing and by picking out the eyes, stocky plants are formed. About the end of February they are put into 3½-inch pots to remain until budded out. The flats occupy the space vacated by chrysanthemums. Scarlet Bedder, a variety originally from Vincent, is certainly a dazzler. It should be more widely known. Another item worthy of special mention is Calla Elliottiana.

* * * *

J. H. Gould, of Middleport, N. Y., called attention to a bench of Adiantum O'Brianii, stock of which was given him by William Scott and mentioned in The Review of December 6, 1900. It is of the hardy Capillus-Veneris type and possibly the best maidenhair for cutting. Illustrating how conditions change, mention was made at that time—December 6, 1900—that it hardly paid to grow show pelargoniums for Easter, owing to the large variety of more suitable plants, whereas now the geranium family will become the most valuable of all. Both the show kinds, such as Easter Greeting, and the zonales, such as Ricard, were much in evidence this Easter.

THERE is plenty of business for the florist who goes after it.

JAMES MCHUTCHISON, New York, has returned to business after an absence of eleven months, due to illness.

AMONG the large number of new florists are many women. Especially in the smaller cities, the business has a strong attraction for the ladies.

SECRETARY JOHN YOUNG is making another of his trips in the interest of the S. A. F. and the publicity campaign. He is in the middle west this week.

STILL going up! The price of printing plates, halftones, zinc etchings and electrotypes was advanced again at Chicago May 1, this time ten per cent.

DOZENS of new flower stores are being opened all over the country, but especially in the middle west, where there still are many towns in which retailing has been done only from greenhouses.

THE public will pay reasonable prices for bedding plants, but it will be a mistake to go so far that customers will not buy with something approaching their usual freedom.

JAMES L. DENMEAD, of Marshalltown, Ia., reports that he has a Red Laddie carnation. He found it in a batch of plants, the cuttings for which were obtained of Dorner.

ANOTHER thing the plant quarantine is doing is to delay preparations for another national flower show. Chairman Asmus says the committee does not feel like proceeding until the effect of the quarantine has been demonstrated.

WITH so many new people starting in the florists' business, it again becomes in order to advise that one of the first steps is to get a printed letter-head. Some of the houses best worth dealing with refuse wholesale prices to those whose connection with the trade is not apparent.

THE trade might as well accept the quarantine as a fact. Whatever we may think of its necessity or purpose, it is a condition we can not at present escape, and we may as well do the best we can under it while patiently waiting the day we can make our wishes respected at Washington.

THE only thing likely to interfere with the production of stock next season is the difficulty of securing enough competent help. Good growers are scarce.

IT is safe to say that little putty will be used on greenhouses this season; the new glazing cements are crowding it out of the field.

IT is reported that the inability to get the necessary quantity of Manetti stocks has compelled the E. G. Hill Co. to cut down the orders taken for grafted plants of Rose Premier, which has been the best selling novelty ever put out in America.

DON'T throw away the bulbs of the Spanish irises; none can be imported next year for fear of bringing in insects or diseases threatening American agriculture. Instead of dumping the bulbs, plant them out and see what can be done with them later.

THE fuel year is a month old, with no change except a slight tendency to strengthen May 1. There seems to be even less prospect than April 1 of cheaper fuel next season. Signing the peace treaty may precipitate a change in the situation, as it will bring miners' wages up for readjustment. How much chance do you think there is they will go down?

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

There is no florist so heedless that he has failed to note the change in the state of affairs with florists in the last six or seven months. It has become a "real" business, one we can all be proud of.

What has made the difference? Nothing but the opportunity to get a little more money for what we sell. It has put us on our feet.

And still there are florists who cut prices whenever they can!

BENEFICIAL, NOT HARMFUL.

From the Waterbury Democrat, of Waterbury, Conn., the following is taken:

Viewing the Easter parade from another angle yesterday, the florists' happy slogan, "Say It with Flowers," was almost the universal language. This custom bids well to put the telephone and telegraph companies out of business.

The editor of the Democrat evidently is not familiar with the idea of the F. T. D., or he would not have referred to the slogan as one likely to be detrimental to the business of the telephone and telegraph companies. The popularization of the slogan should boom the business of these companies, not harm it.

OUR PATHS DIVERGE.

The estimable lady who "founded" Mothers' day dislikes to have her ideas tinkered with—the white carnation was the symbol she chose and she insists that so it shall remain.

But the trade can not agree to the limitation of the business of the day to the available supply of white carnations—better let the observance drop than adhere to insignia the supply of which is so strictly limited by natural laws.

The Mothers' Day Association, of which Miss Jarvis is president and guiding spirit, has prepared an "official" poster it would like to have florists buy and use. And no doubt most florists would like to do it, except that it shows Uncle Sam putting a carnation in his buttonhole and the text advises that the badge (of Mothers' day) is the white carnation.

Everyone in the trade will regret that the florists and the lady to whom we are indebted for the idea can not work together, but so long as she and those associated with her insist on advertising the white carnation as the flower of the day, they will have to get along without our company. Our path lies in another direction.

CO-OPERATIVE ADVERTISING.

Coöperative Easter advertising as done by the florists of Albany, N. Y., is worthy of praise. A display advertisement seven and one-half inches deep and extending across four columns was published in the leading newspaper of the city just before Easter.

The advertisement was illustrated with an engraving showing an attractive young woman receiving a package of flowers from a delivery boy, who carried in his arms a potted Easter lily plant.

The slogan, "Say It with Flowers," was used three times in the advertisement. It was printed in large type over the illustration and twice in smaller type in the body of the layout.

Calling attention to the fact that Easter is a holiday always associated with flowers, the advertisement suggested "corsage bouquets for personal gifts; lilies, roses, sweet peas, spring flowers, hampers of growing plants and arrangements of flowers or growing plants in baskets," as suitable for gifts.

There was no signature on the advertisement, but at the bottom was printed: "All of the Albany florists have attractive Easter displays that are well worth seeing." This method of advertising has proved quite satisfactory to the Albany members of the trade.

GIRL BOOSTS TRADE.

To a girl of 14 years the florists of Waynesboro, Pa., give credit for an increase in their business. Some verses printed in a Waynesboro newspaper recently were written by the girl, Marguerite Truxal, and business immediately thereafter showed signs of stimulation.

The stanzas follow:

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS."

Say It with Flowers! If you wish to greet
A life but newly budded here;
A new child-blossom for this aged earth,
Send a sweet message of welcome dear;
"Say It with Flowers."

Say It with Flowers! If the natal day,
The birthday of someone who's dear,
You would remember lovingly
And show that to some heart they're very near;
"Say It with Flowers."

Say It with Flowers! Send fair messengers
To bear thy greetings to the bride;
Or to the fair young graduate
A message that you think of her with pride;
"Say It with Flowers."

Say It with Flowers! When a dread disease
Holds friend or dear one in its power
Send cheery thoughts, with blossoms twined,
To shed the sunlight through pain's weary hour;
"Say It with Flowers."

Say It with Flowers! If the angel dark
Takes from this earthly home a friend
Or some dear loved one, and thou fain wouldst send A token of tender sympathy;
"Say It with Flowers."

"Say It with Flowers" is used effectively in the verse, which is exceptionally good, especially so when the age of the writer is considered.

OBITUARY

P. J. Deuster.

P. J. Deuster, a well known florist of Milwaukee, died April 16 at his home on Blue Mound road. He was 75 years old. Surviving him, besides the widow, are a son, J. A. Deuster, of Portland, Ore., and a daughter, Mrs. F. Baxter, of Milwaukee. The funeral was held April 19 in the Holy Cross church, Milwaukee, and burial was made in Calvary cemetery.

Mrs. Mattie Dixon.

Mrs. Mattie Dixon, formerly owner of the Quality Flower Store, Fort Smith, Ark., died at a hospital in that city recently, following an operation. She was the wife of the late F. E. Dixon and a native of Ohio. She was born in Dayton July 3, 1870, and in that city spent her early life. She was married in Vincennes, Ind., twenty-two years ago. She had been a resident of Fort Smith for the last sixteen years and for several years was connected with the Quality Flower Store. Two daughters survive her, Mrs. E. C. Rooney and Mrs. Maurine Chamberlain, besides her father, mother and eight brothers, who reside at Grand Rapids, Mich.

GARDENERS' ASSOCIATION.

The executive board of the National Association of Gardeners for some time has had under consideration the advisability of establishing headquarters in New York city and recently opened an office at 286 Fifth avenue, New York. The secretary's hours will be from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., excepting by special appointment.

This step is a result of the increasing interest that is being shown in the service bureau of the association by country estate owners, which makes it desirable to be more conveniently located in relation to these clients of the association.

Members of the National Association of Gardeners, living in Boston and vicinity, will hold a spring conference May 16 in Horticultural hall, Boston. An interesting program is being arranged and all interested in the profession of gardening are invited to attend the conference. Those who have been present at previous Boston conferences know how interesting and entertaining these meetings are.

It is proposed to hold the annual convention of the association in Cleveland August 26 to 28. These dates have been chosen because horticulture in the vicinity of Cleveland is to be seen at its best at that time and weather conditions are usually favorable. The executive board will take final action on the convention date the latter part of May, and President Weeks will then appoint the convention committees.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

As a rule, the week after a holiday the market is slow and prices drop. This week, however, the market could not be classed as slow. The demand readily took care of the supply, even showing a shortage in some stocks, the principal line being carnations. The supply of roses was good, most of them being of fair grade and bringing good prices. Short American Beauties are plentiful, but the demand for these is unusually slow. The last few days the weather has been more favorable for production and stock is expected in larger shipments.

Various Notes.

The growers held a meeting in the salesrooms of the William F. Kasting Co., April 24. The object of the meeting was to determine a fair selling price for spring stock, of which the geranium is the principal item. The meeting resulted in a decision that at least twenty-five per cent should be added to last year's selling price.

Frank J. Baum had the misfortune to fall down the stairway leading to the boiler room of his plant last week. The result was an injured eye and a bruised face. Mr. Baum's hope now is that his face will have resumed its normal condition by April 29, the date of the Florists' Club's banquet.

Henry Krause and John Fiebelkorn, of the S. A. Anderson staff, left April 24 for New York, where they will spend a few days. Mr. Krause's brother is in one of the New York hospitals, having returned from overseas wounded.

F. P. A.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Market.

The business handled this Easter is generally regarded as the greatest in volume in this market for many years. Florists reported that the demand was fifty per cent greater than ever before and that there was a marked shortage of stock, notwithstanding that they had placed heavy orders in anticipation of such a condition.

The week after Easter, with the stocks depleted because of the demand of the preceding week, and with the full resumption of the spring social season, was marked by the continued firmness of prices. While sweet peas, gladioli and other local-grown stock are becoming more plentiful, there will be no decided reduction in prices, as every available plant and flower is in demand and the public is prepared to pay high prices for the best stock of any kind.

The prevailing shortage of stocks has been a severe test of the resourcefulness of the retail florists. A plan adopted in one instance, just before Easter, was to substitute tulips for carnations, at the price of the latter. Nearly every retailer with a greenhouse or nursery has been able to use some unexpectedly suitable stock that helped to stay the demand for the choicest cut flowers, which are received from the north.

An importation from Holland of a fine lot of Azalea mollis proved a factor in the Easter business of one florist. The plants were received two weeks before Easter and the buds were opening in profusion just in time for the Easter display. They made one of the most notable displays seen here. It was found that this stock was readily bought by the public, in place of potted lilies, which were decidedly scarce.

While prices are extremely satisfactory at present, they probably are less dependable in this market than in any other. In fact, there is no market here, such as there is in a section where there is extensive growing of commercial flowers. Practically all the stock is shipped in, and the time that the orders are placed and the condition in which they are received determine for each dealer the exact prices he can ask.

Roses will soon be the best stock to handle. Graduation exercises, weddings and other social affairs will assure a strong demand for this stock. The trend already is observable in most of the flower store windows and, as the best of these flowers is demanded, these beauty spots are seldom seen to better advantage than at present.

Sweet peas soon will be at their height and, as their popularity is great here, it is needless to say that the florists will not lag behind in either receipts from the north or in production.

Various Notes.

That through the activities and publicity of the New Orleans Garden Society, an organization of amateurs, there will be some new developments in the local commercial floral situation, is confidently expected by several prominent members of the trade. The professed immediate object of the society is to make New Orleans the foremost garden city of America.

The peculiar complaint known as the "sleeping sickness," now more or less prevalent in parts of the country, appears to have been partially the cause of the death of the 12-year-old son of Fred Ziegler, well known florist of this city. The boy had had influenza and the immediate cause of death was said to be acute inflammation of the brain, with hemorrhages, but before his death he exhibited symptoms of the strange malady.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

As is not infrequently the case, there was some recession in the volume of business the week after Easter. The next day after Easter there was a strong demand, indicating that retail stores had sold clean and were restocking, but in the middle of the week the demand was comparatively quiet, although it continued to be sufficient to take up everything that reached the market. There was some recession in rose values, the average price for last week being lower than some of the growers had anticipated. The reduction in price was unexpected by some of the producers for the reason that their cuts also were on the down grade and they had figured that the reduction in supply would counterbalance the reduction in demand. It did not do so.

The rose is easily the most important flower on the market. The supply of roses is large compared to the supplies of other flowers. The quality of the stock is fine and the prices, though not low, are low by comparison with the prices of other flowers, especially carnations. The market has a splendid assortment of roses. The day of the predominance of one variety is gone. There are large quantities of Columbia, Russell, Milady, Killarney Brilliant and Ophelia, with moderate supplies of Milady, Sunburst, Montrose, Double White Killarney and other good varieties. Chicago never had a better supply of roses than this spring, and Beauties may be included in this list.

It really is wonderful the way carnations sell and hold up in price. Of course a number of rather large producers went out of carnations last fall, either closing their houses or growing lettuce, which accounts for a reduction in the supply of low grade carnations. The quantity of fancy stock is more nearly normal. Even with last week's weak rose market carnations held up in price and this week they are selling so briskly that the prices have moved up another notch; good shipping stock is bringing 6 cents to 10 cents.

The supply of miscellaneous flowers is light. There are large quantities of sweet peas, but other stock is in only moderate supply. German iris is available in two or three colors, the yellow selling best because of the scarcity of other flowers of that color. The cut of lilies which did not quite make Easter has been used up and there are not many callas. Violets disappeared last week.

There is considerable mignonette. Buyers who want valley or daisies usually find it well to speak early. Snapdragon is less plentiful since Easter and calendulas have ceased to be an important item. Some nice lupines have been selling briskly and stocks, if good, sell well. The bulbous stock has practically disappeared. Cattleyas are on the short side, Mossiæ being the seasonal variety, one which is not grown largely in this neighborhood.

Mothers' Day Prospects.

Without having fully caught its breath after the Easter rush, the trade finds itself plunged into preparations for Mothers' day. Without the usual interval to permit the working up of stock, it appears that the supply this year will be far short of the demand. With everything selling clean now and crops on the down grade rather than increasing, it is a question where flowers are coming from to meet the big extra demand which is assured. It is impossible that there will be the usual supply of carnations; we have not had them at any time this season and we cannot by any possibility have them for Mothers' day. The supply of roses also is on the down grade; the cuts are going off with some growers and others are emptying their benches. There are no quantities of miscellaneous flowers in sight, even cape jasmines being late, but there is the probability that there will be quite a few peonies for Mothers' day this year; several southern plantations are just now attaining an age to give their first good early cuts.

The weather is helping at present. Some good growers estimate that the cold, dark weather the week before Easter had the result of reducing the Easter supply by as much as twenty-five per cent, but the cool weather since Easter has served to prolong the crops; the cool weather is making flowers for Mothers' day, while hot weather would shorten the supply. There are scarcely any pot plants in sight for Mothers' day.

It is perfectly apparent that there will be the largest demand thus far experienced for this new May flower day.

Bond Sales Progressing.

L. R. Bohannon and his Victory loan committee are feeling much encouraged over the progress recently made. While some of the growers still seem inclined to subscribe through the organizations in their home towns, instead of through the trade committee, several others have handed the florists' committee good subscriptions and it seems probable that the trade may reach its quota.

Henry Wehrman, with several assistants in an automobile, canvassed the growers west of the city last week and in almost every instance secured a duplicate of the subscription made for the fourth loan. The Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, has taken $10,000 of bonds through the trade committee and Mr. Wells, manager of Budlong's Gardens, has taken $5,000. Both these are subscriptions not on the list for the fourth loan. The committee now has to combat a disposition to hold back until the close of the drive. It urges everyone to turn in subscriptions at the earliest possible moment.

Various Notes.

Alois Frey has returned to Crown Point after his trip to California.

The first peonies of the season were reported April 24 by the E. C. Amling Co. The variety was Old Red and they came from Carbondale. They were ten days earlier than usual.

A. T. Pyfer, secretary of the Florists' Club, sent out a special call for a meeting of the club one day earlier than usual, on account of the regular meeting night coming too near Mothers' day. It announced a general discussion between growers, wholesalers and retailers with regard to the three big spring holidays.

F. M. Johnson and Eric Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., are spending a week on an eastern trip.

Clarence Smith, formerly foreman for Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, returned last week from the army. He had been thirteen days on the front line when he was wounded and sent back to the United States for his convalescence. He was just ready to go back to France when the armistice was signed and after some months' delay was given his choice of a discharge or rejoining his regiment. He chose to come back to the greenhouses.

George Asmus is extremely enthusiastic over the S. A. F. publicity campaign. He believes that it has been the greatest factor which ever operated to the improvement of conditions in the trade. No one can hear him discuss the subject without coming to share some of his enthusiasm.

Wietor Bros. are planting Rose Premier. They ordered 3,000 grafted and 4,000 own-root plants, but did not get the full quantity of grafts.

The joint committee of the wholesalers' and retailers' associations has a handsome "Say It with Flowers" for Mothers' day card in the street cars and "L" cars. They are waiting to hear from the new organization of growers, feeling that the producers are benefited as much as anyone and that they are in position to give the publicity work a big push.

Fifty-five years will have passed over the head of John Mangel on the day this issue of The Review reaches its Chicago readers. He was born in Sparta, May 2, 1864.

The George Wittbold Co. has taken an order from Bassett & Washburn for 20,000 Kentia Forsteriana and from Roy Wilcox for 25,000. These are 2-inch and 2¼-inch plants to be grown on at the establishments of the purchasers near Los Angeles. Louis Wittbold reports a recent inquiry on 50,000 small kentias to be shipped to Belgium. He declined to sell for that purpose.

In a circular letter to the trade G. M. Reburn asserts that last season's deliveries of bulbs by all sellers did not exceed thirty per cent of the aggregate of all orders. He predicts another general shortage this season.

That the season has been the best in their history is the report of Joseph Ziska & Sons. The great increase in the funeral flowers business last autumn has kept the Ziska wireworkers busy all season and the supplies department has profited by the shortage of flowers; accessories have been used more generally than when cut flowers were cheaper, they say.

John P. Risch thinks Mrs. Bayard Thayer is a rose that is too little appreciated by western growers. Weiland-Risch Co., at the Evanston greenhouses, is doing well with it and the customers like the color, shading from light to deep pink, and commend its keeping qualities.

Peter J. Schumer, the Evanston carnation grower, explains the shortage of carnation cuttings and the prospective scarcity of field-grown plants a little differently than do some of the others. The shortage usually is attributed to the scarcity of labor, the lateness with which the plants started last autumn and the high price of blooms. Mr. Schumer says all these were factors in limiting propagation, but that in addition he and many other growers in his section lost their first batch of cuttings because of the too fine sand they used. They were unable to get the same kind of sand they have had heretofore and the first batch of cuttings rotted instead of rooting. When they used coarser sand, letting the water through more freely, they again had the usual good success, but it was too late to root a surplus.

Alfred Froehlich returned April 25, after seeing action overseas; and he saw a lot of it, too. He sailed February 18, 1918, with Company I of the 16th Infantry, and went into the trenches April 24. They were in the battles of Cantigny, Soissons, St. Mihiel and later the big Argonne-Meuse drive. It was in this drive he was wounded twice, in the leg, and forced to return to the hospital, some three miles back. One bullet went just above the kneecap and the other would have done more damage had it not been for his watch, from which it glanced off. He was in the hospital from October 4, 1918, to January 6, 1919, and landed in Hoboken April 11. Now he is ready to do his bit in the florists' business. He is the son of Mrs. M. Froehlich, 5527 West Walton street.

M. A. Redden, who has the flower store at 820 West Garfield boulevard, has opened his second store, in the Cosmo theater building, at 7940 South Halsted street. He opened before Easter, in time for the big business.

Fred Stielow, of Niles Center, went to Oklahoma April 26 to look over his oil interests down there.

Edward Shapiro, who has for five years been with Geo. Fisher & Bro., has left to go to Marshall, Mich., to enter another line of business. Lewis Paskal is taking his place at Fisher's.

William F. Schofield has turned his limousine and chauffeur over to the Victory loan committee for their use.

Visitors.

Miss Emma Broz is a new florist at Peru, Ill. She has opened a store, with equipment from the fixtures department of the A. L. Randall Co., and was here a few days ago on a buying trip.

James L. Denmead, former banker and present florist at Marshalltown, Ia., spent several days here last week. The chief purpose of his trip was to meet his family coming home from Florida, but he likes to visit the points of trade interest in Chicago once a year to renew his enthusiasm for the business.

West Haverstraw, N. Y.—A. I. Brownsell now has an ideal retail plant and is much encouraged by the favorable showing. This is a striking instance of sticking to the colors.

Gould's Select

PEONIES

FOR MOTHERS' DAY, MAY 11th

This year the quality of our Select Peonies will be finer than ever before. This is a strong statement, because we have earned a reputation for growing wonderful commercial Peonies. The name, Gould's Select, is the buyer's guarantee of absolute satisfaction. Our series of Peony Farms, stretching from Tennessee to Wisconsin, assures you flowers grown under proper climatic conditions. We are specialists in Peony culture. You secure the benefit of carefully, scientifically grown stock. We are commercial shippers—you are guaranteed that the blooms are properly cooled, packed and shipped to reach you in perfect condition.

Order Early from A. L. Randall Company, Chicago, Ill.

Our crop is being marketed through the A. L. Randall Company, 180 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send your orders direct to them and your shipments will be made from Chicago, the country's greatest distributing center.

Order early, as there will be no surplus quantity of Peonies this year. Weather conditions have been favorable to producing quality flowers, but being rather cool, the quantity is below normal.

There will be some short-stemmed stock, but long Peonies will be in the majority. We advise ordering at least a proportion of the higher grades quoted below. These prices are for shipment for Mothers' Day.

The Market.

The market eased up considerably during the last week and again has a supply of seasonable stock that satisfies all demands. Business, too, has fallen off somewhat.

Roses and carnations are in good supply. Easter lilies and callas are rather plentiful and are running into an oversupply. Some excellent rubrum lilies may be had. The cut of sweet peas is extremely large. Among other offerings are snapdragons, larkspurs, calendulas, mignonette, forget-me-nots and wallflowers.

Greens are in fair supply and are selling well.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Suppose that a friend asked you to dine out; when you reached your home your nice dinner was waiting for you. A description of your feelings describes the market for the week following Easter. The market was overstocked.

The change from scarcity to overproduction came with startling rapidity. There were not nearly enough flowers before Easter; there were entirely too many afterward. It certainly was not the fault of the weather.

With high, cold winds and ice during the fourth week in April, the weather certainly did not stimulate production. There was little business. Weddings kept the stores going, but that was about all. Some talked about the Victory loan; some said it was circus week. The real truth is that everybody bought at Easter; few have bought since.

The market is worthy of careful study, because the character of the supply is changing. Roses are the main crop. Russell, Hadley and Beauty are the leading varieties, with Ophelia, Sunburst, Shawyer, Maryland and Double White Killarney in fine form. There are quantities of roses and they are good. Carnations are not so plentiful as roses, but their support is strong enough to maintain a rather good price.

Sweet peas are popular for weddings, especially fine blooms of the new crop. Easter lilies are abundant. It is thought that they will last until the peonies arrive and then disappear from the market for six months. Callas are slowly decreasing in number. Spanish irises are fine. There are two shades of yellow and two shades of blue. Outdoor valley is in; also Darwin tulips and daffodils. Snapdragons are much too plentiful. There are many yellow daisies and calendulas. Larkspur is fine. Orchids continue scarce. The Easter corsage work used them up so completely that it is hard to get them. Outdoor lilac is coming in from the south.

The market was strong at the opening, fair at the close and weak in the middle of the week. Prices are about one-half less than they were a week ago.

Holland Bulbs.

There have been fifty or sixty salesmen in this city recently, booking orders for Dutch and French bulbs for delivery in the late summer and early fall. Most of them represent well known Dutch bulb growing firms. Their European market is so much curtailed that our market is of greater importance to them than ever before.

The season just closed has been one of most unusual profits for bulb forcing. This would make order getting an easy and a pleasant task, were it not for the increase in price which our visitors say they must get this season. The advance is so tremendous as to stagger the would-be buyers. Some are taking a chance; some are holding off.

The American-grown bulbs do not seem to cut much figure yet, excepting the freesia. It seems likely that the Hollanders will get the orders before they go.

Various Notes.

Just inside his handsome store, M. J. Callahan was looking over an effective window arrangement. "Easter was good with us," Mr. Callahan said.

"People seemed to be willing to pay the prices, except possibly on lilies. We had a little trouble there. We dropped them late on Saturday, just to close out. Our plant business ran up into high figures. Everything in bloom sold well. In cut flowers we were not so fortunate. It was pretty hard to get anything except roses and our plants kept us busy. We did well with roses, though. There have been many weddings since Easter."

Edward Reid put a new Vim truck on the street April 25. It was inscribed, "Say It with Flowers."

The Rice men left the city April 22 on their ante-Memorial day trips. The character of the reports they are sending in show that florists generally had a fine Easter.

The Berger Sale.

I wish you would rectify a misstatement in The Review of April 24, in the Philadelphia notes. It is there stated that the greenhouses of William Berger & Son have been bought by Victor Groshens, but the purchaser is Victor Roekens, of Glenside. I do not know if it is a reporter's or a printer's error, but in either case it probably was due to the similarity of the names.

Victor Roekens.

Rose Meeting.

The display feature of the next monthly meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, to be held in the roof garden of the Hotel Adelphia, Tuesday, May 6, at 8 p. m., will be an exhibition of new varieties of forcing roses. Exhibits have been assured from John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Canada; E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; Frank R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; John Cook, Baltimore, Md., and Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa. We also expect the new varieties of the Montgomery Rose Co., Hadley, Mass. In addition, there will be vases of special stock of standard varieties from the local growers whose products have made this city famous.

The literary feature will be an address by Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., on standard and new varieties. His knowledge and experience as a grower and disseminator of new roses will make this a most interesting and valuable treatise. Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., also will be present.

An invitation is extended to all in the craft, especially women in the business, who are now admitted to membership in the club.

E. A. Harvey, Pres.

Robert Kift, Sec'y.

The Market.

The market is holding up in great shape; both supply and demand are all that could be wished. Prices are still holding good and everybody is satisfied.

While stock was not up to the usual standard at Easter, still, at every place the writer inquired, it was said that the holiday was one of the best Easters in the history of the local trade. This, to me, shows the firm hold the florists' business has on the public.

While there was not a great deal of the fine stock the florists have been in the habit of handling, when one went into the stores all had fine displays. Made-up baskets appeared to be the idea of most of the florists to cover up the lack of finer stock and good judgment was shown in this respect, for in every store that I visited last week there was a large supply. A visit at the beginning of this week showed that there was nothing left.

At Lexington market, which is one of the show places for flowers on Easter, the streets for blocks were one mass of blooms, though not so fine, to be sure, as in former years. But the public wanted flowers and they took the best to be had.

Easter lilies were one of the surprises of the day. At the last minute some large shipments came in and these went a long way toward saving the day. While the price asked by the commission houses was $35 per hundred, this was as cheap as they could be sold. One commission man told me that the last shipment he received was one of 700; on Saturday night he had only three dozen left and these were his first sale on Monday morning. I speak of this to show that the public is determined to have lilies on Easter and that it is not a question of price.

Various Notes.

At Samuel Feast & Sons', with the store cleaned out on the day after the Easter rush, Mrs. Hill, who was still on the job, said: "In spite of everything, this was the greatest Easter we have ever had." To my question, "How did you manage?" her reply was: "Well, we had plenty of cut stock; we had a few azaleas and some lilies—in fact, a little of everything constituting the usual Easter stock, but far short of the normal supply. To make up for this, we had made-up baskets at all prices and our experience was that the public wanted flowers for Easter and, if they could not get what they wanted, they were willing to take something else."

At John Cook's they told me that they were obliged to make hydrangeas fill the gap for most blooming plants. This store was well supplied with these and some as fine genistas as I have ever seen. There also was plenty of cut stock from their own range. Miss Cook assured me the store had no trouble in getting through the holiday. It was only a question of handling the business and, when she says this, it means that a big business has been handled, for no store here has a more up-to-date system than this store for handling a big rush.

William J. Halliday, as usual at this season, had a fine display of orchids, all from his own range. With made-up baskets and plenty of cut stock, this house did one of the best Easter businesses in its history.

At the Seidewitz Bros. store after Easter, the room which had looked so attractive on the Saturday before, looked as though a tornado had struck it. Everyone was smiling. "The best Easter we have ever had," was the reply to my natural question.

At Mary Johnston's everything was cleaned up and, while everyone was tired out after the big rush, they were all happy and sanguine as to the future of the florists' business. Mrs. Johnston, who is one of the most conservative business women connected with the trade in Baltimore, assured me it was not a question of doing business, but one of getting stock to do business with.

After a trip to the growers' establishments before Easter, the thing that surprised the writer was the fine display everyone made. Not one florist fell down on the job and all did a great business. Tate.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The florists and greenhouse men have been taking an inventory during the last week, figuring out their returns from the Easter trade and laying their plans for Memorial day, which, like Easter, is expected will exceed anything ever experienced in this city. Already there has been an energetic preliminary skirmish by the provident ones, in search of potted stock for May 30. It is believed that artificial flowers will be a much larger factor this year than ever before.

According to all reports, the Easter business was one of the largest, if not the largest, ever known here, notwithstanding the many handicaps and discouragements. While there were not so many plants handled as in some former years, the higher prices caused the total receipts to be considerably more. It is estimated that the business, as a whole, netted the florists at least twenty-five per cent more than in previous years.

During the last week business was fair, funeral work furnishing the most of it. The opening of a new $1,000,000 theater the first of the week called for nearly 100 large designs. Prices took a big drop, carnations bringing $4 to $6; roses $3 to $15; sweet peas $1 and $2. These furnished the lead and bulk of the market.

Various Notes.

A sudden drop in temperature on the night of April 24 caused thousands of dollars' damage to the fruit trees, shrubs, early vegetables and plants in this section. Florists who had set out their plants for propagation suffered considerable loss. One of the heaviest losers was Joseph E. Koppelman, who had more than 5,000 carnation plants, which had been pot-grown in the house, all set out at his place on Pawtucket avenue, East Providence.

"Insect Pests and Plant Diseases" was the subject of an illustrated lecture by Joseph J. Pillsbury, of the Rhode Island State Board of Agriculture, at the regular meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society last week.

John R. Pee, of Fall River, Mass., was a business visitor here last week.

Joseph E. Koppelman, of J. E. Koppelman & Co., was in New York and vicinity last week.

Charles Hunt has about 30,000 plants for bedding purposes, which will be ready for Memorial day.

George Hunt was one of the principal speakers at the annual banquet of the Providence Permanent Firemen's Relief Association, April 22.

work, while the demand for funeral work continues to be quite heavy. The supply of cut flowers is good and equal to the present demands. These include a liberal supply of roses of nearly all varieties, such as Maryland, Russell, Shawyer, Sunburst, Ward, Milady, Prima Donna, Ophelia, September Morn, Columbia, and Pink and White Killarney. These are in about all grades.

The supply of carnations at this time is not heavy, but meets all present demands. Their quality is keeping up well. There are excellent sweet peas to be seen and these are in good demand.

They are of the Spencer variety and have long stems. Snapdragons in pink, yellow, bronze and white are seen and sell readily. Good delphinium arrives in small quantities and is in considerable demand. Violets from some of the growers are in poor condition, while the quality from others continues to be excellent. The lateness of the season, however, will soon bring them to a close. Forget-me-nots, anemones, Roman hyacinths, daisies, pansies, mignonette, Spanish irises, sweet alyssum and Paper Whites complete the list of seasonable flowers now on hand.

The supply of greens is in heavy demand and meets all immediate needs. Galax, leucothoe, huckleberry foliage and magnolias are all plentiful.

called on the trade in this city April 22.

Now that potted blooming plants are not so plentiful, several stores here are making large displays of flower and garden seeds in their windows. George T. Boucher has given up his entire East Main street window to that purpose, while the greater part of the window of Salter Bros. also has an excellent display.

E. Kendig, of the Rosery Flower Shop, reports an excellent business, the greater part of which was done in potted plants and baskets, much taste being displayed in their production.

Hugo Teute, of West Brighton, N. Y., says his Easter business was excellent. He had quantities of good stock on hand, both of cut flowers and potted plants. Everything available was cut and sold.

With the close of the month comes the retirement from the florists' business of H. P. Neun, who for several years has been in business at 9 North street. This business was recently purchased by the Rochester Floral Co., which takes possession May 1. H. J. H.

KINGSTON, N. Y.

In the private office of George Burgevin, of Valentin Burgevin's Sons, hangs a choice collection of Japanese pictures, presented by the late Ralph M. Ward.

"Speaking of lilies, our Easter product was fine, and while we could have disposed of them at wholesale at a higher figure than what they brought at retail, we stand by the policy of giving home trade the preference, believing this to be the secret of holding one's steady patronage, particularly in a city

"We never had a better business. Everything in blooming plants and cut flowers went. The Market.

During the week following Easter, the demand at the wholesale market was slow, with greatly increased receipts. Prices again suffered greatly in all grades. The leading retailers say that business, outside of funeral work, was slow. The low prices prevailed all the week, as the large consignments had to be moved.

Roses are quite plentiful at present in all varieties. Most of them are White Killarneys, and these move slowly. Russell, Ophelia, Ward and Stanley moved well all the week. There has been a scarcity of red roses in this market all the season.

Carnations are coming in large quantities daily, in all varieties and grades, and they move well. Prices are much below market quotations for these.

There is a great deal of outdoor stock coming in now and this has flooded the market. Among these are lilacs, valley, tulips, narcissi and daffodils. Considerable of this stock was dumped because of the lack of demand.

There is a big glut in snapdragons, all markets being filled with them. Many of these are being dumped, as the retailers report there is no demand for this flower.

Sweet peas slowed up somewhat after the heavy Easter cut, but this week will again see a big cut. Calendulas, mignonette, daisies and pansies are in plenty, with no demand. Easter lilies are not plentiful and the demand is good. Orchids and valley were in good demand all the week.

Everything in greens is to be had and this stock is in good demand, especially long smilax and plumosus.

at headquarters April 22. There was a good attendance. W. J. Pilcher presided over the meeting.

From reports, the plan for raising publicity funds is progressing. The amount of the first month's collections will not be known until the first meeting in May, when the wholesalers will make their returns to the secretary.

Advertising for Mothers' day and Memorial day came up for discussion, after which it was decided to place strong and attractive advertisements in the five leading daily newspapers, which are to submit sketches for the committee to consider. A special meeting for this purpose has been decided upon. It will be held May 6. All members of this committee are requested to be present.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Association of Gardeners changed the date of its meeting from May 7 to April 27. L. P. Jensen, William Bouche, well known in the trade and among landscape workers, is at the Deaconess hospital, where he was operated on April 27. Mr. Bouche is a member of the Florists' Club and his many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

At the meeting of the county growers May 7 an interesting session is expected, as the annual election of officers always brings out a large attendance. There are several candidates for each office.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. is now the local selling agent for the Chicago Carton Co., manufacturers of florists' cut flower boxes.

Fred H. Meinhardt, the Koenig Floral Co. and John Nyflot, whose establishments are across the way from two large cemeteries, are preparing for a busy season, with plenty of advance orders for planting out, which will begin some time this week.

The publicity committee gave several large boxes of cut flowers in the name of the florists of St. Louis, April 26, to the ladies who are raising funds to entertain the members of the 138th Infantry, when that organization arrives home. The flowers were sold at the Armory hall April 26. The following wholesalers donated the flowers: H. G. Berning, the W. C. The Market.

Business during the last week was a little dull, the reaction after the big Easter rush. Carnations have been kept cleaned up, but roses, especially the longer grades, have been dragging a little. Peas have cleaned up fairly well. American Beauties have been moving slowly. There is a fair demand for violets. Bulbous stock cleaned up fairly well. Lilies are arriving in quantity and moving slowly. Pansies have been cleaning up well. Calendulas have not been in demand. Snapdragons clean up well. Cut hyacinths have been in demand. The market is well supplied with greens. W. F. B.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; thirty-seventh annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 24, 25, 26, 1919.

A REPRESENTATIVE of Kelway & Son, Langport, England, was in Chicago last week.

IMPROVEMENT of the building on West Madison street, Chicago, occupied by the W. W. Barnard Co., is under way.

THE few cold days during the last week gave the St. Louis seedsmen a breathing spell. All declare that never before were they so busy in April as this year.

THE Everette R. Peacock Co., Chicago, one of the younger and rapidly growing seed houses, reports its mail order business this season was five times as great as last year.

THE J. J. Wilson Seed Co., of Newark, N. J., is trying out some publicity methods through the moving picture theaters, showing in colors the modern garden sown with Wilson's seeds.

ONE thing is sure: The seed trade in the United States never again will be dependent on Europe for seeds; we can grow what we need and the only thing to keep us from doing it will be the question of cost.

SOME seedsmen never admit a decrease in their sales, but on the whole April has not been a notably good month in the seed trade. Mail orders tailed off faster than usual and it was too cold for brisk counter trade.

THE Western Canners' Association held its annual meeting at Chicago last week. The gentlemen gave out interviews to the daily papers, explaining that the price of canned goods need not be expected to fall, but they did not seem to feel the same way about seeds. There were numerous seed salesmen on hand to quote prices on present surplus or future deliveries.

FIXED PRICES ON PACKETS.

Status of Ferry Case.

The Federal Trade Commission is preparing for trial about thirty cases in which, it is alleged, a resale price maintenance policy in violation of law is being followed by the firms or companies which are named as defendants. Included in these cases is the one against D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit. The complaint was made against Ferry & Co. last summer, but it has not yet been reached for adjudication. The concern has filed an answer in which it denies maintaining any policy of fixing resale prices. Many inquiries have been received at Washington as to the status of this case.

It is stated by the commission that the case will be reached in its turn on the docket and that it will be tried on its merits. However, the indications now point to several months elapsing before the commission will hand down any decision in the Ferry case.

A Parallel Decision.

The commission has entered an order which illustrates the views it has on the subject of fixing resale prices. It can be read by those in the seed and other branches of the growing industry in the effort to ascertain if their methods, in the opinion of the commission, as illustrated by the order, are in violation of the Federal Trade Commission act and the Clayton act.

This is the order which reflects the views of the commission on resale price fixing:

NOW, THEREFORE, IT IS ORDERED THAT respondent (naming the defendant) and its officers, directors, agents, servants, and employees, cease and desist from directly or indirectly recommending, requiring, or by any means whatsoever bringing about the resale by dealers of (naming the article) according to any system of prices fixed or established by respondent, and more particularly by any or all of the following means:

1. Entering into contracts, agreements, or understandings with such dealers to the effect that such dealers, in reselling the article, will adhere to any system of prices fixed or established by respondent;
2. Securing from such dealers contracts, agreements, or understandings that they will adhere to any such system of prices;
3. Refusing to sell to any such dealers because they fail to adhere to any such system of prices;
4. Discriminating in prices against such dealers because they fail to adhere to any such system of prices;
5. Discriminating in prices in favor of such dealers because they adhere to any such system of prices.

PROVIDED, that nothing herein contained, shall prohibit respondent from issuing price lists, or printing prices in its advertising or upon containers of the article, so long as respondent shall refrain from directly or indirectly recommending, requiring, or by any means whatsoever bringing about, the resale of the article at such prices; and

PROVIDED, that nothing herein contained shall prohibit respondent from selling to or soliciting orders from dealers directly at such prices, or at any other prices fixed by the party through whom such orders are filled.

Substitute packet seeds for the above and you see how the commission is likely to stand.

PROFIT OR LOSS?

Divergent opinions on what the action of the onion set market did to seedsmen during the season just ended were expressed recently by prominent members of the trade. One opinion was that many burned their fingers badly by having on hand stock which cost a relatively high price last fall when the market broke in March. Another seedsman denied that the trade had been "stung," saying that most of the onion set stocks were sold before the market break came.

The pessimistic member of the trade declared that the market had slumped so rapidly that the seedsmen could not dispose of stock quickly enough to prevent loss. In some cases, this source of information declared, as much as $1.50 was lost on each bushel of sets. The present price, he stated, is sometimes as low as 40 cents a bushel.

"We disposed of ninety per cent of our stock of onion sets before March, when the break in the market came," said one seedsman. "At that time the price had not dropped enough to make any material difference in our profit. We cleaned up well and feel satisfied with our results for the season. At the present time we have only a small stock of sets on hand. These we are holding for the trade of the northern part of the United States and Canada. Of course, we do not expect to make much profit on these."

The man who voiced the optimistic opinion denied that the price had gone as low as 40 cents. He said that his firm was obtaining as high as $1.50 a bushel, though the average price was said to be slightly over $1. Either of these prices is a considerable drop from last fall's market.

It is the opinion of seedsmen that conditions next year, so far as onion sets are concerned, will show improvement. It is believed that independent growers will be discouraged by the market fluctuation of this year and that a glut will be impossible in the season of 1919-1920. However, a prominent seedsman said that he would not venture to predict, saying that conditions might change almost overnight.

SUGAR BEET SHORT.

There will be a serious shortage of sugar beet seed for the spring of 1921 unless American beet sugar companies provide for planting requirements this season. Official reports received here from the Netherlands, taken in connection with information regarding stocks on hand and contemplated planting plans for seed in this country, make this quite clear.

There is a shortage of sugar beet seed in Europe as compared with former years, and there will be increased activity in beet sugar production in European countries, which will probably require a large part of the European beet seed on hand, also the European production this year and next. There is enough

To the Trade

I herewith beg to inform that I have severed my connections with Messrs. Van Zonneveld Bros. & Philippo, Sassenheim, Holland, and have started in business for my own account under the firm name of Boot & Co., Voorhout, Holland.

We are not simply dealers, but are bona fide growers of excellent stocks of the leading varieties of Bulbs, and although Bulb stocks will be scarce next fall, we are in a position to execute orders in extra quality for both Dutch and French Bulbs.

I wish to thank my friends for the confidence shown me in the past and sincerely hope that they will continue to show me their good will in my new enterprise.

As the season is getting rather advanced, I may not have an opportunity of calling on all my friends this trip and therefore would greatly appreciate to receive orders at the address below. Prices will be gladly furnished upon application.

seed now in the hands of the beet sugar companies in the United States to take care of the acreage to be planted this year, but the latest information indicates that there is a shortage of from 25,000 to 40,000 bags for next year.

Dutch growers and dealers are unable to book further orders for 1919, and orders for 1920 delivery are not sought. At the present time surplus stocks in the Netherlands are selling at 1.3 florins a kilogram (approximately 25 cents a pound) and up, though some dealers are holding for 2 to 2.5 florins a kilogram (approximately 35 cents to 45 cents a pound). Reports from German sources indicate that prices there will remain high or possibly increase during the next two years.

It is possible that subsequent information may modify the situation somewhat, but Department of Agriculture officials believe every effort should be made to produce in this country during 1919 and 1920 all the good-quality sugar beet seed possible up to the American requirements.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

The weather last week was ideal and the demand was heavier for this season than ever before in the history of the local trade. The reason for the inflated demand was the large number of formal dances and other social affairs, which called for elaborate decorations and a large number of corsages. Orders were about equally divided among the retail florists. There were good demands also for flowers for the hospitals and informal home affairs.

Sweet peas were in the heaviest demand for corsages, while violets also were popular and in good supply. The quality of these flowers was extra fine. Roses, in the miniature varieties, and small grades of other roses also were in good demand for this work, besides a large variety of smaller flowers which the florists were obliged to use in order to meet the great demand. These included sweet alyssum, forget-me-nots, swainsonas, marguerites, yellow daisies, cattleyas, etc. Long-stemmed roses and snapdragons were used for the most part in the decorations.

Extremely little bulbous stock, either cut or in pots, is coming into the market now. Blooming plants are scarce and there is little variety to choose from. Carnations are more plentiful than roses, but the market is firm on these and the quality is quite good. Cattleyas are plentiful and there is a good market for them. There are a few lilies which have come into the market since Easter, but these are selling slowly. A number of climbing rambler roses are available.

Various Notes.

A large number of F. T. D. orders were noted in the Easter business, both incoming and outgoing. Two new members from this city have recently joined this organization. They are W. J. & M. S. Vesey and A. J. Lanternier & Sons.

This week the Victory loan campaign is at its height and the florists are coming to the front in this patriotic work by helping with the actual work of the committees, as well as by subscribing to the full limit of their power.

The Flick Floral Co. had the decorations for the Qui Vive dance, a notable local society affair, in which large quantities of roses and antirrhinums were used in tall floor vases. Many palms and ferns were grouped as a background for the flowers. This firm sent out a large number of corsages last week for dances.

Artificial Easter lilies were used by A. J. Lanternier & Sons in some of the church decorations for Easter, on account of the great scarcity of the natural flowers, and they were found to be a satisfactory substitute.

In summing up the Easter business, it is the opinion of the various prominent retailers that the trade increased at least fifty per cent over any previous Easter. It is a notable fact that the flower buyers did not mind the increase in prices, but seemed to take this feature as to be expected. R. F. B.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

NEW ZEALAND FLAX.

New Zealand flax, Phormium tenax, extensively cultivated on the Pacific coast for ornamental shrubbery, now comes forward with an additional claim on florists' attention. Henry Melde, a florist of Eureka, Cal., for many years has used the tough fibers of this plant for tying purposes and has found it is as good as, and in some ways superior to, the raffia in general use.

A slender fiber stripped from one of the green spikes is found to have the tensile strength of commercial flax and the dried fiber has been used in some sections for staking up grapevines and other similar work where rope was formerly employed.

The ornamental value of the plant, which may be seen in the accompanying illustration, and its long life recommend it to florists making a specialty of shrubbery. There is a variegated, as well as a plain-leaf variety, the former having alternate stripes of light yellow and green, with a pin line of red at the edge. It is of extremely easy cultivation and is raised either from the seed or from the root divisions. At 4 years of age it will have attained a height of five feet, with but little care on the part of the gardener. The plants live approximately 20 years and are attractive at all seasons of the year. While not a true flax, its tough, fibrous character has given it that appellation in the islands where it grows wild.

New Zealand Flax, Grown in Humboldt County, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

General satisfaction is expressed over Easter sales, many florists reporting a substantial increase over the volume of business handled last year. The movement of rose plants was hardly up to expectations and calla lilies were more or less a drug on the market, but otherwise stock cleaned up closely. It was expected that rose plants would take the place of potted lilies to a considerable extent; the growers produced more of them than ever before and the retailers bought heavily. Many were sold, but many were left over, the demand going more strongly to cut flowers than to plants.

In view of the extreme shortage of Easter lilies, some hope was held out that callas would come into their own here this year, but such was not the case. The growers held their stock for last-minute high prices and the market was swamped with these flowers, too late for the surplus to be utilized on shipping orders. On the day before Easter some of the finest blooms sold as high as $5 per hundred, but the majority of sales were made around $3. Easter morning still found a large surplus in the wholesale quarters, which could be had for almost any price, holders being glad to get $1 per hundred.

Cut roses stiffened up a little in price, in response to the heavy Easter demand, but there was an abundance of stock, which prevented any marked advance. The best American Beauties sold for $4 per dozen, while $3 was top price for Russell and $1.50 for Ophelia.

Following the Easter clean-up, cut flowers have been in a little lighter supply, but there is enough stock for all requirements. Carnations are scarce; that is, good stock is on the short side of the market and cleans up early in the day at 75 cents for a bunch of two dozen. Tulips are beginning to go off crop. There is a large cut of fine Spanish irises, which are in excellent demand, both for shipping purposes and local consumption. The stems are unusually long, and the blooms of good color and well formed. Outdoor sweet peas are getting more plentiful. A limited amount of outdoor lily of the valley is appearing. It is exceptionally good in quality and finds a ready sale. Orchids and gardenias are displayed liberally at the retail shops, indicating that they are sufficiently plentiful to warrant sale stimulation.

Various Notes.

The florists' establishments joined with other business places in closing their doors during the big parade and "welcome home" demonstration, held April 22, in honor of the return of the 363rd Infantry and the 347th Field Artillery. It was one of the most enthusiastic and generally observed celebrations ever witnessed in San Francisco. A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., was a member of the reception committee and marched in the parade. As far as many of the florists were concerned, interest in the affair was enhanced by the fact that Daniel Bacigalupi was among the soldiers of the 363rd. Friends in the trade were there in numbers to welcome him home and found him looking fine. Though he went "over the top" three times, he returned without being wounded. He was gone nineteen months. It is expected that he will resume his old position with Podesta & Baldocchi when he is discharged from the service.

Word has been received of the arrival in New York of Adolph Bacigalupi, another of Podesta & Baldocchi's men. He is expected home soon to take up his old duties. Mr. Baldocchi says the firm had a fine Easter trade and has been busy on funeral work, having averaged about a pall a day for some time.

B. M. Joseph was married April 21, to Miss Gladys Rule, who was in charge of his office work for several months. The wedding took place at the Clift hotel, in this city, and a honeymoon trip by automobile through the southern part of the state is now in progress. A rush of work is reported at the store by Manager Bianchini, whose wife is filling the vacancy caused by Miss Rule's departure.

Congratulations are in order for C. Kooyman, of the Kooyman Co., Inc., wholesale florists and florists' supply dealers, at 431 Bush street. He was married April 21 to Miss A. A. Hogan, who had been identified with the business for three years. They slipped away quietly to San Jose and the announcement of their wedding came as a surprise to most of their friends. The name Hogan seems to have a particular fascination for Mr. Kooyman. At one time he was in partnership with a Mr. Hogan in Oakland; he purchased land from another Mr. Hogan, and bought his marriage license from a Mr. Hogan to marry Miss Hogan.

K. Kimura, of the United Flower & Supply Co., met with an accident several days ago, which probably will keep him away from work for some time. He fell down the elevator shaft at the hotel where he lives, sustaining rather serious injuries. Some time later he was found lying unconscious at the bottom of the shaft and was removed to a hospital. His associates report him as improving rapidly.

J. Adachi says Easter business was all that could be desired. The company is shipping a great deal of fine Spanish irises.

Mr. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., is well satisfied with the results of Easter business. His shipping orders were heavier than ever before and local sales quite brisk. This firm has just received a large shipment of mats.

H. R. Richards, of the Los Angeles Floral Co., Los Angeles, Cal., and Jacob Dieterich were recent visitors. The latter recently disposed of his interests at Montebello, Cal., and has since purchased a tract of land at Huntington Beach.

F. C. Jaeger, of F. C. Jaeger & Son, says Easter sales at the store showed a gain of nearly thirty-five per cent over last year's Easter business. He obtained seventy-five pots of Easter lilies and sold them out early at from $2.50 to $5 each.

C. Navlet Co. made a comprehensive showing of ferns and other plants at the store on Market street and practically sold out clean. Manager Louis Picetti reports a brisk demand for cut flowers.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. made use of an adjoining storeroom for their large Easter display, thus facilitating the handling of the rush materially. Frank Pelicano says the sales left no ground for complaint. The company had a few rose plants left, but other stock was practically cleaned up.

"Best Easter business in the history of our firm," is the way P. V. Matraia, of the Art Floral Co., sums up the holiday situation.

POINSETTIA PLANTS

Good, strong greenhouse propagated plants from 2¼ and 2½-inch pots. Packed in light, strong, ventilated boxes; will not dry out. No charges for packing. I have raised Poinsettias for 15 years. Understand them from A to Z. Plants from me, packed in special boxes, will ship six days without checking.

Plants ready in May will grow 6 to 7 ft. Fine for benching. Can be cut back once, then will make a 5-ft. growth. Plants ready second week in June can be treated same as May plants. July 1st plants may be cut back once. They will make 5 ft. in the bench. July 15th plants may be cut back once, and will make 5-in. pot plants, 24 inches tall, with two flowers. July 30th plants, cut back once, will make 18-in. plants, in 5-in. pots, and two flowers.

August 1st, 14th, 28th, plants fine for making up pans.

September 6th, 15th, 25th, plants fine for panning or 4-inch pots.

My self-branching stock will not be put on the market this year. It is a winner. Nine perfect flowers on one plant.

There will not be a shortage of Poinsettias this year if every grower does his bit. I have 6,000 stock plants. My first cuttings go in the sand April 15. Six thousand cuttings. My first customer for 1000 plants gets 20% off. Bear this in mind—you don't have to pay for packing and boxes.

Now it's up to you, Mr. Grower, how many I propagate. The sky is my limit; what is yours?

My price for the best plants is $9.00 per 100

Cash with order. 20% off for the first buyer of 1000. The name of the 1000-buyer will be published in the Florists' Review. From now on Loomis, Cal., is on the map for Poinsettia plants.

Freesia Specialist SAN GABRIEL, CAL.

W. McLellan, has joined the force at the city store of the E. W. McLellan Co. It is understood she will take charge June 1, when J. A. Axell, manager, and Mrs. Axell, bookkeeper, are leaving. It is Mr. Axell's intention to engage in business for himself, after a vacation of six or eight weeks.—M. M.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The Easter trade was better than it has been in years, notwithstanding the absence of Easter lilies, which in previous years have been the principal flowers sold. Most of the retailers had a large trade in baskets and boxes of cut flowers. The only plants left were a few extra large rhododendrons, which were a little too expensive for the local market.

Flowers are coming in quite plentifully now, there being a heavier cut of roses, orchids and carnations than we have had for several weeks. There also is a nice lot of statice, strawflowers, Spanish irises and tulips, these taking the place of violets and daffodils, which are a thing of the past.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Peter Reinberg, of Chicago, and Mrs. Henry Zender and the latter's son, Peter, were visitors this week. Part of the time they were guests of Emil Reichling, recently of the Reinberg forces in Chicago. It may be noted that Mr. Reichling, since his arrival in southern California, has bought and sold several pieces of property, and he says he has beaten the California real estate man at his own game.

Paul C. Miller, of the L. A. Floral Co., who has been in the service the last two years, was expected back April 26. He belonged to the 91st Division.

Jacob Dieterich and H. R. Richards were in San Francisco on business this week.

Roy F. Wilcox, of Montebello, Cal., is busy making repairs and planting new stock at his greenhouses. If he continues the way he has started he certainly will show Los Angeles some good flowers next winter. H. R. Richards.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

The San Diego Floral Society made big preparations for the annual rose show, held in the California building at Balboa park April 26 and 27. It surpassed anything of the kind that had been attempted in the last few years.

Easter business this year was of the kind we had before the war.

George F. Otto & Son had a big motor truck loaded with rhododendrons and other choice plants.

Louis Rucker, of Coronado, Cal., had a shipment of Easter lilies from the north and he managed to dispose of most of them.

The Flower Shop sold out the entire stock the day before Easter. This store sold a quantity of fancy baskets and corsages.

Boyle & Darnaud were fortunate in having their Easter lilies in full bloom for Easter and the firm sold all of them. They grew about 500 or 600 for their own use at the store. The firm's orchids also came in time.

Mrs. Boyle and Mrs. Darnaud were in Pasadena last week and purchased a large part of the orchid collection of Dr. Schiffmann.

Cobleskill, N. Y.—Alfred Goldring reports excellent business and observed that the bed of callas never looked so good as they do this season, with other lilies so scarce. A prime crop was in for Easter and brought top price.

Boonton, N. J.—Arthur Taylor says he would have liked to have a heavier crop of roses around Easter, but, taken all in all, he has no complaint to make of business through the winter. It is to be hoped that fine, big houses will not have to be closed up another year.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; secretary, Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Mo.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; forty-fourth annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1919.

It is said that in Painesville, O., and vicinity, 4,500 acres are in use for nursery purposes.

Charles H. Perkins, of the Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., was a visitor in Chicago last week.

The holders of large stocks of peony roots are figuring on adding about twenty-five per cent to the inventory June 1, for a starter.

W. A. Peterson, Chicago nurseryman, was 50 years of age April 29. He was born on the nursery property, where he has lived all his life.

Lewis & Valentine, nurserymen, of Roslyn, N. Y., have leased a vacant lot at 1010 Fifth avenue, New York, to be used as a garden for displaying their line of plants and shrubs.

The W. E. Collins Nursery Co., of Fennville, Mich., has been busy recently delivering a large number of fruit trees to the Taylor & Mort and the Taylor & Gibson commercial orchards, near Pullman, Mich., where more than 6,000 trees are being planted.

It is reported that during the last four weeks McHutchison & Co., New York, have received from Holland 1,950 cases and bales of nursery stock. All are now sold. This rush was due to the Hollanders getting rid, before the door closes, of the varieties grown for American trade.

McHutchison & Co., New York, expect to receive this week the first raffia shipments to arrive since a few months after the war began. The embargo on raffia continues, but these shipments were ordered released by the U. S. War Department, to whom this firm turned over its entire stock of raffia when this country entered the war. It was used for camouflage purposes in France.

MARLATT SOUNDS WARNING.

C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the Federal Horticultural Board, has sent a warning to state horticultural inspectors and collaborators of the board to exercise extra vigilance until the quarantine goes into effect. This is his circular letter:

You are no doubt aware that Plant Quarantine No. 37, which takes effect June 1 next, prohibits or restricts the importation of most classes of nursery stock and other plants and seeds. It appears that advantage is being taken of the period which will elapse prior to the date the quarantine becomes effective to bring into this country all the available nursery stock in certain foreign countries, and that the inspection given this stock on the other side is not such as would be given under ordinary circumstances, and should be given at all times. While there probably may be a limiting factor on importations due to the lack of available tonnage, inspection of imported stock on this side should be unremitting and radical, in order to safeguard importations as much as possible.

The attention of the board has just been called to the fact that living brown-tail moth larvæ and gipsy moth eggs ready to hatch have been discovered by the inspector of the board at Philadelphia on recent importations of nursery stock from France.

It is respectfully urged that you make sure that all importations coming under your jurisdiction be thoroughly and carefully inspected.

There probably is not a nurseryman in America who would knowingly bring infected stock onto his place, but there are few who share the alarm which actuates the gentleman at Washington.

200,000 NORWAY SPRUCE for NURSERY PLANTING

Thrifty, Well Rooted Plants; Twice Transplanted; 10 to 15 Inches

Prices: $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000; $220.00 per 10,000

We lately bought a large lot of the above which were being grown by a paper-pulp company for a projected forestry planting. On account of a change in their plans we were able to secure these at a "right" figure and we are offering them the same way. They are extra good value at the prices quoted above. We have made a personal inspection of the stock and it is exceptionally fine. Will be available for shipment early in May.

fruits, is Berberis aggregata. This species was originally collected by Potanin, in the province of Kansu, but was first introduced to cultivation by E. H. Wilson. He collected it in western Szechuan in 1908 and again in 1910, and plants raised from seeds sent home by him are becoming widely distributed. It is a deciduous shrub of bushy, rather erect, but not ungraceful habit; its shoots armed with slender three-pronged spines one-half to three-fourths of an inch long. The leaves are dullish green, oval to obovate in outline, one-half to one and one-fourth inches long, sometimes entire, but usually armed with a few small teeth. The flowers are yellow and borne in short racemes, followed by dense clusters of salmon-red globose fruits densely packed on the twigs. They are ripe in October and give the shrub a handsome appearance at that season. The plant is hardy, grows well in soil of even moderate richness and its fruits set fertile seeds which provide a ready means of obtaining an abundant supply of young plants. The barberry sent out by J. Veitch & Sons as B. Geraldii, and also known as B. Prattii, is now regarded by Dr. Schneider as a variety of B. aggregata.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business has been quiet the last week. Carnations are not so plentiful and range in price from $3 to $10. Roses are in fair supply. Calla lilies are not so abundant, but still are not so scarce as Easter lilies. Outdoor bulbous stock is gone, with the exception of a few late tulips. Outdoor valley and a few lilacs have made their appearance. Candytuft and California poppies are also newcomers.

Sweet peas are in fair supply, but in such good demand that all are utilized. Snapdragons are abundant and of good quality.

Other available blooms include centaureas, pansies, daisies, marguerites, calendulas, etc. These are popular for corsages and spring baskets.

Bedding stock is to be higher this spring. All winter, in order to meet expenses, flowers have been selling at high prices. Now bedding stock has to be raised in price to pay for space, time and fuel given it.

An idea of what the wholesale prices of bedding stock will be per hundred for 4-inch stock follows: Geraniums and vincas, $15 to $20; salvias and cannas, $12.50 to $15; Sprengeri, $15 to $20; coleus, of the large-leaf variety, $8 to $10, and of the smaller-leaf variety, $4.

Petunias, 2½-inch singles, will sell for $6 per hundred, while the 4-inch doubles will go at prices ranging from $12.50 to $15 for the same quantity. Pride of Portland and Irvington Beauty will sell at $8 to $10 per hundred. Other prices will be as follows: Verbenas, 2½-inch, $5; 3-inch, $6 to $8 per hundred; moonvines, $12.50 to $15 per hundred; border plants, ageratums, alternantheras, dusty millers, etc., 2½-inch, $4 per hundred.

The retail market also will be affected and prices to the consumer naturally will be higher than heretofore. Geraniums will bring $2.50 to $3 per dozen, according to their quality and variety.

The retail price per dozen of other bedding plants will be as follows: Vincas and Sprengeri, 4-inch, $4 to $5 per dozen; salvias, 3-inch, $1, and 4-inch, $2 per dozen; cannas, 4-inch, $2.50 to $3 per dozen; single petunias, $1.50, and double petunias, $2 to $3 per dozen; border plants, $1 per dozen; porch and window box filling, $1.50 to $2 per foot.

The retail price of vase filling will be as follows: For 18-inch vase, $8;

Clematis Paniculata
Strong 2-year, $16.00 per 100.
Ampelopsis Veitchii
Strong 3-year, $25.00 per 100; strong 2-year, $20.00 per 100; medium, 2-year, $16.00 per 100.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held May 6, at the store of the Roepke Floral Co. E. L. Lutz, who recently was mustered out of the service, will relate some of his experiences at the front.

John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., was in the city this week. The florists of the city gave a banquet in his honor at the Claypool hotel, April 29. Mr. Young is campaigning for the national publicity fund.

Unusually beautiful weather in the middle of April induced florists to plant out. This weather, however, did not continue, but was followed by frost. On two nights the temperature dropped to 24 degrees and considerable damage was done to young stock, including carnation plants, snapdragons and feverfew. It is thought that these will recover. This low temperature was gen-

CHRYSANTHEMUMS FO

THE List of Chrysanthemums we are offering for the season of 1919 shows many changes from last season and these are, we believe, a great benefit to us and no injury to our trade. We have discarded many varieties and have kept only such as have shown themselves really needed to maintain a balance of color and season. This selection has eliminated many for which we may have calls during the planting season, but in the list presented we have the superior of the discarded variety. Our aim is to grow in quantity those varieties which we, ourselves, would grow for the cut flower trade, regardless of the fact that we have limited the list of offerings. There is no break in the Mum crop from the start to the finish of the Mum season if planted from an intelligent selection of varieties from this list, commercial cut flower production governing this selection.

NEW CHRYSANTHEMUMS FOR THE COMMERCIAL GROWER.

BETSY ROSS. (Smith.) An incurved flower borne on good strong stems. It is absolutely pure white in color. Matures Nov. 10.

Rooted Cuttings, $1.25 per doz.; $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1,000.

GOLDEN MISTLETOE. (A. N. Pierson, Inc.) This variety, as shown by the name, is a sport of Mistletoe. The parent is our latest flowering variety, coming well into December. It is ball-shaped. An excellent companion for the parent. We have grown it in quantity and know that it will be a favorite.

Rooted Cuttings, $1.25 per doz.; $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1,000.

OTHER NEW AND VALUABLE SORTS.

Rooted Cuttings, 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1,000

BARBARA DAVIS. In color, a rich shade of reddish bronze and entirely distinct from any other variety. It was disseminated by us in 1917 and has proved a decided acquisition either as a cut flower or as a pot plant. In habit of growth it is short-jointed and inclined to be dwarf, but makes good stems from early propagation. The flower is reflexed when fully open and is at its best just before maturing.

HELEN LEE. In color a delicate shade of pink. The form of the flower is excellent; incurved type. Strong, sturdy grower, with stem ample to carry the flower. Midseason variety.

MISS ELIZABETH SMITH. An incurved flower, orange-bronze in color. Good stem and foliage. One of the best of the new varieties.

YELLOW CHARLES RAGER. A sport which originated with us. Light yellow, but a strong, healthy grower. The flowers are well-formed and, like its parent, it is an easy variety to grow.

It grows easily; cuts good sprays on strong stems. It is a fine flower of medium size and is a valuable acquisition to the list of November-flowering varieties.

ADIRONDA. Bronze button. October 10th. Best in its type, color and season.

NEW SINGLE VARIETIES.

The (*) before the name indicates good commercial varieties.

ELIZABETH FIRESTONE. (A. N. Pierson, Inc.) This bright pink seedling has appealed to the commercial grower and to the store-man as a valuable and much-needed acquisition. The stems are strong and carry the flowers well. This characteristic must not be overlooked in growing flowers for market. It comes into flower from November 15th to 20th, which is after Mrs. W. E. Buckingham and just before Mrs. E. D. Godfrey is ready to cut.

Rooted Cuttings, $1.00 per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1,000
2¼-inch pots, 1.25 per doz.; 8.00 per 100

MRS. E. M. HORNE. (Horne-A. N. Pierson, Inc.) Light, bronze-yellow shaded old-gold. The flowers, which are flat in form, are produced in good-sized graceful sprays which bunch well. Growth vigorous and erect. Matures Nov. 5th to 10th.

2¼-inch pots, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100

MOLLY WHITMORE. (A. N. Pierson, Inc.) Deep, golden-bronze, effectively suffused with terra-cotta; distinct, deep yellow center. The well-formed flower carries three rays of petals, which incurve slightly. This is a desirable trait where they are subject to shipping conditions or considerable handling. The growth being erect in character, this variety may be planted closer than the more branching kinds.

2¼-inch pots, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100

PEGGY BULKELEY. (A. N. Pierson, Inc.) We consider this new variety one of the prettiest in our entire collection. The color is a soft, yet luminous, pink, changing as the flower matures to a delicate mauve-pink. The blooms are large, averaging four rays of petals, which recurve gracefully from a golden-yellow center. The growth is vigorous and erect, producing large sprays, which show the individual flowers to the best possible advantage. An ideal cut-flower or pot-plant variety. Matures Nov. 10th to 15th.

2¼-inch pots, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100

EARLY-FLOWERING CHRYSANTHEMUMS FOR OUTDOOR GROWING.

The question of hardiness in the Chrysanthemum family is such that to call these hardy, as we have formerly done, is unfair, because so much depends upon the character of the soil and the drainage. Too much covering in winter has ruined more plants than a cover of any kind has saved. Some firms class these as Decorative varieties. Several in the list do well indoors, as among the Pompons and Singles there are those which do well outdoors. The varieties listed have larger blooms than the large-flowered Pompons, unless otherwise described.

The Market.

Easter trade was good. All stock was plentiful and everything moved well, with the exception of Easter lilies. The supply of these was larger than had been expected and the price asked was 50 and 75 cents per bud. Some asked as high as $1 each for lilies, and as a consequence a large number were to be had after Easter and at the customer's own price.

Moral: Do not rob the people on holidays or they will say it with candy instead of flowers.

Florists' Club Wanted.

The matter of starting another florists' club in Denver is being agitated again. Surely Denver is the only city of 300,000 population in the United States that has no florists' club. There are about fifteen flower stores and about the same number of large greenhouse establishments, besides a large number of greenhouses which sell at retail, in the city. The old club disbanded in the summer of 1914, just at the beginning of the war. The war is over now, our soldiers are coming home and the trade is prosperous, so there is no better time than the present to start a good, live club that will be of great benefit to the individual and to the trade in general.

Let us get together again and boost and pull for the trade that we are making our life work.

Various Notes.

C. A. McCord is again with the Park Floral Co. and is now in charge of the shipping room.

The Denver Society of Ornamental Horticulture, of which C. R. Root, of the Colorado Seed Co., is president, will hold its annual flower show the first week in November. Adam Kohankie will be in charge of the show.

The Crown Hill cemetery greenhouses have added an attractive automobile to the delivery department.

Boldt & Lundy are showing some fine calceolarias.

After serving fourteen months overseas with Battery B, 148th Field Artillery, Zeal Neff has returned to Denver. Before enlisting Mr. Neff was employed by the Park Floral Co. R. S.

Before and After Easter.

Easter this year was a particularly hard season to handle, especially for the growing end of the business, on account of its occurring at so late a date. Warm spells came before the arrival of Easter and there was a world of outdoor planting to be done. Carnations, roses and asters by the hundreds of thousands had to be put out in the field, and at the same time all the Easter stock indoors had to be kept up in the best of shape. Glass had to be taken out of some of the greenhouses; others had to be shaded heavily to prevent burning. Cool spells alternated with warm spells in a way which would drive a grower wild, wondering if the Easter stock would be too close or too open. And during all of this period seventy-five per cent of the spring plants for bedding, baskets and porch boxes were disposed of.

The spring business in bedding plants was certainly a hummer. There was sufficient stock of all kinds to cover the demand. All kinds and classes of stock will be cleaned out except begonias, ferns and geraniums. These will be held over for summer sales. There were no verbenas this season, though the demand for these plants went up into the tens of thousands. Other plants, however, were bought in their places.

Memorial day in the south, April 26, passed as usual, without much above the ordinary demand. Some potted plants and a few wreaths sufficed. The profusion of outdoor blooms well-nigh kills the sale of florists' stock. The school children make hundreds of wreaths of outdoor flowers and these are placed on the graves of the veterans of the Civil war.

The welcoming of Alabama's Own will be the next big event on the program. The old Fourth Regiment of Alabama, which became the 167th Regiment in the Rainbow Division, will be home for parade about May 5 or 6. This is the only regiment in the army that was known by the name of the state from which it came. A wonderful celebration is being planned, including victory arches, decoration of the entire city with flags and bunting, strewing the principal streets of the city with Dorothy Perkins blooms, plenty of eats for the boys, as well as dances and a rose shower from aeroplanes. It is planned to use millions of rose blooms in this celebration. After this has blown over, everything will be put in shape for a peach of a Mothers' day business, which will be advertised extensively. With the boys' home-coming, this should be the best Mothers' day in the history of the florists' business. Wallace B. Paterson.

MR. F. A. ZENKE, Chicago, Ill.:

Dear Mr. Zenke: Nothing pleases me more than to acknowledge that you were right when you praised up "New Plant Life" to me, and there couldn't be a better proof of it than my asking you to forward five more gallons just as soon as you can.

The results obtained were most satisfactory to me: stunted, small bedding stock after about ten days began to show new life and kept on improving. With the existing lack of help, instead of giving thousands of 3½-inch Geraniums a final shift, three light doses of "New Life" were applied and I am more than pleased with the outcome.

Sincerely yours, FRITZ BAHR.

Greenhouse Heating

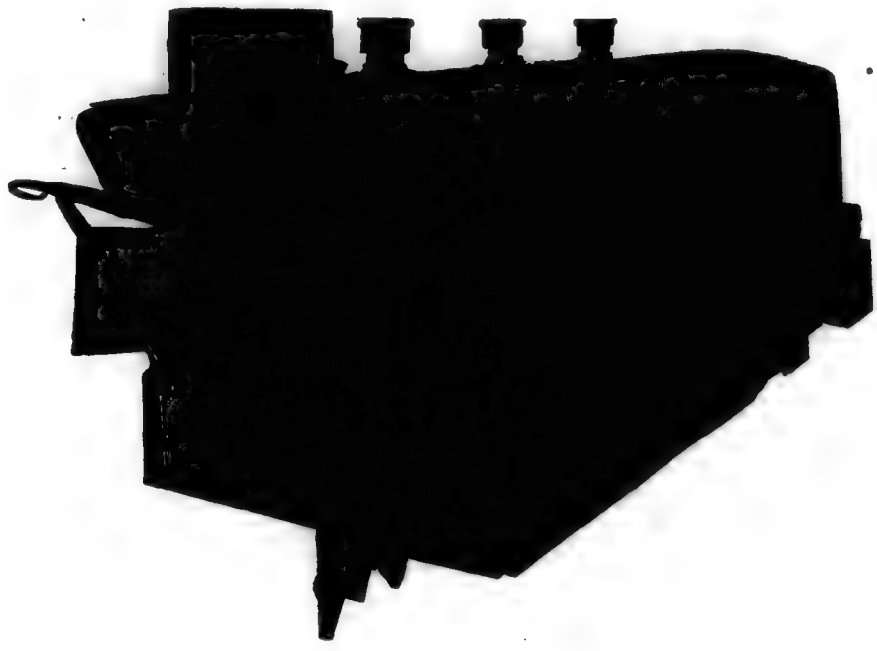
SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

A RANGE OF FOUR HOUSES.

Will you kindly advise me about the piping of a range of four houses which I intend to build this season? As indicated in the sketch which I am enclosing, the houses all run east and west. House No. 1 is at the south side of the range and is 21x72. It is twelve feet high to the ridge. The south wall is six feet high and consists of wood, except the upper thirty inches, which are glass. Will eight ¾-inch steam pipes, four on each side wall, heat this house to 55 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero, or should I use 1-inch pipe? The house is divided into two sections by an aisle that crosses it at the center. Directly north of the aisle are the boiler room and office. I am planning to run a 3-inch feed pipe crosswise of the house, above the aisle, so I can add to the house when necessary.

East of the boiler room and north of house No. 1 is No. 2, which is 12x50 and eleven feet high to the ridge, with thirty inches of glass in the partition. The partition is six feet high and of the same construction as the outside wall of house No. 1. Will four ¾-inch pipes, two on each wall, heat this house to 60 degrees? House No. 3 is north of No. 2 and is of the same dimensions and construction, except that the north wall is all wood and is eight feet high. The desired temperature also is the same—60 degrees. West of the boiler room and north of house No. 1 is No. 4, which is 14x30 and twelve feet high to the ridge, with thirty inches of glass all around, in the 6-foot wall. This will naturally be the coldest house, being at the northwest corner. It will be run at a temperature of 55 degrees, with the piping on the walls.

My boiler is an American Ideal sectional, marked 6-22. I am using it now as a hot water boiler. Can I change it to a steam boiler and, after adding one or two sections, use it to heat the whole range of houses, which are all connected? Steam at low pressure, say ten pounds, would be used. The boiler will be in a cellar, seven and one-half feet deep, under the office. W. A.—Wis.



The sketch shows that house No. 1 has only the south side and two end walls exposed. In house No. 2 one end and about twenty-five feet of the south wall are exposed. House No. 4 has the north side and one end wall exposed. All the other walls are protected either by the workroom or by the other houses, except the east end of house No. 3 and its north wall of boards.

Instead of using ¾-inch pipes for the coils, we would suggest the use of 1-inch pipes, and if they were more than

THE KROESCHELL HOT WATER BOILER

Here is the boiler that is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists and gardeners who have used other makes are constantly giving the KROESCHELL Greenhouse Boiler the highest praise.

3,974,605 square feet of glass was equipped with KROESCHELL Boilers during 1916-1917. You will find the KROESCHELL in every State in the Union and Canada. The supremacy of KROESCHELL Boilers is proved by their country-wide adoption.

Every boiler made at our works is of the highest standard. Material—governed by Kroeschell specifications—the best that money and brains can produce. Workmanship—the kind that is an inspiration to all boiler makers. Boiler efficiency—determined by actual tests under working conditions. Boiler ratings—honest and true blue—guaranteed actual working capacities.

The superiority of our boilers has resulted in the removal and abolishment of hundreds of sectional cast-iron boilers. In every instance KROESCHELL BOILERS give more heat with the same piping and with less fuel.

Mr. J. B. Bernhard,

Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:

Answering your inquiry regarding one of your BERNHARD BOILERS installed in my greenhouse, beg to say it has given the best of satisfaction. I had it installed alongside one of another make and found it to be a very superior article, doing all that was claimed for it in every particular.

To refresh your memory, I bought this boiler in the fall of 1915, and two years later bought another one of your make, and expect to buy more in the near future.

I can certainly recommend it to any one for either Greenhouse or Residence heating. It has given results that I have been more than pleased with.

You are at liberty to use this letter in any way you may see fit.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) ERNST MUELLER.

100 feet in length we would prefer 1¼-inch pipes.

As the cross aisle, in which the feed pipe to house No. 1 is carried, divides it into two parts, each about thirty-four feet in length, separate coils should be provided for each section. To supply the coils in each half of the house, we would run a 1½-inch pipe about three feet under the ridge from the main feed pipe to each end of the house. There is a door at each end of all of the houses, and we would start all of the coils at either side of each of the doors at the exposed ends of the houses. The coils should run to the corners of the house and then along the side walls to the boiler end of the house. Each coil should be fed by a 1¼-inch pipe taken off from the end of the 1½-inch supply pipe.

Whether beds or benches are to be used is not stated, but in case the plants are to be grown on benches we would arrange the piping to provide bottom heat under each bench. We infer that there are three benches or beds in house No. 1 and two in each of the other houses. With wall coils beginning at the door in house No. 1, we would use, for 55 degrees, four 1-inch pipes in the coils on the south wall and three on the north, with four pipes under the middle bench or benches. These can be supplied by 1¼-inch pipes taken off from the 1½-inch supply pipe overhead. If solid beds are to be used in this house, or if bottom heat is not desired, we would use six 1-inch pipes on the south wall and five on the north.

In houses 2 and 3, in addition to the 1½-inch supply pipe overhead, we would use three 1-inch pipes in each of the wall coils, beginning at the end door, for 60 degrees. Since house No. 4 has glass in the north wall and is more exposed to cold winds, besides being 2 feet wider, we would suggest the same number and arrangement of pipes, although the temperature is to be only 55 degrees.

To adapt a hot water boiler for use with steam, it will be necessary to add a steam dome, and provide a water column, steam gauge, safety valve, etc. The addition of a steam dome and one other section would slightly increase the fire surface of the boiler, but to heat the houses described the boiler should be rated for 800 square feet of steam radiation, which is altogether too much for an Ideal 6-22, even with additional sections. Single-strength pipe may be used, but we would avoid any zigzag arrangement of the piping.

Aberdeen, S. D.—The Easter window display of B. F. Siebrecht attracted considerable attention and favorable comment.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A notice was printed in the local newspapers by the Minneapolis Florists' Club, just before Easter, recommending that hydrangeas, roses and spiræas be purchased for the holiday, instead of Easter lilies. The notice explained the reason for the shortage of Easter lilies and described these flowers as being of inferior quality and expensive.

JACOBS BUILT TO LAST GREENHOUSES

HOTBED SASH MATERIALS AND GLASS | PRICES AND PLANS SUBMITTED | 1365-1379 FLUSHING AVENUE BROOKLYN, N. Y.

ALBANY, N. Y.

All of the Albany florists report excellent Easter business. The weather on the preceding day being fine, the public came to the flower stores in large numbers. Flowers and plants of every description were cleaned up in good shape.

Among the plants seen in the stores this year were some excellent bougainvilleas, trained in different shapes. Hydrangeas and rambler roses were in great profusion and all were well grown and in good condition for Easter. Azaleas were not much in evidence, but other plants were to be had, so the lack of azaleas was not felt so much as expected.

To start off the week, F. A. Danker had his usual Palm Sunday flower show at his greenhouses on Central avenue, and it was a show worth seeing. There is no doubt that this kind of thing is of great benefit to the trade at large.

Prices ranged as follows: Lilies in pots, 75 cents per bloom; other flowering plants, from $1 to $25; violets, $3 and $4 per hundred; sweet peas, $8 per hundred; orchids, $1.50 to $2.50 each; American Beauties, $12 and up per dozen; carnations, $2 and $2.50 per dozen; valley, $3 per dozen; tulips, $1.50; narcissi, $1.50; daffodils, $1.50 and $2; roses, from $3 to $10 per dozen, according to variety.

Probably one of the things that helped to make business so good was the advertising campaign of the Albany Retail Florists' Association, which began Palm Sunday.

The next big flower day is Mothers' day and the local florists hope to make it the best Mothers' day ever. Albany florists are going to feature roses and sweet peas this year for Mothers' day and try to get the public away from the idea that the carnation is the only flower for that day.

F. A. Danker is around again after being confined to his home for about two weeks by illness. H. M.

Business is good. Funeral work continues heavy. A number of weddings and social events keep everybody busy. Flowers are in good supply.

A heavy frost played havoc with outdoor stock April 26. The low temperature during the last week is a record for this locality.

Various Notes.

The Evansville Nurseries and the William Halbrooks greenhouses, where the temperature fell to 22 degrees, report severe damage to much stock.

At Elspermann's, only a little damage was done, as everything was under cover except a few geraniums.

Royston & Fenton lost about 300 Easter Greetings in 2½-inch pots, which were just potted and set outside, as well as a few geraniums.

Theodore Kuebler lost over 1,000 tomato plants, which were fruiting in the field.

The truck gardeners report heavy damage to strawberries, grapes, etc. They think fruit trees were too well advanced to be hurt much. E. L. F.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

"Our Easter egg hatched out a golden chick," was the reply of Conrad C. Gindra, of this city, to the inquiry as to how the glad season found our worthy confrere. "I do not remember one that eclipsed it and its best feature was that the dear public seemed so easily pleased. Of course, it follows that they discriminated to some extent, but as long as a plant was made attractive and offered at a figure not too exorbitant, it went."

A special feature was a batch of fifty lilacs, big bushes, planted outdoors in pots, and left until there was danger of frost cracking the pots. They were then brought inside, frozen roots and all, and put in heat two weeks before Easter. The result was the finest crop of blooms one could wish to see.

Another successful experiment was the forcing of tree peonies, something hitherto believed untried.

"We sold one plant for a ten spot," observed Mr. Gindra, "so you may judge how good it was. An increase in the wearing of corsage bouquets by the Vassar girls and the natives used up large quantities of sweet peas and roses.

"It was pleasing to note, also, the increase in telegraphic orders.

"And now for a breathing spell, preparatory to the planting-out season, which promises also to be a record-breaker, in which the orange-scarlet seedling geranium, Friendship, and the new scarlet salvia, America, will shine brilliantly as leaders in our list of bedding plants." W. M.

NEBELASTIC

For Glazing, Reglazing and Repair Work on Greenhouses and Sash

NEBELASTIC is noted for its wonderful elasticity. It is lasting and durable. There's no need of going back on the same job where NEBELASTIC is once used.

NEBELASTIC will outlast putty from three to four times. It is the only product of this nature that can easily be removed after it has been in service for several years. Do not confuse NEBELASTIC with similar cements that get hard and brittle after a year or two of exposure. NEBELASTIC sets up tough, but never gets brittle.

NEBELASTIC contracts and expands with your greenhouses, thereby eliminating broken glass to a minimum. We and our agents sell NEBELASTIC on a money back guarantee. NEBELASTIC is black. It is put up in the following size packages:

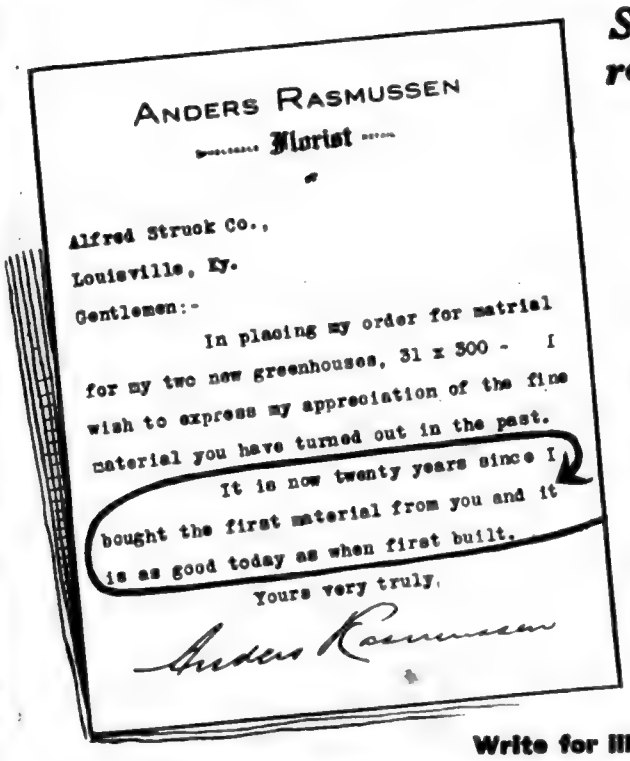
NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Late reports show that most Newark florists had an exceptionally good Easter trade. Some of them pronounce this year's Easter business the best they have ever had, and this notwithstanding unusually high prices.

During the war many persons made more money than they ever did before, but with the many calls for war funds, they did not feel that they should spend it for so-called luxuries. Now that the fighting is over, they spend more freely on such occasions as Easter and do not question the high prices as they formerly did.

Various Notes.



Charles E. Maillard, 516 Orange street, reports the biggest Easter trade he ever had. In order to make sure of enough flowers for his Sunday orders, he had to curtail his Saturday sales at 5 p. m.

Charles Trauth, 475 Orange street, was another florist whose stock was cleaned out on Easter. He had put in an extra large stock. R. B. M.

WAYNESBORO, PA.

Easter business was excellent. L. C. Happel had many hyacinths. Henry Eichholz had an extra large cut of sweet peas and carnations, as well as a large stock of Easter plants. Both were sold out by noon of the day before Easter. Marguerite Truxal, 14 years old, contributed to a local newspaper a poem, "Say it with Flowers," and this no doubt helped to increase business.

Candles vs. Tungstens

Some men are still satisfied with candles; others use oil lamps, while still others get along with carbon filament incandescent lights. But the man who studies illumination equips his plant with nitrogen-tungsten lamps.

Some greenhouse owners are satisfied with ordinary putty on their glass, and some have arrived at a point where they use a liquid putty of better grade. Others are using the more efficient black plastic cements of various manufacture, but the greenhouse owner who wants the highest degree of efficiency, uses

FEDERAL GREENHOUSE CEMENT

Modern Cement

For Modern Greenhouses

We make the following Black Greenhouse Cements:

Federal Greenhouse Cement No. 1.—Thick paste consistency, especially adapted for use on metal, slate, composition and other roofs, and for effecting general repairs. Some florists use this consistency for glazing, although it is rather hard to apply, because it works stiff. It can be handled fairly well, however, in the greenhouse gun.

Federal Greenhouse Cement No. 2, or Regular.—A medium thick consistency. We consider this the ideal consistency for glazing work, not too thick nor too thin. Can be used in greenhouse gun, putty bulb, or other instruments. Those who prefer a slightly thinner consistency can thin with Federal Special Greenhouse Thinner.

Federal Greenhouse Cement No. 3.—Semi-liquid consistency, especially adapted for lining gutters, etc. Last year we sent out this consistency for glazing work in general, and many florists prefer it. It of course works very easy in the putty bulb. We believe it is a little too thin for glazing, and consider No. 2 better.

Federal Greenhouse Cement No. 4.—Made on a different base, from the products of wood distillation. This cement is similar—in fact identical with certain competing brands of greenhouse cement on the market. Some florists prefer this base. We do not consider it nearly as permanent as No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3.

Federal Greenhouse Cement No. 5 and No. 6.—Respectively paste and semi-liquid, made on a gilsonite base. Very quick setting and efficient; preferred by carnation and rose growers, but not quite as good for general work as No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3.

Federal Greenhouse Thinner, in 10, 5 and 1-gallon cans, is an excellent article to keep on hand to restore cement not used at once, to just the consistency that you like, in case the cement thickens somewhat.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

"Everything sold but the linoleum, and that could have been sold had there been flowers on it," is an apt description of this year's Easter trade, given in the words of a local florist.

Everybody cleaned up, retailers as well as wholesalers. There never was such an Easter as this. It was unusual in a number of ways. Lilies were not plentiful, except in one section of the city, but instead of losing sales because they had no lilies, florists sold anything and everything in plants and cut flowers. The sale of corsages was extraordinarily good.

The few lilies that were in evidence sold at retail prices, bringing 50 to 75 cents a bloom. Azaleas were few, but of good quality. There was a wealth of hydrangeas, ramblers, white and yellow callas, and a variety of other plants.

The downtown stores were cleaned up on stock Saturday afternoon.

Prices were moderate, compared with Christmas, and this gave persons in moderate circumstances a chance to buy.

Various Notes.

All this week the trucks of the W. L. Rock Flower Co. bore big white banners with the words, "Finish the Job—Buy Bonds," in red letters. W. L. Rock is one of the active workers in the Victory loan campaign. Alpha Elberfield also is an enthusiastic worker.

Albert Edward Austin, 30 years old, son of J. Austin, florist, died of pneumonia Saturday evening, April 19. The young man had been ill, but seemed to be getting better, and was up and around when he suffered a relapse. Funeral services were held April 23. Besides his father, Mr. Austin is survived by a brother, Arthur, who is now on his way home from France.

Among the visitors in the city this week were: H. T. Smith, of the Pinehurst Gardens Co., Pleasant Hill, Mo.; Leonard Coen, Lexington, Mo., and J. C. Steinhauser, Pittsburg, Kan.

W. Tredup, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, called on the local trade last week.

Russell P. Hardy, who was a lieutenant in the 27th Division, 104th Field Artillery, and who was in France a year, has returned home, having been released from service. He is a son of Mrs. K. Hardy, of the Hardy & Bernard Floral Co., Kansas City, Kan. J. E. K.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Easter business was far beyond expectations this year. While it was expected to be unusually good, none of the florists dreamed of having such a large increase in the number and size of sales. It is evident that the florists' business is growing in Knoxville and vicinity, and an allowance is made for a reasonable increase each year, but no one expected to have a fifty per cent increase over last year. The increase can be attributed both to a larger number of customers and an advance in prices.

Easter lilies were unusually scarce. Roses brought from $3 to $15 per dozen; carnations, from $3 to $4 per dozen; sweet peas, $4 per hundred; orchids, $2 each; Darwin tulips, $1 and $2 per dozen; cut hyacinths, $3 per dozen; lilies of the valley, $2 per dozen; cut Easter lilies, $6 per dozen.

There were a number of Easter lilies, but they were smaller and shorter than usual. Lilium candidum in pots were used as substitutes in many cases for the usual giganteum and Harrisii varieties.

On account of Easter coming so late, there was some anxiety among the growers as to whether they could time their stock just right, but, with the exception of two or three instances, everything was on time and in good shape.

The shortage of azaleas and rhododendrons was felt to some extent. What few azaleas there were, brought good prices.

In general, there was not an oversupply of any one variety of plants. Spiræas were the most plentiful and there were a few left over, but they were good sellers at $3 to $6 each. Hydrangeas were extra fine and sold at $4 to $6 each; hyacinths and tulips in pots sold well at $1.50 to $5 per pot. There were a good number of made-up baskets of plants and but few of them were left over.

It was noticeable this Easter that trade began much earlier than usual and came more steadily, thus giving the florists more time to take care of the orders and eliminating a great deal of the usual rush.

Trade has kept up well since Easter and, although there has been an abundance of stock, none of it has gone to waste. R. E. M.

PELARGONIUMS

PELARGONIUMS.
It's the "come-back" that builds up the big business and here's a "come-back" on the quality of stock you get when you place your order with us:

Logan, O., Jan. 27th, 1919
C. L. Humphrey, Zanesville, O.
Dear Sir: The pelargoniums shipped us arrived in fine condition, and to say the least, they just suited us. We are enclosing check for which please ship us as before, by Adams Express Co., 200 Pelargoniums Easter Greeting, 2¼-in. pots.
Yours very respectfully,
Gompf's Greenhouses.

We have a lot of fine 2½-in. Easter Greeting, ready to move up in 4-in. pots and will make you big money for Decoration Day, and our price is $12.00 per 100. Cash.

C. L. HUMPHREY,
ZANESVILLE, OHIO.

Don't forget we were the first to offer Easter Greeting in The Review, in 1914. We were so particular with the stock we shipped and the packing, in three years, that a very large trade comes to us automatically without advertising. We are now in the market with an elegant stock of 4-in. E. G. grown especially for Mothers' Day and later. This stock is vigorous, low down, all branched and well set with bud. Not a flower has yet bloomed out—everything ahead—a very desirable feature, and a condition difficult to secure at this season. We offer this stock at 20c each in any quantity, and we know it will make you quick money. S. C. Templin & Son, Easter Greeting Specialist, Garrettsville, O.

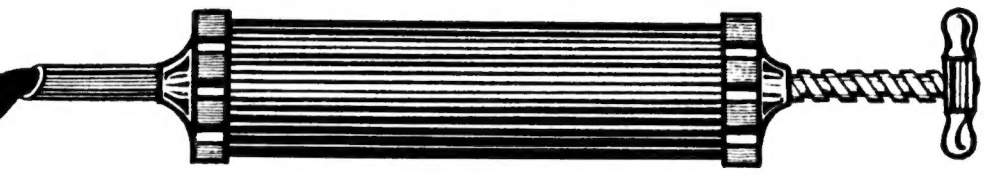
Permanite

He knew something good when he saw Permanite

George Holst, Jr., nurseryman and florist of Flushing, L. I., "discovered" Permanite at the plant of Adam J. Greener, Woodside, L. I. Mr. Greener, an enthusiastic Permanite user, told Mr. Holst what he thought about the material, showed him just where he had used the Permanite—and shortly after that Mr. Holst wrote us as follows:

> "The writer happened to be at Mr. Greener's houses the other day and looked over some of the houses glazed with your Permanite. Mr. Greener spoke so highly of your Permanite and the work done with it appeared so satisfactory to us, that we decided right there and then to get in touch with you and get a supply for our own use. Among other things, Mr. Greener mentioned that some of his houses, which were glazed with Permanite several years ago, were still in perfectly tight condition and had the appearance of lasting a lifetime.
> "Please quote us prices, as we want to get a barrel right away."



Permanite, that ever-elastic glazing cement, can be used for glazing, re-glazing or repair work of any kind; it is as good for one purpose as it is for another. On new work Permanite does away with the usual bedding—the Permanite on top the glass making an absolutely air and water-tight joint; on old work Permanite is far more economical than putty—doing the work with less material and in less than half the time—and when it comes to mending broken glass, repairs of any kind, etc., Permanite will do the work quickly, efficiently and economically.

Ever-elastic and lasting—guaranteed to outlast putty three to four times—Permanite is the ONE SURE WAY toward better, more economical and dependable glazing; write for our latest four-page folder—it will show you how—and why!

Yours for a tight house

Louisville, Ky.—A protest against the plant quarantine will be sent to Washington by the florists of this city, it was decided at a recent meeting.

—now then,

You can kill two birds with one stone at Pana.

Come and see the AGMCO plant and the A. N. Nielsen greenhouses at the same time.

You can see the Big House and the scientific AGMCO 409-inch type. Study the steel frame and the pipe frame. Look them over critically and then let us tell you the inside story of their design.

Then you will thoroughly enjoy going through the big steel shop, the warehouse and the great machine room.

When may we expect a visit from you?

Sales Offices:

Pronounced Agemco AGMCO Every House A Gem

AGMCO

"The Carnations Have Stems On Them As Stiff As Pencils."

The above remark was made recently by a well-known grower. We were speaking of the relative merits of the narrow and wide greenhouses and he pointed to the stock in his wide houses and then showed the Carnations in the narrow houses, which had the same care and attention.

There surely was a difference.

Look over the above cut carefully. It is very wide for a pipe frame house, but with our new style "Bolted-Thru-The-Pipe" steel connections, it is amply strong to stand the winter's snows and storms.

Write for estimate on your greenhouse requirements. Do it quickly, for the season is advancing.
